If you have a good name as a grower you can stand a lily failure once without losing much trade; but no matter how good your reputation or what excuse you offer, you can't stand it twice in succession.

Now about one-half of the Easter lily failures are due to inferior bulbs and the other half in the handling. You can greatly increase your blooming average by buying only the very best bulbs—good clean stock from vigorous fields—and giving them attention. No grower can be successful in the long run with cheap bulbs, for good bulbs are not generally cheap.

You can't buy a better grade than the Superior Assortment Horseshoe Brand Giganteum 7/9 and they are $22.50 per case of 300 or $9.00 per case of 100 bulbs. If you want we will reserve bulbs in Cold Storage for you and ship them any time during 1911, charging you only a very nominal fee for storage.

You may have a catalogue for the asking and it is worth your while to ask.

TO FLOWER POINSETTIAS.

I have some poinsettias which were received last year too late for Christmas. In fact, they have never bloomed. They are now strong, sturdy plants, from twelve to twenty-four inches high, well foliaged, but are planted singly in 4-inch pots. Can I bloom them successfully without shifting to larger sized pots? The pots are well filled with roots and the bracts seem to be forming.

C. P. N.

Four-inch pots are pretty small to flower poinsettias in. You cannot expect bracts of much size in so small pots. It is not too late to give them a shift into 5½-inch or 6-inch pots. Be careful to disturb the roots as little as possible. Use for compost two-thirds loam and one-third well decayed manure, preferably cow manure, also adding some sharp sand. After potting, let the plants have a house with a night temperature of 50 degrees. Increase this 10 degrees as the bracts start to form. You could, if you wished, plant out your stock in a bench in four or five inches of soil, and if you have a spare bench, the requisite heat, and want the bracts for cutting, this plan would be the easiest to adopt.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THERE are none too many peonies in this country—only too many of certain kinds that may be described as obsolete.

W. L. E. GREEN, proprietor of the Kearney Nurseries, Kearney, Neb., has put up a storage building capable of housing the greater part of his stock for spring delivery.

J. GEO. BOWYER, formerly proprietor of the Harlingen Sub-tropical Nursery, at Harlingen, Tex., has now purchased an interest in Griffing's Semi-tropic Nurseries, at McAllen, Tex.

THE nurseries of the late W. B. Whittier, Framingham, Mass., have been purchased by W. H. Wyman, of the Bay State Nurseries, North Abington, Mass. They will be operated under the old title, W. B. Whittier & Co., and independently of the North Abington nurseries. Mrs. Whittier has sold all her interest in the nurseries. This purchase will make Mr. Wyman's nurseries the largest in New England and among the most extensive in the east.

NURSERIES OF MISSOURI.

"With the largest plant nursery in the world within its borders and an output of nursery products for 1909 valued at nearly $2,000,000, the indications are that Missouri ranks second or third among the states for this class of commodities," says Labor Commissioner J. C. A. Miller, in the 1910 Red Book of the Missouri State Bureau of Labor Statistics.

"The 114 counties of Missouri last year placed on the market nursery products to the value of $1,570,547. When the output of the greenhouses of St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph are added, valued, in round numbers, at about $400,000, it will be found that the total worth for the whole state was $1,970,547, a neat sum considering that the nurseries are now common to every farming community."

Properly divided according to classes, the 1909 products of nurseries outside of St. Louis, Kansas City and St. Joseph, as figured out by Supervising Statistician Arch T. Edmonston, of the labor bureau, were: Cut flowers, valued at $526,147; strawberry plants, 2,100,000, valued at $42,000; miscellaneous nursery stock, valued at $1,002,400.

Pike county, which contains the largest nursery in the world, led the other counties with an output which was worth $746,951. St. Louis county nurseries placed on the market plants and cut flowers to the value of $76,300, exclusive, of course, of the output of the greenhouses and gardens of the city.

A BLUE ROSE

Rose Novelty of the Century

It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.

The New Rambler (Violet Blue), hailed by the German rose growers as the forerunner of a genuinely cornflower blue rose, is a seedling of Crimson Rambler, very vigorous and hardy, and free blooming.

What an Expert Says About "Festiva Maxima" Peony

Mr. Fr. Bahr, of Highland Park, Ill., recognized as an authority on matters horticultural, says as follows:

"What a wonderful variety Peony Festiva maxima is for the florist! To my mind we haven't anything to beat it, no matter what the color or size, and if you are going to make up a list for planting out this fall, which, by the way, is really the best time of the year to plant Peonies, don't overlook Festiva maxima. As far as I can find out, this wonderful Peony was offered by Mieliez in 1851, and has been 'queen supreme' ever since. I had the pleasure of seeing a field of it in bloom at a nursery in Chicago. What a sight—blooms almost eight inches across, with over four-foot stems! Of all the many other varieties in bloom at the same time surrounding it none of them impressed me as much. You cannot invest in anything that will bring better returns. There are the flowers, which, when well done, bring good prices, and the plants will increase in value from year to year. I don't know of anything one could plant which would pay better. Therefore, if you intend planting out one thousand plants this fall, order seven hundred Festiva maxima."

News Note

[From The Review, issue of Oct. 13, 1910.]

"Large numbers of florists who grow for their own retail trade are this season planting patches of Peonies of the better cut flower varieties."

(Enough Said)

The "up-to-date" florist who has a piece of spare ground is planting Peonies. They are not only extremely useful as cut flowers, but there is also a good profit in selling the roots to your customers, and which invariably insure a standing advertisement for you in other lines. We have just received a large consignment of the grand variety

Jasper county also holds high rank for its annual surplus of nursery products, the worth of the 1909 crop being $82,000. This county is the center of strawberry plant culture, leading all other counties in this respect.

Every Missouri nursery annually places many flowers on the market, but Cass county holds, and for many years has held, the lead in this respect. Railroad figures from there covering 1909 show that the shipments of cut and other kinds of flowers for that year weighed 798,663 pounds, and that their worth was $399,337. St. Louis, Jackson, Jasper, Greene, Buchanan, Pettis, Cole and Cape Girardeau counties also marketed many thousand pounds of flowers.

TREATMENT FOR HOLLOW TREE.

Will you tell me what to do with a tree that has rotted at the heart until there is but a rim about five inches thick left? There is an opening on one side about eight inches wide that extends up the tree about ten feet, starting at the ground, and the edges of the opening are healed and barked over, and the tree looks healthy. The rotten part extends inside the tree about four feet above the opening. Should it be scraped and filled with cement?

G. G.

Scrape away all decayed matter in the opening and chisel out all the rotted portion above the opening and clean it out well. Trees in an even worse condition than yours have been saved, and there is no reason whatever why yours cannot be made to grow for many years. Instead of using cement entirely, you can fill the opening with stones, cementing them as you go along and leaving the front facing to be done last. When all is finished, give the surface a dressing of coal tar. Any wounds can also be dressed with coal tar, previously cutting a smooth surface for it. Tar is a splendid preservative and cleanser, and keeps water from soaking through the cracks into the hearts of trees. For the inside of the tree among the stones, one part Portland cement to three parts sand will do, but for facing the work we would make it equal parts of cement and sand.

PACIFIC COAST.

FLORISTS on the Pacific coast will be specially interested in the illustrations from photographs showing the new store at Seattle of the Hollywood Gardens. These appear on page 8, as there is not space under this heading.

THE Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association may hold its next annual meeting in Los Angeles, Cal., the convention league having started a campaign to this end. George C. Roeding, of the Faneher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, Cal., is president of the association.

SEATTLE.

The Market.

For the last week we have had rain almost every day, which indicates that the rainy season is at hand. The florists look forward to this season with pleasure, for the rain does away with all the outside stock which grows in such abundance here.

There has been a scarcity of carnations and roses for a week or so and mums are not plentiful yet. A few shipments of California violets have been received, but the stock is too soft to ship well. Some of the florists are showing some home-grown violets, but the supply is decidedly limited.

Autumn foliage is taking the place of flowers for decorating in a great many of the shop windows. The foliage here is exceptionally fine.

Various Notes.

The Hollywood Gardens put their new auto delivery car on the streets October 6. It attracts attention everywhere it goes.

The H. Harrington Co. is showing some fine orchids and home-grown violets. The firm is cutting about twenty-five cattleyas a day and expects to increase the cut toward Christmas.

Miss Burns, of the Woodland Seed & Floral Co., reports that they are cutting some fine mums.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy has been visiting in Portland, Ore., for several weeks. She reports that business is good down there.

J. A. Balmer, of Cle Elum, Wash., spent a few days here in the last part of September. He ordered materials for some new houses which he expects to build soon.

Frank Sault, of Indianapolis, Ind., has been in the city several days. He expects to locate at Tacoma. T. B. P.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Business continues fair, with sudden spurts in the line of funeral work every few days. We have had a shower or two each day recently, which is quite unusual for this climate at this time of the year. There has been no damage reported, however, and it has the advantage of laying the dust, freshening outside stock in general and making violets more plentiful and of better color and substance than they have been at any time this season. Roses and carnations are daily getting more plentiful and better stemmed, but the price charged at wholesale remains about the same. There will be no advance in prices on any lines of stock until we have colder weather. The price of violets shows a slight decrease and the same can be said of outside mums. Valley is much more plentiful and of better quality than stock grown during the summer. Other kinds of flowers are about as usual.

Various Notes.

The Piedmont Floral Co., of Oakland, has retired from the retail flower business, and closed its store on San Pablo avenue. S. K. Love, one of the proprietors, has accepted a situation with the H. M. Sanborn Co., of Oakland, in whose store he was formerly employed.

J. A. Carbone, the well known orchid grower of West Berkeley, has returned from a several months' trip to the eastern states, which he took both for recreation and business purposes.

Frank Martin is on a visit to the southern portion of the state and will be absent from town about two weeks.

OMAHA.

The Market.

Omaha is still on the map and a busy place for the retail florist. With the advance of autumn and colder weather, trade has opened up in full force. Stock is more abundant. Carnations are better. There are plenty of roses and chrysanthemums in the market. We have had our fall festivities, including the social ball at the Coliseum, October 7, which always is the grandest of the season and this year seemed to excel all others. The decorations were fine, consisting of a large number of large palms, wild smilax, asparagus and festooning, as well as American Beauties and chrysanthemums. There was an attendance of about 2,000. There was a marked increase in corsage and hand bouquets of orchids, valley and violets, as well as all kinds of roses.

Various Notes.

The Douglas county fair was held here in connection with the carnival, with fine displays of cut flowers and plants. L. Henderson, Paul Floth and A. Hooe made exhibits and carried away most of the prizes.

The Omaha Florists' Club held its annual meeting October 13 and elected officers as follows for the ensuing year: President, George Swoboda; vice-president, Oscar Herman; secretary, Lewis Henderson; treasurer, George Soransen; trustees, P. Floth, A. Hooe and Charley Green.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Floth gave their annual elaborate supper and entertainment October 6 to the Douglas county floral directors.

A. Hooe is busy completing a new greenhouse.

S. R. Faulkner is bringing in some fine violets and so is George Soransen.

ALBANY, N. Y.

Three new members were added to the list at the last meeting of the Albany Florists' Club. Tickets for the second annual flower show, to be held in the state armory in November, were distributed and a report of progress was made by the special committee in charge.

The evening was enlivened by discussions on trade subjects, in which many of the members took part. Chairman Frederick Goldring was able to throw considerable light upon carnation rot by reporting his personal observations. It is proposed to make the question box an important feature of every meeting.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business was rather quiet here last week, though funeral work was fair. Asters are gone, except a few small side blooms. Carnations are now of good quality. Wholesale prices stiffened during the last week or so. Carnations retail at 50 cents per dozen, good roses at $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen.

Some fine Killarneys are now coming in. Violets sell fairly well; 75 cents per hundred blooms is the general retail price. Snapdragons retail at 75 cents per dozen. Mums are now arriving in limited quantities; these sell at $2.50 per dozen, retail. A few gladioli are still to be seen. Candytuft, alysium and other fine white flowers help considerably. Greens are quite plentiful. There has been no frost up to date and everything is blooming outdoors. Dahlias are in full splendor.

Various Notes.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, Mass., has his new house, 42x162, all planted to carnations. He is commencing to cut early mums. He will have some nice plants for the holidays. A new No. 8 Kroeschell boiler helps to run the new range.

E. H. Chamberlain is back again, after being on the sick list.

Wm. P. Peirce is making some nice window displays these days. This establishment, since Julius Rositzsky took hold, is one of the most up-to-date and enterprising stores in this section.

Wm. H. Davenport has had some nice mums in his window lately.

Visitors: A. Leuthy, Roslindale, Mass.; Mr. Smith, of W. J. Boas & Co., Philadelphia, and Mr. Greenlaw, of the Pennock-Meehan Co. W. L.

Little Silver, N. J.—A new dahlia, originated by John T. Lovett, has been named for Miss Lillian Sexton, queen of the recent Asbury Park carnival.

WE TAKE THE LEAD!

IN WHAT?

WHAT A FOOLISH QUESTION!

Don't you know, haven't you heard of GODFREY ASCHMANN, the great importer and Philadelphia grower and shipper of this well-known ever-lasting green decorative plant, the Araucaria Excelsa Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca? We began 25 years ago with only 100 plants. Our 1910 importation is—and more will be coming this fall, after I make my selection of the choicest on my trip to Belgium, the growing district of the world for ARAUCARIAS, AZALEAS, PALMS, ETC.

WELL INFORMED. It is well known by the trade that for many years past I have gone personally to Belgium to select for our customers the best of Araucarias, Azaleas, Palms, etc. What bargains can be picked up there for cash!

EMPTY HOUSES WON'T PAY.

Now is your time to fill your empty houses with something that will grow into money for you while you sleep. Araucarias will do it. Please look at our special low prices for superior stock.

DREER'S HARDY PERENNIAL PHLOXES

We are the largest growers of Perennial Phlox in the world, having this season over a half million field-grown plants in stock. The collection offered below embraces every known color in this gorgeous race of summer-flowering plants, and we are prepared to furnish many of the later as well as the older standard varieties in large quantities at a low uniform price. The plants we offer are all strong one-year-old field-grown, and will make a fine display of flowers next season.

Albion (Medium). One of our own introductions; producing very large panicles of pure white flowers with a faint aniline-red eye.

Algae Adamson (Medium). Immense flowers, snow-white with red eye.

Bacchante (Tall). Tyrian rose, with crimson carmine eye.

Clara Benz (Dwarf). Lovely carmine-rose, with darker eye.

Colibri (Tall). White, with crimson carmine centre; very late.

Consul H. Trost (Medium). Pure red, with bright French purple eye.

Champs Elysees (Dwarf). A very bright rosy magenta of an effective shade.

Coquelicot (Dwarf). A fine pure scarlet, with crimson-red eye.

Diadem (Dwarf). A fine dwarf pure white.

Danton (Medium). Scarlet, with pure red eye.

Edmond Boissier (Dwarf). Bright reddish-violet, with large white halo.

Eclairer (Tall). Brilliant rosy magenta, with large lighter halo; an excellent variety.

Frau Dora Umgeller (Tall). Crimson red; a strong free-flowering late variety.

Gruppenkonigin (Tall). Delicate pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.

General Giovaninelli (Dwarf). Bright Tyrian rose, with light shadings at the base of each petal; a pure red eye; very effective.

General Van Hentz (Medium). Scarlet, with rose shadings and crimson-red eye.

Hermine (Dwarf). The dwarfest variety in our collection, never exceeding ten inches in height; pure white flowers of good size; early; unequalled for bordering; a perfect little gem.

PRICE: Any of the above General Collection, $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

Cocos Weddelliana

PTERIS WILSONI

This is the most decorative of all the Pteris, a handsome crested form which is just as useful as a specimen plant as any variety of Nephrolepis, and in a small size a most desirable variety for fern dishes. 2 1/4-in. pots, $3.50 per 100; 6-in. pans, $35.00 per 100.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA

5-in. pots, 10 to 12 inches high, 3 tiers.....$0.50 each

6-in. pots, 14 to 16 inches high, 3 tiers......60 each

La Vague (Medium). Pure mauve, with aniline-red eye.

Le Mahdi (Tall). Deep reddish violet, with darker eye.

La Foudre (Tall). Rich, glowing French purple, shading crimson.

Louise Abbema (Dwarf). Very large dwarf, pure white, of fine form.

Le Prophete (Dwarf). Bright violet-rose, large light halo and bright rose eye; fine.

Mme. Paul Dutrie (Tall). A delicate lilac-rose, reminding one of some of the beautiful soft pink Orchids. The flowers are very large and borne in panicles of immense size.

Mrs. Jenkins (Tall). The best tall early white for massing.

Obergartner Wittig (Medium). Bright magenta, with crimson-carmine eye; large flower and truss; one of the best.

Professor Virchow (Medium). Bright carmine, overlaid with orange scarlet.

Pantheon (Tall). Bright carmine rose.

R. P. Struthers (Tall). Rosy carmine, with claret-red eye; fine.

Sarabande (Medium). Reddish-violet, with lighter shadings.

Von Lassburg (Medium). The purest white in cultivation; individual flowers larger than any other white.

Our Fall Catalogue contains a complete list of seasonable stock. If you have no copy please ask for it.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Conditions remain about the same as last reported; some days there is a slump on the market and other days make up, and on the whole business is good, owing to the drawn out season before a killing frost. However, all are looking in vain for a frost to put an end to the outside supply, but the wish hasn't yet been gratified.

Roses, carnations and violets are good and the supply is plentiful, but not larger than the demand. Mums are coming in; fine yellow predominates, but good pink and white are seen and all sell well.

The Flower Show.

Great anticipation is felt as the show week approaches. As this is the first show ever held in the Twin Cities, much enthusiasm is shown, and all are working persistently to make it a success, not only financially, but also to show what can be done here. The show is expected to compete with the Chicago and Milwaukee shows, which are held the same week, and it is hoped that Chicago and Milwaukee visitors will extend their trips and look in on the show here.

The Twin Cities are up to the front in the flower world and command a good surrounding territory, and a great deal of interest should be shown us from all neighboring cities.

The committee in charge will spare no effort to give this show a reputation and perhaps bring the Twin Cities in line for a national show in the future. A good list of premiums has been arranged, and it is expected many eastern firms will be well represented.

The show will be held in Minneapolis at the Armory, November 9 to 13, inclusive.

Various Notes.

R. A. Latham furnished many roses and carnations for the opening of the Model store here. Mr. Latham spent the last week hunting in the northern part of the state.

Mrs. Whitted has just completed an ice chest, seventeen feet square, in mahogany, to correspond with the balance of the fixtures.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is bringing in exceptionally fine Harrisii lilies, of which they have a house full.

The monthly meeting of the State Florists' Society took place October 18, at which Prof. Ruggles, of the Minnesota state university, delivered an interesting talk on "Tree Borers."

These meetings should be better attended. C. R. F.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

Many of Your Customers Will Be Glad to Have Heacock's Well-Established Palms This Winter

Well-established; that's one of the big things in favor of Heacock's Palms, and explains why they succeed wherever grown from one side of the country to the other, even as far south as Mexico. Our Palms are a first-rate, all-the-year-round line for you to handle, and right now, when the demand is strong for good indoor stuff, Palms like this Kentia Belmoreana are bound to prove especially popular with your trade. At the price we are quoting, you can make a good profit handling them. The clean, healthy condition of this Palm is duplicated in every plant we send out—every one is vigorous, well-established, because grown here in our houses from the seed. We have a splendid stock and can ship on short notice. Order now—freight shipments cannot be safely made after cold weather, when all stock must go by express at a higher rate.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the best market strain of giant show and fancy pansies; largest, most perfect in form with greatest variety of rich and rare colors and markings. I have made a specialty of growing pansy seeds and plants nearly 40 years, and this strain is of most careful breeding and selection. It also contains all the new varieties introduced by foreign specialists during all these years. Samples of many reports—"If your pansies are as good this year as they were last, I will need double the amount next year." G. H. T., Detroit, Mich. "The pansy plants obtained from you last year were quite satisfactory. Book our order for 50,000 to be shipped in October." W. S. M., Supt. of Parks, Baltimore, Md. Over 60 varieties in mixed or separate colors, fine, stocky, field-grown plants, from my best selected seed, sown thinly in sandy soil broadcast, and extra well rooted, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash. Special prices on lots of 25,000 or more.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight P. O., Mass.

Giant pansies. Masterpiece, all colors; Bugnot, all colors; Mme. Perret, all colors; Prize Trimardeau, all colors; Orchid-flowered, Emperor William, Fire King, Snow Queen, Fairy Queen and our own specials. WINTERING TENDER AQUATICS.

Will you tell me the best method of wintering tender nymphæas, nelumbiums, water hyacinths and tulips in this Arkansas climate? I have been thinking of building cement basins under my greenhouse benches for this purpose. The plants are now in cement basins two feet deep, with one foot of soil in the bottom and about one foot of water. This is my first year's experience with water gardening and I should appreciate any information on the subject.
G. T. D.

Cement basins under the benches will answer well. There is no need to make them deep; twelve to fifteen inches is ample, placing six inches of aquatic soil in the bottom. You could build similar basins in a heated frame if you have such. If these can be kept at a minimum of 60 degrees, they will carry any of the nymphæas through nicely. We have seen them successfully wintered in an even lower temperature, but in the latter case a pipe in the water kept it moderately warm all the time. The nelumbiums should not need any winter protection in your climate. The Limncharis Humboldtii, or water poppy, and Eichhornia crassipes major, or water hyacinth, will winter in any metal or cement tank containing four to six inches of water.
C. W.

GENISTAS TURNING YELLOW.

I have a lot of Genista fragrans which grew nicely until about two months ago. I took cow manure and soaked in water and gave them a dose every two weeks. But since that time they have stopped growing and turned yellow, and some of them died. Can you give me some advice in this matter?
O. L. H.

You have undoubtedly given the genistas an overdose of manure water. All you can do now is to stop using it and stick to clear water. Genistas do not require any feeding at this season, and will not stand any such doses as soft-wooded plants. Manure water, when applied to genistas, acacias, ericas, camellias, etc., should be quite weak, and ought not to be applied at this season at all.
C. W.

PROPAGATION OF SPRENGERI.

Please tell me the best way of starting Asparagus Sprenger. Can it be started from cuttings?
J. G.

Asparagus Sprenger is usually propagated from seeds, which may be had from almost any of the larger seedsmen.

Greenhouse Heating.

THOSE interested in the methods of heating modern greenhouses should read the description of Joseph Heacock's new place on page 26 of this issue.

LEAK IN BOILER.

There is a small leak in our boiler, immediately over the fire. Do you think cast-iron borings and sal ammoniac would do the leak any good, or what would you suggest? D. & J.

If the leak is not too large it may be possible to stop it by using either iron filings and sal ammoniac, or litharge. The latter should be stirred up in glycerine, and after it has been applied to the leak it should be burned off with a torch. By making a number of applications a leak of considerable size may be stopped.

DEFECT IN HEATING SYSTEM.

I am sending you a diagram of our heating plant and should like to know whether you can see any defect in our system of piping. We are not getting satisfactory service from our boiler, which is supposed to heat 6,000 square feet of glass in zero weather. We have only 5,000 square feet of glass, as you will see by referring to the sketch, but we have difficulty in pushing the boiler so as to heat the houses, though we are located in southern New Orleans and have no zero temperature to contend with. We use soft coal and coke for fuel. D. & J.

The amount of glass is really something over 6,000 square feet, instead of 5,000 square feet as stated, as in estimating radiation the total amount of glass exposed is considered.

The sketch shows two houses 15x100 feet, and one house 20x100 feet. In each of the 15-foot houses there are two 2½-inch flows, three and one-half feet below the plates, and each flow supplies one return underneath. In the 20-foot house there are three flows and the same number of returns. It is evident that both flows and returns are below the top of the heater and the best results cannot be secured with the piping so arranged, unless a closed system is used. Even better results can be obtained by carrying the flow pipes at the level of the plates and raising the returns to within a foot of the bottom of the benches, or, if on the walls, placing them just under the flows.

A PARTITIONED GREENHOUSE.

Will you kindly give me some advice about the heating of my new greenhouse? It runs north and south and is sixteen feet wide. It has a total length of fifty-eight feet, but is divided into two rooms. The north room, eighteen feet long, is for violets; the south room, forty feet long, is for bedding plants, geraniums, etc. The larger room is three and a half feet high at the sides and six and a half feet high at the ridge. The smaller room is two feet high at the sides and five feet at the ridge, and the walk is sunk eighteen inches below the ground level, so as to provide room in walking. There is no glass except in the roof.

I intend using a Wilks upright boiler, 20x36. I thought of building a small boiler shed at the south end, and would prefer having the boiler on a level with the greenhouse, if expedient, on account of the ground being rather low, but I shall dig a pit if it is really necessary. Kindly give me definite plans for the piping, so as to have a temperature of 42 to 45 degrees in the violet house and 45 to 50 degrees in the other room. I am located in the western part of New York state. C. G. J. & S.

If the returns are not above the top of the boiler it is desirable to use a closed system, by putting on a riveted boiler-iron tank, with a water gauge on the side and a safety valve at the top. This will make it possible to heat the water considerably above the boiling

Save Your Stock From Destruction

By a sudden cold snap or a rapid thaw

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

point of water, and a rapid circulation can be secured. With this arrangement, one 2-inch flow under the ridge and four 2-inch returns on the side walls should maintain the temperature desired. Owing to the exposed glass in the end of the violet room, the temperature in that room will be 2 or 3 degrees less than in the other room.

PIPING IN ILLINOIS.

I am building two greenhouses, to be heated by steam, and will be thankful for any suggestions about the piping. One house is 21x100, twelve feet to the ridge and six feet to the gutters. The north wall is all lumber, but the south has thirty-two inches of glass and there is glass in the gables. The boiler will be at the west end of this house. The other house is 25x125 and thirteen feet to the ridge, and has 6-foot walls, with thirty-two inches of glass in both sides and glass in the gables. There is a space of fourteen feet between the houses. I shall use two flow pipes in each house, so I can hang them on the curlin supports. Kindly tell me what size the flow pipes should be for the two houses, and how many 1½-inch returns will be needed for a temperature of 60 degrees, with zero weather. I have raised benches and should like some returns on the walls and some under the benches.

I also should like to know how many horse-power the boiler must be, so I can heat two houses more, besides those I am just building. The additional houses would be the same size. How deep in the ground will it be necessary to set the boiler? Also, what size of pipes should I use for the main flow and main return? Should I use a separate main flow and main return for the houses I am building now, or can I have them big enough for the four houses? There is a good fall from the houses to the boiler.

 G. A. W.

To maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in a house that is 21x100 feet, with thirty-two inches of glass in one wall, it will be advisable to use a 2-inch flow and ten 1 1/4-inch returns; while the house that is 25x125 feet, with glass in both side walls, will require a 2 1/2-inch flow and twelve 1 1/4-inch returns.

For these two houses it will answer if a twenty horse-power boiler is used, but if two additional houses of the same size are to be heated the boiler should be of thirty-five or forty horse-power. For a gravity system the top of the boiler should, if possible, be three or four feet below the lowest part of the returns and if it cannot be at least two feet below the returns it will be advisable to use a steam trap or pump.

The best plan will be to put in mains sufficiently large for the additional houses which it is proposed to erect. For the four houses it will answer if a 3-inch flow and a 2-inch return are used.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business picked up generally in this vicinity during the last week. There were no large functions of any kind, nor large funerals, but just a healthy, seasonable improvement. Growers and storekeepers are now ready for the rush and numerous announcements for the coming month indicate a lively opening of the early trade.

Various Notes.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, is cutting some unusually fine cosmos, which finds ready sale.

John Gibson, of Newport, was a recent visitor in New York.

Thomas Curley is exceedingly busy. He had the decorations for the reception to the new rector of St. James Episcopal church, October 14, and those for the dedication of the new Italian

William B. Hazard has had a much larger volume of business since opening his store on Matthewson street.

William Crompton, of East Greenwich, had a large wedding decoration for October 15, in which lily of the valley, Richmond roses and yellow chrysanthemums predominated.

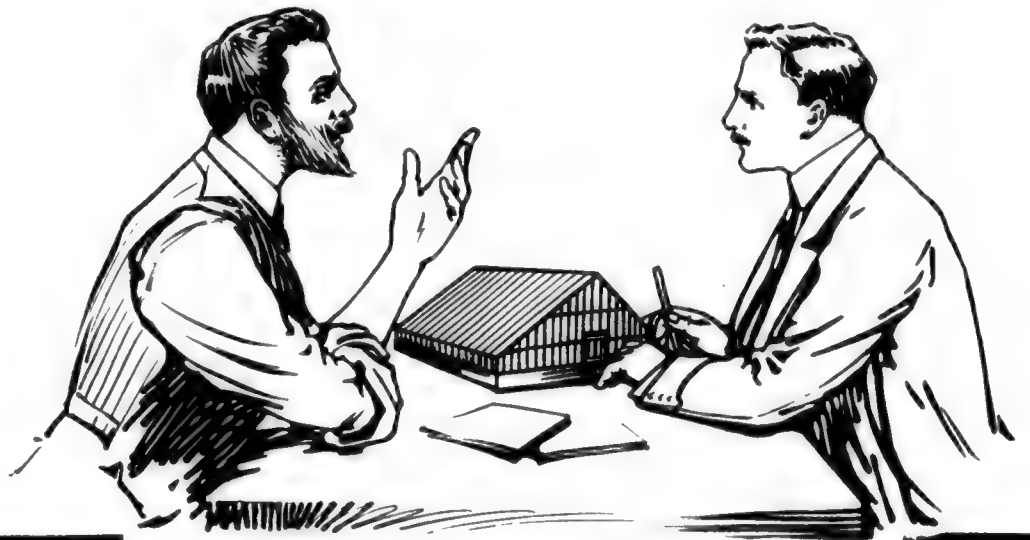

George H. Webb has been elected chairman and John J. Dunn secretary of the state conservation commission recently appointed by the General Assembly. One of the first things that the commission will take up will be the survey of the natural resources of the state and also the work of tabulating the abandoned farms, which the state board of agriculture has been working upon for about a year. W. H. M.

KINGSTON, N. Y.

Not to be outdone by the ambitious city across the Hudson, Valentine Burgevin's Sons are holding a flower show of their own. The store downtown is a creation of yellow crotons and mums, and the show house is filled with pot-grown mums, ranging from plants in 5-inch to those in 10-inch pots.

The Burgevins' new rose house, 56x135, is paying for itself with a return of 1,000 blooms per day. The new propagating house, 10x176, is being filled with 20,000 geranium cuttings. The valley house is planted with gardenias and bouvardia, all a picture of health. There is no frost at time of writing to destroy the gorgeous display of color in the beds surrounding this unique establishment.

William Williams is doing some rebuilding, and is arranging a show house fronting the street, with concrete walls and benches. He has built up a good business, handling birds and goldfish as a side issue. Birds and flowers harmonize. M.

Sit Down a Minute and Let's Talk it Over

Several years ago, when we began to hammer hard for the commercial man to get away from the all-wood house and build our Iron Frame House, you and your neighbor and the Village Whittler said we were "clean daffy." You declared that "such houses were all right for the private man with a mint of money, but never, no never would they be practical for the commercial grower." Did our smile come off, or did we say, "All right then, let's forget it"? Not for a minute! We knew we had the right idea, and that, sooner or later you wise men would recognize its worth.

A few years flew by, and Alexander Montgomery, F. R. & P. M. Pierson, J. A. Hudlong, and a few such men were buying our Iron Frame Houses—big ones too, for those times—big as 40 feet wide and even 700 feet long. Daring men those!

Another few years passed and a good many at last grudgingly admitted that wood houses must have the go-by, but still they gave in only half way and compromised matters by building our Semi-Iron Houses.

But there's no use trying to block the progress of a right idea, it just won't be blocked. Look what has happened. By far the greater number of the houses being put up by the growers today, are Iron Frame. Why? Simply because it is the dependable construction—the construction that's lightest—the construction that endures.

So ever and always will Lord & Burnham Co.'s name be linked with the success of the Sectional Iron Frame House—we are its originators.

If then, we built the first Iron Frame House, and have kept on building and improving them all these years, who ought now to know best, the best materials to go into them, and the best way of constructing them? There is only one logical answer, and you will be the first to give it. Having given it, when will you be ready to have us estimate?

P. S. Here's a thought—if you place your order for a house now, to be delivered next spring, thereby helping us to keep our factory wheels humming through the winter, it will lessen the cost all round to us, and we will give you the benefit of the saving.

P. S. P. S. Peter Henderson, the seedsmen, was the first to build our Commercial Iron Frame Houses.

ORANGE, N. J.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society, at its regular meeting, Friday evening, October 14, decided to hold its sixteenth annual chrysanthemum show in Lindsley's hall, 240 Main street, October 29, from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m. The silver cup donated by John R. Le Count, of Maplewood, N. J., will be competed for with twenty-four cut chrysanthemums, six varieties, four flowers of each, with not less than 18-inch stems. Competition is open to all. There will be twelve classes of chrysanthemums, as well as classes for orchids, roses, carnations, foliage plants, flowering plants, violets, fruits and vegetables.

An invitation was received from the Morris County Gardeners' Society to participate in its annual chrysanthemum show, to be held at Convent Station, November 2 to 4.

Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., had, as usual, a nice display of orchids on exhibition, for which they received 90 points; Albert F. Larson, gardener for A. B. Jenkins, roses, 95 points; Frank Drew, gardener for Mrs. Thos. Edison, roses, 95 points; William Reid, gardener for S. M. & A. Colgate, roses, 70 points; William Reid, carnations, 90 points, and white seedling carnation, not yet disseminated, 85 points; Max Schneider, gardener for Chas. Hathaway, carnations, 75 points; William Reid, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, 90 points, and Maranta splendida, 85 points.

Certificates were awarded for the following exhibits, not in competition for points: Chas. Ashmead, gardener for Mrs. Wm. Pierson, carnations; Albert Larson, roses and carnations; Frank Drew, roses; Max Schneider, chrysanthemums; Fritz Berglund, gardener for the Essex County Country Club, chrysanthemums and carnations.

The judges were John L. Collins, Edward Eccles and D. Kindsgrab.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

NEW YORK BELTING

PACKING CO. LTD
91-93 CHAMBERS ST. NEW YORK

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet.
An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Market conditions have been fair for the last week, and stock generally has cleaned up nicely, but at low prices. There are quantities of flowers of all kinds. Beauties and roses continue plentiful, with carnations coming in more abundantly every day. Chrysanthemums are coming in fast, and dahlias have been almost a glut; in fact, there is no shortage of anything. The weather has been so fine that if it continues it is liable to affect some of the early spring-blooming shrubbery. Apple trees are reported in bloom, and in some sections violets are in bloom in the field. One gardener near Kittanning picked thirty-two quarts of strawberries October 15, and says that if the weather continues good he will have a couple more pickings.

Various Notes.

E. C. Ludwig bought a farm a short time ago and was having the house remodeled when it caught fire, one day last week, and burned to the ground.

John Bader is in Virginia, looking over his farm, and the beginning of the fishing and hunting season always finds him ready.

P. S. Randolph and his sons also packed their guns and, with their dogs, are off to spend a short time in the woods.

Harvey Sheaf, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, last week had one of the most beautiful window displays ever seen in this city. Yellow crotons, with baskets of yellow and bronze dahlias, were used, tied with a two-toned ribbon. The shades of color in the baskets and dahlias and ribbons harmonized so as to produce an effect which caught the people.

Curved Eave House At Tuxedo

It's an even-span house with a lean-to at a lower level. Just the thing for this particular location. The gardener, Albert Fish, cracks up the way we build the curved eave house. That other house connected by the passage is also one of ours.

When you are ready to build, let's you and I talk it over.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

DINNER WORK.

It Interests the Public.

Did you ever notice how, at a flower show, the visitors, and especially the ladies, cluster around the decorated dinner tables and how closely they note each detail of flowers and their arrangement? There is nothing at a show that attracts so much attention from actual flower buyers as do the table decorations; it's a part of the show that means real business for the trade, because the women who are doing things get ideas they sooner or later carry out in their own homes. Not a few retailers in good locations find dinner work an important part of their business. Once let a hostess use flowers from a skillful florist when she has guests at table, and that hostess is pretty sure to become a regular customer—her board to her looks bare and inhospitable without the flowers.

An Example.

A good centerpiece is not expensive, nor is it difficult to make. The accompanying illustration, from a photograph of a table decoration arranged by Harve E. Lozier, Des Moines, Ia., is an excellent example; it may be varied to suit the size of the table and the depth of the purse of the customer. This centerpiece was made of Killarney roses and valley, with Adiantum Farleyense as the green needed in addition to the rose and valley foliage. The boutonnieres were small, consisting of a few sprays of valley backed by a frond of Farleyense.

But the special feature of the centerpiece is the fact that while it fills the center of the table, giving an effect as of abundance, it is not high enough to interfere with intercourse between the guests across the table. Plates were laid for twelve, so that in this case a large table and a large centerpiece were required, but for the largest or the smaller tables all that is required is to add to or take from the centerpiece, in no case adding greatly to its height. Where ladies are to dine they ordinarily are given corsage bunches of greater size than the boutonnieres for the men.

To Make a Centerpiece.

For the making of these centerpieces the article used by the best stores is the willow plateau sold by all the supply houses. The retailer usually carries these plateaux in stock in sizes from 10-inch to 36-inch, both round and oval. While an inventive maker-up can devise a number of substitutes that cost nothing, the plateaux are the only thing to use for good trade, and the expense is small, say from $1 a dozen to $1 apiece for the various sizes.

Line the willow base well, using tin-foil and paper. The lining is important, because if moisture comes through and soils the tablecloth your work will make anything but a favorable impression. With the lining well looked to, fill in with damp moss, damp enough to handle, but not so wet that you can wring moisture out of it, else you will be in danger. As you pack in the moss to the required shape and density, wind it firmly in place. For this some florists use any strong cord, but the better workmen use the stout green thread that now is sold so cheaply in satisfactory quality that hardly any store is without a supply; when used in design work it is almost invisible, even if not wholly covered. A layer of ferns goes over the moss on the plateaux.

If good, stiff-stemmed roses are used for the centerpiece no wiring is needed; all that one has to do is to cut the stems to the right length with a slanting cut that gives a sharp point that will readily penetrate the moss. If weak-stemmed roses are used, as for the less expensive class of centerpieces, it may be necessary to reinforce the stems with wire; or if short roses are used it may be desirable to lengthen some of them by wiring on a matchstick, in which case the green sticks always should be used. Such flowers as valley always must be stemmed and, unless the centerpiece is decidedly small, they must be stemmed on matchsticks instead of toothpicks, or they will not stand out among larger flowers, if any are used. The green also must be stemmed, in the majority of cases. There is nothing finer for this purpose than Farleyense, though more often one of the other adiantums is used.

Given a little opportunity, any skillful flower worker can make centerpieces all in the same general style but sufficiently different so that monotony will be avoided.

There is one point to be considered: A centerpiece so made is an exceedingly ephemeral affair; it can last only so long as the softest of the flowers used will endure in a warm room. Therefore such work is only to be made up as shortly as possible before the hour of actual use.

One of the effective ways for increasing interest in dinner work, and of getting orders for it, is to occasionally set a table in your window, using not only good flowers but the best napery you can procure; usually the dishes and silver can be borrowed from a merchant by putting his card on your display.

THE RETAILERS' TROUBLES.

[An extract from a paper by Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, Mass., read at a meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 18, 1910.]

As a body the retail florists mean to be fair, but I am sorry to say that some of them have contracted bad habits. In every large city you will find men who, the moment they find a neighbor in the way of obtaining a good order, will deliberately offer to do the work for so much less, regardless of what profit they can make, simply to get the business away from the neighbor. This is a serious drawback to the man who is doing a legitimate business. Unfortunately, it is a common practice all over the country. If these men would only stop to think, they would know that this practice is doing them no good and is hurting the customer, who naturally feels that he was imposed on at first, and who knows that he has been imposed on when he sees the order completed. I have seen many such orders, but never saw one that was satisfac-

Another trouble in the trade is that the average customer cannot understand the great difference in the quality and price of flowers. If the dealer is at all unscrupulous, it is easy for him to deceive the customer by giving him the impression that he is really selling the same article for less money. Of course this does not happen often, and is always disastrous to the cheap man. He makes that one trade, but can never do business with the same customer again.

In Business to Stay.

Every man in business is entitled to a legitimate profit. He must satisfy himself what that profit should be, and then see that he gets it. If his unscrupulous neighbor should take away a trade it should not bother him; his customer is sure to come back, and come back to stay.

The man who starts in the retail florists' business today is in it to stay, if he can. To do a paying business today, he must invest considerable capital in fixtures, and in what is known as dead stock; that is, a certain amount of stock that must always be in his possession to do business properly and at a profit. To be successful as a florist in these times, a man must have table. Nowadays the customer not only wants such service of his florist, but expects it of him. If you cannot do it for him he goes to the other fellow, who does the work for him. He also sells flowers to your former customer, who is now yours no more. Every man in the trade should have the ambition to run a place where everything relating to flowers can be obtained for the asking.

Busy the Year Around.

The outdoor work of the florist is gradually assuming large proportions and is deserving of his best efforts. It is a well-known fact that what is called the store business is only good from about October 1 to May 1. The rest of the year the florist who does nothing but a store business has hard work to make both ends meet, generally using up the winter's profits to pay the summer's expenses. Many years ago I saw the necessity of making the dull months, if not profitable, at least self-supporting, and, to my surprise, found conditions were such that I would find no difficulty in providing work for men who otherwise would have to remain idle during the summer. I want to say here that experienced labor is difficult to obtain, and when you get good men it is better to keep them than let them go for a couple of months when you really have nothing for them to do.

To make the florists' business profitable today requires a certain class of men, and the more they know about their business the more successful they will be. Any ordinary, well-dressed man can sell a customer what he wants, but the real man must have many qualifications to make him a success. All these should be natural, but if the individual is so unfortunate as not to possess them, they can be acquired.

Taste, Tact and Integrity.

The successful florist must have good taste, good ideas, good manners, and the integrity to carry out in good faith any agreement he may make with a customer. Naturally, his taste and ideas must be good, as customers do not care for the same thing often, and sometimes do not want what they have seen elsewhere. This makes it imperative for the florist to be able to originate new schemes for the arrangement of flowers and new methods of placing them before the customer.

The temptation to save money and material at the expense of the customer is often great, but it is always a mistake.

The principal mistake made by the retail florist is the selling of old flowers. Don't sell old flowers (I hope all the growers here are listening). You make money by throwing them away. Nothing discourages a customer so much as to buy a few flowers and find them all curled up the next day. He may stand it once or twice, but in a short time he feels he is throwing money away to buy flowers, and instead of buying once or twice a week, he only buys when it is absolutely necessary, and then with the feeling that he is not getting what he pays for.

It is also poor policy to sell your customer what he asks for simply because he is willing to pay for it, when you know he will not be satisfied with the result. Do the right thing by telling him what you know. It will give him confidence in your ability and in-tory to the customer. You can readily understand that one man cannot give the same thing for much less than another while at the same time satisfying his customer; he either cuts down on the quantity or the quality of stock supplied, either one of which is sure to be noticed. As a consequence, he does himself no good and prevents his neighbor from making a fair profit on the order.

a presentable place in which to do business; he must keep it well stocked; he must have a goodly number of competent employees. He must also have greenhouses in which to store the stock necessary for the business, or must hire them, thus reducing his profits; he must have or hire land for his garden work; in fact, he should be in a position to tell his customer he can fix up his grounds or his garden as well as his tegrity, and will also help to increase your business.

If you are in doubt about anything, don't pretend to know; find the man that knows and ask him. You can always find him, provided you have the courage to admit there is something you do not know. Make your people feel that nowhere else could they obtain as good results as with you. It is a well-settled fact that every satisfied customer will make another for you.

The Up-to-Date Salesman.

Years ago all that was required of the florist was the making of a bouquet, putting a few flowers into a second-hand shoe box, making a few so-called designs for funeral purposes, and occasionally something more pretentious than a bouquet for a large banquet.

Today the florist must be prepared to present ideas to the customer for the decoration of the dinner table, house decorations for weddings, receptions, teas, etc.; church decorations for all occasions; the arrangement of flowers in appropriate forms for birthdays, anniversaries, funerals, etc. He must know what is appropriate for the occasion and properly execute the commission. To the average buyer the selection of flowers for a special occasion is a new experience, and it is the duty of the florist to suggest to his customer what he knows is the best thing for him to have. Not only must the florist do this, but he should make the expense so reasonable that the customer will not be afraid to look at a florist's window afterward.

There is more money in selling a man $5 worth of goods a hundred times than in selling him $100 worth once. The florist often finds it difficult to draw the line between what he would like to give the customer and what he wants and should have, and often the addition of a few dollars to the expense would act as the straw that broke the camel's back. While the customer would pay it, and really get his money's worth, he would still feel that he was compelled to undergo an expense that under the circumstances was entirely uncalled for.

One Point in Educating the Public.

The more the general public is educated to the fact that it is the thing to provide flowers for any and all occasions, the better it will be for your business. The only way to do this is to make them feel that they are getting their money's worth.

While flowers vary in price at different seasons of the year, they always have a price, and it should be the same to everybody. It is too often the habit with some florists to ask a certain price for flowers that his customer will consider more than he wants to pay, and then, instead of offering something more in keeping with what is wanted as regards price, he will reduce the price of his offerings. This is not the practice in other lines of business, and nothing you can do or say will convince your customer that you were not attempting to take advantage of him. I do not mean by this that a large buyer should not receive concessions. It is legitimate in any business to sell a buyer at a less price per hundred than could be made for a single article.

Never allow one customer to say to another that he can buy the same thing for less money than the other can. This is also true when you give a purchaser a price and he tells you he can get the same thing elsewhere for less money. Take no notice of it. The other fellow must make a profit the same as you, or he could not do business. Certainly he should not be able to grow or buy at a less price than you can, but if he does, it is your fault, and you should take the necessary steps to be on an equal footing with him.

At best the retailer has a hard road to travel. Of course he has his compensations, but he also has a few troubles, one of which is the lack of appreciation on the part of the grower. When all is said and done, the disposal of ninety per cent of the flower supply depends on the retailer.

THE BRIDE AT THE ALTAR.

[Gleaning of an Interview with Charles Henry Fox.]

The serious expression of the young girl about to make the most solemn of vows is in keeping with the moment just before the marriage ceremony. Her bride's bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids, which gives the faintest touch of pale pink, is of the style known as the arm shower bunch. It is carried in the left hand and is so arranged that the right is free. The idea of combining grace and beauty is further carried out by moderation in the length of the shower, a feature that has sometimes been carried to excess.

While white is the best color to use in brides' bunches, the faint pink of the orchid is in good taste. The green used is maidenhair fern. Phil.

a table in your window, using not only good flowers but the best napery you can procure; usually the dishes and silver can be borrowed from a merchant by putting his card on your display.

THE RETAILERS' TROUBLES.

[An extract from a paper by Edward MacMulkin, of Boston, Mass., read at a meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 18, 1910.]

As a body the retail florists mean to be fair, but I am sorry to say that some of them have contracted bad habits. In every large city you will find men who, the moment they find a neighbor in the way of obtaining a good order, will deliberately offer to do the work for so much less, regardless of what profit they can make, simply to get the business away from the neighbor. This is a serious drawback to the man who is doing a legitimate business. Unfortunately, it is a common practice all over the country. If these men would only stop to think, they would know that this practice is doing them no good and is hurting the customer, who naturally feels that he was imposed on at first, and who knows that he has been imposed on when he sees the order completed. I have seen many such orders, but never saw one that was satisfac-

Another trouble in the trade is that the average customer cannot understand the great difference in the quality and price of flowers. If the dealer is at all unscrupulous, it is easy for him to deceive the customer by giving him the impression that he is really selling the same article for less money. Of course this does not happen often, and is always disastrous to the cheap man. He makes that one trade, but can never do business with the same customer again.

In Business to Stay.

Every man in business is entitled to a legitimate profit. He must satisfy himself what that profit should be, and then see that he gets it. If his unscrupulous neighbor should take away a trade it should not bother him; his customer is sure to come back, and come back to stay.

The man who starts in the retail florists' business today is in it to stay, if he can. To do a paying business today, he must invest considerable capital in fixtures, and in what is known as dead stock; that is, a certain amount of stock that must always be in his possession to do business properly and at a profit. To be successful as a florist in these times, a man must have table. Nowadays the customer not only wants such service of his florist, but expects it of him. If you cannot do it for him he goes to the other fellow, who does the work for him. He also sells flowers to your former customer, who is now yours no more. Every man in the trade should have the ambition to run a place where everything relating to flowers can be obtained for the asking.

Busy the Year Around.

The outdoor work of the florist is gradually assuming large proportions and is deserving of his best efforts. It is a well-known fact that what is called the store business is only good from about October 1 to May 1. The rest of the year the florist who does nothing but a store business has hard work to make both ends meet, generally using up the winter's profits to pay the summer's expenses. Many years ago I saw the necessity of making the dull months, if not profitable, at least self-supporting, and, to my surprise, found conditions were such that I would find no difficulty in providing work for men who otherwise would have to remain idle during the summer. I want to say here that experienced labor is difficult to obtain, and when you get good men it is better to keep them than let them go for a couple of months when you really have nothing for them to do.

To make the florists' business profitable today requires a certain class of men, and the more they know about their business the more successful they will be. Any ordinary, well-dressed man can sell a customer what he wants, but the real man must have many qualifications to make him a success. All these should be natural, but if the individual is so unfortunate as not to possess them, they can be acquired.

Taste, Tact and Integrity.

The successful florist must have good taste, good ideas, good manners, and the integrity to carry out in good faith any agreement he may make with a customer. Naturally, his taste and ideas must be good, as customers do not care for the same thing often, and sometimes do not want what they have seen elsewhere. This makes it imperative for the florist to be able to originate new schemes for the arrangement of flowers and new methods of placing them before the customer.

The temptation to save money and material at the expense of the customer is often great, but it is always a mistake.

The principal mistake made by the retail florist is the selling of old flowers. Don't sell old flowers (I hope all the growers here are listening). You make money by throwing them away. Nothing discourages a customer so much as to buy a few flowers and find them all curled up the next day. SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Erica Melanthera.

This is the best of all the ericas for the average florist. As Christmas plants, these heaths sell well. In order to have them in good flower at that time, a batch should be moved into a slightly warmer house; 45 to 50 degrees at night should not be exceeded, or the plants will be spoiled. None of the ericas will tolerate anything in the nature of forcing. Ericas hyemalis and gracilis will naturally flower for Christmas in a cool house. Pretty as they are, they do not, however, grow and bloom with the freedom of E. melanthera.

Azaleas and Camellias.

Azaleas and camellias, when received, should be unpacked without delay. Often the balls become badly dried in transit, and it is a safe plan to soak all in tubs of water thoroughly. As time will not often permit of their being potted up right away, stand them close together on the floor of a cellar, a shed or in coldframes—anywhere just clear of freezing. A spraying occasionally will help to refresh them, and give them plenty of fresh air. Camellias for Christmas trade can be started in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees; anything warmer will cause a loss of buds. Azaleas will stand harder forcing, and some of the early varieties, such as Hexe (Firefly) and Deutsche Perle, may even be had in fairly good flower for Thanksgiving. Keep all frequently sprayed. Any carried-over azaleas, which were planted in the field and recently potted, will flower earliest, and usually more freely than the Belgian stock.

Dimorphotheca Aurantiaca.

Dimorphotheca aurantiaca, the beautiful South African annual, appeared to a limited extent in the markets last winter and spring. It has a neat branching habit. The rich, orange-gold colored flowers capture the public fancy at once, their bright coloring being rendered the more striking by the dark disk surrounded by a black zone. The seed germinates quickly, and the plant will flower earlier than almost any other annual. If sown now, flowers can be picked from the third week in January onwards. A temperature of 48 to 50 degrees suits it, and the seed can be sown thinly in shallow benches, or started in small pots and transplanted. The former plan answers well. Customers looking for something out of the beaten track will be glad to buy this flower, which lasts remarkably well after being cut.

Pentstemons.

Cuttings of pentstemons produce plants which bloom earlier and more persistently than seedlings. Cuttings will winter in any frame or pit where frost and dampness are excluded. The latter is more destructive than a little freezing. Select plants which have the best colors, and mark any specially good ones. These plants are unimportant here, as compared with Europe. They do wonderfully well near the seaboard, and there may be possibilities in them if grown under glass for spring flowering. Some wide-awake florist might do worse than experiment with them. A few years ago no one thought of antirrhinums, larkspurs, lupines and other annuals as suitable for bench culture. Now they are grown more every year, and there are other annuals now little thought of which will in the future become popular indoor subjects.

Schizanthus Wisetonensis.

The earliest batch of Schizanthus Wisetonensis is now in 6-inch pots and is being grown in a cool house. The plants have had several pinchings, but will now be allowed to run up and flower for Christmas. This makes a splendid Easter plant. It has been popularly dubbed the "poor man's orchid," and its culture is so simple that anyone of ordinary intelligence can manage it. Cool, airy treatment at all stages of its growth is what schizanthus requires. Seed sown now will prove serviceable in early spring, either for growing on in pots or selling in a cut state. Schizanthus keeps a week after being cut, and makes a beautiful vase or table centerpiece. Sow the seed in pans or flats and transplant when large enough to handle, potting them off singly later. Use light leaf-moldy soil in the early stages, later making it heavier and richer.

A LEAVENWORTH STORE.

The Sunnyside Floral Co., of Leavenworth, Kan., was organized in 1908 and erected a range of greenhouses at Twelfth and Vilas streets. At first only a wholesale business was done, but in September, 1909, the firm opened a retail store, the interior of which is shown in the illustration. A few weeks later—October 31—the opening of the store was celebrated in formal fashion, by issuing announcements, entertaining the visitors with the music of an orchestra and presenting flowers as souvenirs. The store is located at the corner of Fifth and Shawnee streets. It is a commodious room, affording good opportunities for the display of the large and varied stock which is there handled. The company expresses great satisfaction with the rapid development of the business in both wholesale and retail departments.

Either hard or soft coal cinders are perfectly safe to use.

DUTCH BULBS

HARDY BULB BEDDING.

Its Increasing Importance.

There are a great many florists who deal directly with the public who have not yet taken advantage of the possibilities of doing profitable business with the fall planting of bulb beds—they haven't awakened to the really wonderful growth of this branch of bedding in recent years. The better class of customers now plant their beds of bulbs just as regularly as they have them filled with geraniums, etc., for summer, and the average householder, even tenant, plants a few bulbs at least along the border in front of the porch. Where the sale for bulbs for forcing has shown no great increase the last few years, the sale of the popular bedding varieties for fall planting has increased at a truly wonderful rate. Many florists share in the business, but more could do so if they would seek the orders; it can be worked up with rather less effort than any other part of the business of the man whose specialty is spring bedding.

Time and Place to Plant.

From the latter part of October until the end of November is the best period in which to plant tulips, hyacinths, narcissi, crocuses and other hardy Dutch bulbs. The early date answers well in the colder states, but a later date is better farther south. Even in northern New England bulb planting can be done in December, but it is not advisable to wait so late, as the roots lose considerable vitality by being kept so long out of the soil.

Practically all bulbs like well drained soil, a possible exception being Narcissus poeticus, which thrives better in moist ground, such as on the edge of ponds and streams, or even on low, marshy land. Any beds with twelve to eighteen inches depth of good soil will grow fine bulbs. It is not necessary to dig out three feet deep, as is sometimes advised. Avoid fresh manure at all times, but use plenty if well decayed. If the soil is naturally heavy, add some sharp sand or fine ashes.

There is a tendency to cover bulbs insufficiently. For hyacinths four inches is better than two. For such large-bulbed narcissi as Emperor, Victoria and Sir Watkin, five inches is none too much. Smaller ones can be covered three to four inches. Tulips are better covered four to five inches. They are then less affected by dry weather, which frequently arrives soon after the ground has thawed out. Crocuses, scillas, chionodoxa and other small bulbs, if covered two and one-half to three inches, will be all right. The more shallow bulbs are planted, the greater the likelihood of their being lifted out or loosened by late freezings and thawings, especially if the winter mulch has been permanently removed.

Some Good Tulips.

Tulips remain far the most popular of hardy spring flowering bulbs for bedding. There is such an immense color range in them that almost any desirable shade is obtainable. It is pleasing to see that the call for soft and delicate combinations and harmonious blendings is fast displacing the haphazard planting of loud masses of color, which are neither pleasing nor satisfying. A selection of the best early tulips, which comprises the sorts which have been proved and tested, is as follows:

Pure white—Joost von Vondel, Pottebakker, White Swan, Queen Victoria (La Reine).

Yellow—Chrysolora, Mon Tresor, Ophir d'Or.

Pink—Cottage Maid, Pink Beauty, Queen of the Netherlands.

Orange—Prince of Austria, Thomas Moore.

Rose—Proserpine, Rose Luisante.

Red and scarlet—Rembrandt, Vermilion Brilliant, Sir Thomas Lipton, Maes.

Crimson—Couleur Cardinal, Dussart.

Red and white—Joost von Vondel.

While a mixed bed of tulips makes a beautiful show, especially if purple shades are omitted, it is in beds of one solid color that they are far the most effective. The following are fine for this purpose: Joost Von Vondel, white; White Pottebakker, Pink Beauty, Couleur Cardinal, Keizerskroon, Proserpine, Chrysolora, Cottage Maid, Thomas Moore and Vermilion Brilliant. Joost von Vondel is the finest white tulip, but costs somewhat more than others of the same color. It is somewhat dwarfer than White Pottebakker, which immediately follows. White Swan is the latest of the early tulips, but a fine variety. Pink Beauty and Queen of the Netherlands are much cheaper than they were, but still somewhat high priced; both are superb sorts. The first named is used in thousands in the Boston Public Gardens, where it is always greatly admired.

Combination of Varieties.

Some people prefer beds or borders planted in lines, circles or blocks of different colors. High colors, like the reds, crimsons and red and yellows, should always be kept for distant effects. Their shades are too intense at close range. Purple and maroon shades, if used at all, should be with golden yellows. Circular beds look well, if quartered, and two varieties only used. Sir Thomas Lipton associated with white Joost von Vondel is fine; so are the white and scarlet Pottebakkers. If distinct colors are wanted in the four quarters, try Chrysolora, Cottage Maid, white Joost von Vondel and Belle Alliance. A good effect may also be had by planting a circle in the center with, say, Chrysolora or White Pottebakker and having a broad band of Sir Thomas Lipton or Maes around it. If the same bed is divided for three colors, try Chrysolora in the center, then a band of Vermilion Brilliant and an edging of L'Immaculee or Queen Victoria. The width of the bands would depend entirely on the diameter of the bed. The following tulips, if bedded together, will make pleasing combinations: Yellow Pottebakker and Thomas Moore; White Pottebakker and Chrysolora; Cottage Maid and Queen Victoria; Chrysolora and Dussart; Keizerskroon bordered with Queen Victoria; Couleur Cardinal and white Joost von Vondel; White Pottebakker, Ophir d'Or and Vermilion Brilliant.

Late Tulips.

Coming to the late tulips, we have the finest section of all. The prices on the majority of these are lower than ever, and this should tempt more to plant them. These late varieties have much longer and stronger stems than the earlier, and are not yet appreciated at their true worth. Not only are they valuable for bedding, but for clumps or herbaceous borders, or in rows or beds for cutting they will be found valuable. In some seasons they prove useful as late as Memorial day in the colder states. A few varieties of much value are: Bouton d'Or, yellow; Gesneriana major, scarlet; Gesneriana lutea, yellow; Isabella (Shandon Bell's), rosy pink; Parisian Yellow, late yellow; Inglescombe Pink, salmon pink; Picotee, white, penciled cerise; Golden Crown, yellow, edged red; La Candeur, pure white; La Merveille, salmon rose, shaded orange; retroflexa, deep yellow; Inglescombe, scarlet; Mrs. Moon, canary yellow.

The beautiful and stately Darwins should not be omitted. They are the strongest and most generally satisfactory of all tulips, and in beds of one color make glorious effects. A few fine varieties, which have proved to be reliable, are: Margaret (Gretchen), blush rose; Mme. Krelage, rosy pink; Pride of Haarlem, salmon rose, shaded scarlet; King Harold, ruby crimson; White Queen, nearly pure white; Farncombe Sanders, rich crimson; Clara Butt, salmon pink; Loveliness, rosy carmine; Glow, rich vermilion; Kate Greenaway, white, tinged lavender; Gustave Dore, bright rose. One great point about the Darwin and most of the other late tulips is that they do not run out in one season. If planted in clumps or masses in borders and left undisturbed, they will be better the second and third than the first year, if given an annual top-dressing of rotted manure.

Carpeting the Beds.

Tulip beds look much better if carpeted in spring with some early flowering, low-growing plants, such as pansies, violas, daisies and forget-me-nots. Mixed colors should never be used and care must be taken not to have the colors of the bulbs and carpeting plants clash. Blue myosotis makes an excellent ground cover below white or yellow, but it is otherwise with pink, scarlet or rose. In the case of the latter, white daisies, violas or pansies, or yellow violas will be in good taste. Nothing could look much worse than dark blue pansies below Couleur Cardinal tulips, or red daisies under Keizerskroon or Proserpine. Not only tulip beds, but those filled with hyacinths and narcissi are much improved by having the soil covered by some neat low-growing, flowering plants.

Hyacinth Beds.

Hyacinths are not as popular for bedding purposes as they once were, but great efforts are being made by the Holland grower to re-popularize them and beds closely planted have been made leading features at bulb expositions there in the last two seasons. As a general rule, second sized bulbs are used for bedding and give satisfactory results. A circular bed six feet in diameter will hold 110 to 120 bulbs and the singles are much to be preferred to the doubles. While mixtures of one shade of color make good beds, for the most pleasing results named sorts must be used. A few reliable sorts are: White or slightly tinted, La Grandesse, Mme. Van der Hoop, Grandeur a Merveille, alba superbissima; red, Roi des Belges, General Pelissier; rose and pink, Gertrude, Charles Dickens, gigantea; blue and lavender, Grand Maitre, Queen of the Blues, King of the Blues, Czar Peter.

In planting hyacinth beds, blue and white, and pink and white make for harmony; blue and pink for discord. As with tulips, beds of a single named variety are the most telling and pleasing. Mixed beds are far from satisfactory, the colors clashing badly.

Beds of Narcissi.

Narcissi are not as much seen in beds as their beauty and merits warrant, but it is pleasing to see the big advance they are making in popular favor. Naturalized, they are at their best, but a number of varieties are so inexpensive and excellent for bedding and withal so graceful that the wonder is they are not more used in this way. No matter how narcissi are mixed, their colors do not clash, all being white or of varying shades of yellow, some having cups margined with scarlet. Unlike hyacinths and the majority of the tulips, the narcissi improve from year to year, possible exceptions being the large golden trumpet varieties, which do not wear so well as the bicolor and short trumpet sections. Of the large golden trumpets, Emperor, Golden Spur and Henry Irving are the best. Glory of Leiden is the queen of all, but is still rather high priced. Single Von Sion and Trumpet Major should not be used; they are not very hardy. Of the bicolor trumpets, Victoria is a leader. Empress is better than Horsfieldii. Grandee maximum blooms a trifle later than Empress, but is a fine sort. Princeps is cheap, but too flimsy a flower.

Narcissus J. B. M. Camm.

Tulip Chrysolora, Golden Yellow.

Of the medium trumpet varieties, Barri Conspicuous is one of the cheapest, but best. Narcissus incomparabilis Sir Watkin, the giant Welsh daffodil, with its big, bold flowers five inches across, is indispensable. Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, Leedsii Minnie Hume and incomparabilis Cynosure are all inexpensive and good.

Apart from formal beds, narcissi can be used to great advantage in shrubbery borders, in herbaceous borders, and for naturalizing in woodlands or grass lands. For naturalizing purposes, poeticus, poeticus ornatus, Leedsii Mrs. Langtry, Burbidgei Vanessa, Johnstoni, Queen of Spain and incomparabilis Stella are a splendid seven. The poeticus varieties succeed in almost any location, but delight in moist soil of good depth, in which they increase amazingly. In natural planting, the bulbs should be thrown broadcast from the hand and planted where they fall. If in grass land, the grass should not be cut until the foliage has matured. If limited to two varieties for natural planting, a good selection would be poeticus and Mrs. Langtry.

For clumps in borders, the varieties of Narcissus poetaz are fine. These are hybrids between N. polyanthus and N. poeticus ornatus, have proved perfectly hardy and increase rapidly. Elvira, Klondyke, Irene, Ideal and Aspasia are good and now quite cheap.

In some cases crocuses, Scilla Sibirica and chionodoxa are planted among the stronger bulbs as a groundwork. When these are used, however, it is necessary to remove the mulch earlier than is desirable for the other bulbs. A much better plan is to use these and snowdrops in patches or bands in the borders, or for naturalizing purposes, and utilize daisies, myosotis, violas, aubrietias and similar plants for hiding mother earth from view.

Bulbs are moderate in price this season and while sales for forcing purposes may not show any great increase, every year shows a big gain for outdoor planting. Some florists use bulbs quite freely in front of their own homes or greenhouses, and it is never money thrown away, but one of the best of advertisements. Plant a nice bed in front of your own place and it will in all probability bring a number of orders for similar beds for customers the following year. Try it and be convinced, as others already have been.

TUBEROSES IN WINTER.

Please tell us whether single Mexican tuberoses can be grown profitably under glass during the winter in solid beds, where they have bloomed all summer. If they will not do well, we will throw them out and put in some other crop. We live in the state of Texas.

S. F. C.

It will certainly not pay you to carry over the single tuberoses for another season. They require a considerable period of rest and cannot be successfully and profitably forced early in the season. My advice would be to dig up the bulbs, heel them in closely to ripen—under a coldframe sash would be a suitable place in your climate—and plant some other crop which will be of some real benefit to you in winter, when flowers are scarce and high priced.

INK FOR ZINC LABELS.

Many florists and nurserymen may have difficulty in obtaining a satisfactory acid or ink for use in writing the inscriptions on the zinc labels attached to their stock. The following is the recipe for the indelible ink which I use for that purpose: Bichloride of platinum, fifteen grains; distilled or soft water, one ounce; hydrochloric acid, five drops.

Use a quill pen. This mixture must be used on labels of zinc only. The zinc should be clean and free from grease. The ink is yellow, but turns black in a few seconds after touching the zinc. Bichloride of platinum can be bought of any of the large dealers in chemicals.

If the writing on the zinc appears in time to grow dim, wet the labels and it will become clear again. Labels which have stood outdoors for five years in my garden are still plainly legible.

SPLIT CALYXES.

I have some Winsor, Victory and White Perfection carnations which split when they are about half open. Please tell me the cause and what to do. They are fine, healthy plants.

H. L. S.

Splitting of the calyx is usually caused by uneven temperature, some varieties being more easily affected than others. During this unseasonable weather, with bright, warm days and cool nights, unless a little artificial heat is employed the extremes are apt to be a little more than the calyxes can stand. Look after your temperatures a little more closely and you will probably find the trouble disappearing in time.

GRUBWORMS IN BENCH SOIL.

How can I destroy the grubworms in the soil in my carnation benches? When cutting off my carnations I watched and picked out as many of the worms as I could find. They were in the soil when I brought it into the house some time ago.

E. T. O.

The most commonly used means for the destruction of grubworms in the soil is air-slaked lime. Sprinkle it on the soil and water it in. Use enough to cover the soil, but not too heavily, and scratch it in before you water.

I would advise you to write to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C., and get the following bulletins: Farmers' Bulletin No. 145 and Bulletin No. 27, new series, revised edition, by F. H. Crittenden. In these two bulletins you will find a lot of valuable information about grubs of many kinds and about other pests.

A. F. J. B.

THRIPS ON ENCHANTRESS.

We are enclosing a partly opened bud of an Enchantress carnation, which is affected with some kind of disease that we are unable to identify. The plants were benched in the latter part of June, from 2½-inch pots, in fresh compost on the south bench of an east-and-west house, with continuous ventilation on the south side of the ridge. We have had exceptionally warm weather for the last three or four weeks, the temperature ranging from 70 to 90 degrees. We were troubled considerably by this disease last season throughout the house. It seemed to spread more rapidly as warm weather came on. We carry a night temperature of 55 to 58 degrees. This is the first appearance of the disease this season, and we should like to know what we can do to prevent its spreading.

W. F. C.

The trouble of which you complain is not a disease, but a pest. Your plants are infested with thrips. These columns have frequently contained directions for destroying these insects, and you can find all the information you need by looking through your back numbers. For instance, see the issue of April 21, page 12. Tobacco, or rather nicotine, applied in the most available form, is all you need to clean them out.

A. F. J. B.

A CHECK IN GROWTH.

I never had a finer lot of carnation plants at benching time than I had the first week of August. To all appearances they were all right. About the time the buds began to come, however, they seemed to be badly affected by rust. The buds came on short stems. Often the main bud turned brown and dried up, but the laterals came all right, except in size. The blooms had a sleepy look. The Enchantress were the worst, the others being only slightly affected. My soil was mixed as usual, and the conditions, as far as I could see, were the same as in former years, with the exception that the weather was unusually hot. The house was well ventilated and the plants were sprayed from three to four times per week in bright weather. The soil was moderately wet, but by no means all the time. There is no red spider or thrips that I can see. There is a water pressure of 100 pounds. The flowers have been of good size and are now coming on long stems. As this is my first experience of the kind, I am puzzled. What seems to be the matter, and what is the remedy?

W. C. S.

Judging from your description of the behavior of your plants, I am inclined to think that about the only thing the matter with them was a severe check at planting time. The extreme heat might be to blame for that. Cooler weather will likely improve that sleepy appearance you complain of.

A. F. J. B.

MUSHROOMS OR TOADSTOOLS?

Last season I continually had trouble with toadstools, or something resembling toadstools, which grew in the soil on some of my benches, among my carnations. They were white, or sometimes brownish white, and some were very large. They seemed to appear suddenly during the night. I kept pulling them out, but they continued to come. Now they have again started. Please tell me what causes these, how they may be checked and what harm they can do. They have a peculiar and rather offensive odor. I am anxious to get rid of them before firing begins in earnest.

E. H.

The toadstools you complain of are one of the varieties of fungi to which belong the many edible sorts of mushrooms. Perhaps it is the common Agaricus campestris and, if it is, you are fortunate rather than otherwise. Many growers plant the spawn of this mushroom between their carnations in a limited way, and thereby get what is considered a dainty dish for the home table.

Before you use any of them, however, I would advise you to consult someone who is versed in mushrooms, to make sure that it is not one of the poisonous varieties.

One way of identifying the edible kind, it is said, is by peeling them. According to this theory, a toadstool never peels, but breaks. Take hold of the upper skin at the edge and draw upward and toward the center. If the skin will strip off readily, it is supposed to be the edible kind.

The spawn of these fungi are usually introduced into the soil in the manure which is added to the compost. You will find it difficult to destroy the spawn in the soil, and that would be the only means of getting rid of them. A heavy coat of lime might help. They do the plants no harm that I have ever discovered, unless they lift them out of the soil.

A. F. J. B.

LEAF-MINER ON MUMS.

We are sending you some chrysanthemum leaves which are eaten by some sort of worm, apparently inside the leaves. Please tell us where they come from and what is the best way of getting rid of them. Our chrysanthemums were in fine condition and the foliage was perfect until ten days ago; now about one-quarter of the foliage is destroyed.

E. H. & S.

The trouble is caused by Tephritis onopordinis, commonly known as the celery fly or leaf-miner. The fly lays an egg in the chrysanthemum leaf, between the outer and inner skin of the leaf, and when the larva begins to eat it simply eats out the chlorophyll, leaving merely the two skins on the leaf to protect itself. No tobacco solution is strong enough to kill this pest. Poisons are equally useless, since it sucks only the inside of the leaf. The only remedy I know of is to pick off all leaves that would not be particularly missed and then squeeze the worms, which can be seen working in the leaf, and destroy them that way.

Chas. H. Totty.

KATYDIDS ON MUMS.

Enclosed you will find a bug that we found crawling among the leaves of our chrysanthemums. It is one of several that we have found this summer, and, as it is a new bug to us, we have killed all we have found. It has just occurred to us that we may be killing friends instead of enemies, so we send it to you for information. We cut the head off so that it would not suffer in transit, but you will find the head wrapped in paper with the body L. M. S.

The insect in question is nothing else but our old friend the katydid. Whether the katydid does any harm to chrysanthemums, is a question that I cannot answer definitely, but I will say that in my experience I have never found that it has, so I do not think that L. M. S. need worry over this forerunner of the fall season. Chas. H. Totty.

A SPORT OF TOUSET.

Please let me know whether a pure yellow sport of the Mme. C. Touset chrysanthemum has ever been introduced to the trade. H. E.

So far as I am aware, no yellow sport of Mme. C. Touset has yet been introduced to the trade. If H. E. believes he has a sport of that kind in his possession, he should be careful to see that it is a true sport and not something else mixed in with his stock. The foliage should be identical with that of the parent in order to guarantee its being right. Chas. H. Totty.

LEAF-SPOT ON MUMS.

Enclosed you will find some diseased leaves of mums. Please tell us the name of the disease, the cause and the remedy. They are grown in pots, in good, rich clay loam, with a little sand and bonemeal. The benches are covered with coal ashes, mixed with a small proportion of wood ashes. The house has been rather damp until lately, when we have had steam at night. The weather has been varied, but rather warm for this time of year. The disease showed first on Golden Glow, and the other early kinds are now nearly all affected more or less. J. F. W.

The leaves, on arrival, were badly wilted, but, so far as I could see, they were affected by leaf-spot. The leaf-spot is nearly always present in the chrysanthemum, and when, as frequently happens in the fall, the foliage gets crowded by the excessive growth, the spot will almost invariably start on the plants. It is a fungoid disease and spreads from leaf to leaf where conditions are favorable for its development. The best remedy I know of is sulphide of potassium, used in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water and sprayed directly on the under side of the leaves. This, as a general rule, provided the houses are run dry, greatly reduces the seriousness of the trouble. Chas. H. Totty.

INSECTS ON MUMS.

We are having trouble with our mums. On the under side of the leaves there are lots of small green worms which are invisible to the naked eye, but are eating the under surface and the edges. There is, or was, a large worm on the inside which forms like a sack, and the spot has a watery brown appearance and is about the size of a nickel.

The leaf is much drawn up and has all the appearance of red spider. The under side has a reddish appearance, as if scalded. The outside is curved down and is marked with a few grayish specks, such as are made by the spider. I find also that a number of plants have a fine network of web, but can see only a few of what I think are small red spiders, and some black ones. Will this spider, if it is red spider, do much harm? Will it be especially harmful when the mums come into bloom? How can I best get rid of these two pests? K. F. C.

K. F. C. seems to have a variety of insects that are causing trouble on his chrysanthemums. The large worm described as on the inside of the leaf is apparently the same as that which attacks celery, Tephritis onopordinis. This worm eats out all the center of the leaf, leaving merely the outside skin. It is almost impossible to get rid of it, except by hand picking, because any solution that is strong enough to pierce the skin and reach the worm is strong enough to cause serious injury to the foliage.

The leaves having a fine network of web are undoubtedly covered with spider. I do not know how close the relationship is between the spider and thrips, but there is a tiny black insect and also a dirty white one, which are sometimes called spider and sometimes thrips, and both of them work in the same way as the red spider. If these are bad on the plants, K. F. C. will get but few flowers this fall that will be perfectly finished. When syringing is discontinued, these insects multiply rapidly, and the web extends up from the leaves to the outside petals. The various forms of tobacco do not seem to be of much avail against these insects. If K. F. C. is still able to do it, there is nothing better than vigorous spraying from the hose, with a fine nozzle attached to the end like a Stott nozzle, and washing every leaf thoroughly on the under side. Chas. H. Totty.

SMITH'S NEW MUMS.

The firm of Elmer D. Smith & Co., at Adrian, Mich., can be counted on for a set of new chrysanthemums as regularly as the autumn comes around, and the growers who have profited through their introduction of Golden Glow will be interested that this year Smith & Co. have both an early white and an early pink. Smith's Advance, the white, was illustrated in The Review of September 8, and an illustration herewith shows Unaka, the October pink. Buds taken between August 1 and 15 not only give fully developed blooms in sixty days, but are said by the originator to be superior to earlier or later buds when color and fullness are considered. It is a broad petaled Japanese incurved variety, of large size and much depth for so early a sort. Mr. Smith describes the color as intermediate between Rosiere and William Duckham. It is a seedling from October Frost, which is an easy doer under all sorts of growing conditions. From early May benching the plants attain a height of four feet. When exhibited before the Chrysanthemum Society's committee on seedlings at Cincinnati, October 8, it was scored ninety points.

The Smith concern appears to be working toward earliness on its new mums, for Chrysolora, another of its present season's offerings, is described as an early Col. Appleton—fifteen days early. The color is between Appleton and Bonaffon, and Mr. Smith considers this variety one of his greatest achievements. When exhibited at New York October 15 it scored ninety-three points, and on the same date made ninety-four points at Cincinnati.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.

The great range of greenhouses in course of construction for the Sunnybrook Distillery Co., for cucumber growing, collapsed under the pressure of the big wind October 18, entailing a loss running into many thousands of dollars.

The plans of the distillery concern contemplated covering nearly two acres with glass. R. L. Chamberlain, a northern vegetable grower of experience, was placed in charge of the enterprise, and about two-thirds of the range was approaching completion. Some estimates of the loss are as high as $35,000.

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

The Northern Indiana Florists' Association held a quarterly meeting at South Bend October 19, assembling for dinner as the guests of the South Bend florists. After the repast the visitors were taken on a tour of inspection of the stores and greenhouses. The business session was at the store of Willis Kinyon and routine was quickly dispatched. A discussion on the poinsettia was led by S. Humfeld, of Muncie, and one on the cyclamen by Harry White, of North Manchester.

The important feature of the meeting was the proposal to establish a buying agency to handle on a coöperative basis all purchases of supplies, such as boxes, pots and fertilizers, for the association's thirty-three members in eighteen cities in the northern part of the state. The idea is that by buying in quantity, better prices can be secured in individual purchases.

There were quite a number of exhibits. The Wagoner Floral Co., Columbia City, showed Dorothy Gordon, Enchantress and Columbia carnations; the Muncie Floral Co., Muncie, Kaiserin roses with 3-foot stems, grown from plants 10 years old in solid beds, Golden Gate roses and Touset chrysanthemums; the Johnson Floral Co., Kendallville, White Perfection, a purple seedling carnation, and dahlias; Harry White, North Manchester, Victory, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Harlowarden, Lawson and Rose-pink Enchantress carnations; Willis Kinyon, South Bend, Richmond roses; W. W. Dederick, Warsaw, tuberous begonias; Mr. Trayer, Elkhart, Enchantress and White Enchantress carnations and Polly Rose chrysanthemums; C. C. Arnold, North Judson, bulbs of Gladiolus America, measuring up to two and three-quarters inches in diameter; Ten Eyck & Son, Auburn, photograph of a seedling gladiolus unnamed; South Bend Floral Co., Touset chrysanthemums.

The next meeting will be held at North Manchester on the third Wednesday in January, at which time it is expected the committee on coöperative buying will be prepared with a report.

A Visitor's Comment.

The meeting of the Northern Indiana Florists' Society at South Bend October 19 was an enjoyable as well as profitable occasion. Willis Kinyon, as host, proved himself master of the situation. After dinner we visited the stores and greenhouses. The Beyer Floral Co. certainly has an up-to-date store; it would be a credit to a much larger city. Judging from the floor space and the stock carried a splendid business is being done. The second floor is devoted to birds, goldfish, jardinières, fern dishes, etc. A carload of fish globes with other supplies displayed make it possible to please the most exacting customers. The greenhouses of Willis Kinyon and the South Bend Floral Co. were visited and all stock found in fine condition.

The meeting was full of interest. Harry White gave us a talk on cyclamens and Simon Humfeld one on poinsettias. Many suggestions for the good of the society were made. The establishing of a purchasing agency for pooling all orders for pots, cut flower boxes, supplies, etc., met with great favor and probably will be perfected at our next meeting. S. H.

PITTSBURG.The Market.

The last week was a bad one for the trade in general, both wholesalers and retailers finding much cause for complaint. The continued warm weather kept the market glutted with stock of all kinds; the late chrysanthemums were coming in on top of the early ones, dahlias and cosmos were at their best and roses and carnations were in such quantity that only the best of them found sale. And still there is no frost in sight.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements report enough decorations to keep their force busy, although there is nothing large on hand at present.

H. C. Frick and H. J. Heinz had their chrysanthemum shows ready for Sunday, October 23, and threw their conservatories open to the public. That this was appreciated was evidenced by a continual stream of visitors.

The Schenley park show will open Sunday, October 30. The prospects are good for a fine show. Superintendent George Burke allowed a couple of houses to be open on Sunday, but kept the balance closed to the public until he would have his show arranged.

The Phipps Conservatory, in the North Side park, was open to visitors Sunday, and the show was well attended. The chrysanthemums there are looking fine.

Joseph M. Jones, who opened a salesroom on Liberty street for the sale of trees, shrubbery and hardy herbaceous plants, has met with success so far.

W. J. Smith is still cutting large quantities of gladioli and tritomas from his Canfield, O., place. He says it looks like gladioli for Thanksgiving, and personally he is "between the devil and the deep sea"; when he is in Canfield he prays for continued good weather; when he is at the store he prays for frost.

Frank Faulk, of Faulk Bros., is getting so much pleasure out of his automobile that he is going to pass up his annual hunting trip this fall.

C. Goodwin & Sons are sending in their usual mum cut and the stock is up to the usual Goodwin standard.

Hoo-Hoo.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

In a way the florists have had quite a time of it since the first of the year. This spring they longed for warm weather; during summer they prayed for rain, and now they are doing both for frost. While we all enjoy seeing vegetation in full bloom, still it would be better for all concerned if all outdoor flowers were a thing of the past.

The extremely warm weather the first half of last week brought in an avalanche of stock of all kinds; much more than could be disposed of at profitable prices. There are more than enough of fine dahlias coming in daily, but they, too, suffer with all the rest.

Various Notes.

Fred Schmeling is cutting Lawson carnations from stock left in the field which is ahead of any grown under glass.

Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, is cutting White Perfection carnations with exceptionally long stems. They were grown under glass all summer.

Fred Holton and Nic Zweifel combined pleasure with business and took a run up to Sheboygan, Wis., last week. There, at James Matthews' place, they found large quantities of cosmos, snapdragon and the like in its prime.

Benke Bros., of Watertown, Wis., who up to this season grew vegetables, have gone into the flower business by planting two houses to violets. George Benke was a caller last week.

The executive committee of the coming mammoth flower show reports everything progressing most satisfactorily. Premium lists can be had for the asking by addressing H. V. Hunkel, 462 Milwaukee street, Milwaukee. E. O.

EVANSVILLE, IND.The Market.

The weather was warm till a few days ago, so business was not brisk, but, now that cooler weather is here, we can look for better conditions. On the morning of October 23 our first frost came. It will not be long, therefore, till the outdoor flowers will be gone; then business will increase. Roses and carnations are plentiful. Mums are coming in faster and some are quite good.

Various Notes.

Ben Kramer is receiving some good mums from Otto Kuebler, of Newburg, Ind. Business has been fine with him.

Julius Niednagel & Sons had the decorations for the wedding of a prominent couple last week. It was a swell affair, requiring some artistic work, and considerable stock was used. Business with this firm has been good.

The William Blackman Floral Co. is cutting considerable stock of all kinds, for which a ready sale is found.

Karl Zeidler says business is extra good some weeks and then there is a sudden falling off. He has been cutting some good outdoor roses. He left last Monday for a week's fishing on the Wabash river, with a party of friends. A little later he will make his annual trip down into the wilds of Mississippi.

Royston & Fenton say that business is rather slow at present, and will be till mums are gone. Their roses are in crop now, so they expect a good cut for Christmas.

J. C. Elsperrmann has been cutting a good many roses and carnations.

Frank M. Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, was a caller last week. He reports a good business.

E. L. F.

Urbana, Ill.—E. S. Dodson has completed a large addition to his greenhouses, on East Main street.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Nowata, Okla.—F. M. Treat has bought the greenhouses and business of Cass Lanning.

Rochester, N. H.—E. A. Corson has torn down his smallest greenhouse, which was the first one erected.

Chatham, N. Y.—R. E. Shuphelt has gone to Fruitland Park, Fla., where the family has spent the winter for several years.

Louisiana, Mo.—After a two weeks' vacation, J. G. Layton has resumed his position as manager of M. S. Foreman's retail business.

San Antonio, Tex.—The Lady of the Lake Gardens Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $10,000, by J. A. Clopton, John W. Spencer, H. P. Matthews and L. B. Randall.

Green Farms, Conn.—Geo. B. Whitehead is constructing another well, so as to insure a sufficient supply of water in dry seasons. Recent droughts in this neighborhood have been a source of great trouble.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The local dailies have been printing the portrait of Miss H. B. Whitted as donor of prizes for a vacant lot gardening contest recently decided, and some of them mentioned the street number of her flower store.

Muncie, Ind.—Roosevelt day, October 13, was a busy day for the florists. Considerable decorating was done. The local press, in commenting on the decorations, made special mention of the window of the new store of the Muncie Floral Co. as having the best decoration for the occasion.

Troy, Ill.—J. R. Ward, who recently erected a greenhouse here, has announced that he is now fully prepared for the transaction of a general florists' business. He expects to build more houses before long, and has installed a boiler which has sufficient capacity to take care of these additions.

Burlington, Vt.—Mrs. Cora E. Gove, who has conducted a large range of greenhouses just outside this city for a number of years, will soon open a store in the room formerly occupied by W. E. Peters, at 184 Main street. She is fully determined to make the store one of the most up-to-date establishments in the state.

Grand Island, Neb.—Williams The Florist added about 3,500 square feet of glass during the summer, making a total of 20,000 square feet of glass in his range. He has also installed a new ninety horse-power boiler. Robert Felby, formerly with Geo. M. Kellogg, at Pleasant Hill, Mo., has been engaged as foreman. Business throughout the year has been excellent, and future prospects are bright.

Port Huron, Mich.—C. W. Asman has erected a large addition to his greenhouses at Lakeside beach.

Hot Springs, Ark.—Mrs. Mattie Byrne has gone out of business, selling out to the Johnson Floral Co.

Radnor, Pa.—James F. Sullivan is preparing to build a private greenhouse 20x35 and a gardener's cottage.

Larned, Kan.—Joel Smith, proprietor of the Larned Home Nursery, has added a greenhouse for the supply of flowers and plants.

Loomis, Cal.—Fire at the greenhouses of the California Carnation Co. recently damaged those buildings and completely destroyed the office fixtures and a dwelling on the property.

Albion, Mich.—M. & S. Dysinger have a Lawson x Enchantress seedling that they think highly of and may disseminate. It has Lawson color with Enchantress habit. The variety is in its fourth year.

Columbiana, O.—Henry E. Weaver has purchased some property on North Main street, north of the borough line, and will remove his greenhouses to that location, where he will have much better facilities and conveniences than before.

Indian Orchard, Mass.—A greenhouse belonging to Mrs. Isabella Lindsey, on the Boston road, was slightly damaged recently by fire, supposed to be of incendiary origin. A man named William Cochrane was arrested on the charge of starting the flames.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—The Kemble Floral Co. is making extensive improvements in the way of new walks and drives at its property on C avenue, east. The improvements include a cement driveway on the west side of the greenhouses, besides some other cement construction.

Battle Creek, Mich.—C. C. Warburton, who formerly conducted a store at Monument Square, has now opened a large store at 52 East Main street, where he will have better facilities for the care of his increasing business. At his greenhouses, at the corner of North Union and Emmett streets, many improvements were made during the summer.

Moberly, Mo.—Mrs. R. S. Estill has just completed two new houses and is repainting the older greenhouses. These, together with her magnificent residence, make a fine sight. C. A. Claison, the foreman, says that local trade is good, especially in design work, and the demand always exceeds the supply. Mrs. Estill, therefore, will build more houses as soon as possible, and is already in possession of the ground for the purpose.

North Scituate, Mass.—It is reported that the greenhouses owned by Mrs. Eban S. Bowen have been sold.

Victoria, B. C.—Fred Bennett, formerly of Montreal, now has charge of the Woodward here. The range consists of 300,000 feet of modern glass.

Gibson City, Ill.—Swan Peterson Floral Co. is making good use of a picture postcard for advertising purposes. The card shows the greenhouses in colors.

Springfield, N. J.—Wm. Henshaw, formerly manager of Henshaw Bros., Inc., is no longer connected with the company. J. Niel Jakobsen is managing director.

Newark, O.—Kent Bros. reported, under date of October 17, that the warm weather was bringing on the mums fast, and there were plenty of Pacific Supreme, Virginia Poehlmann, October Frost and Golden Glow on the market.

Findlay, O.—S. J. McMichael has been putting up horse radish for market for twenty-four years. Another branch of his business is growing vegetable plants for the trade and of late years this has been increasing rapidly. He has just added considerable hotbed space and has saved the seed from fifty bushels of selected tomatoes of his own growing for his 1911 crop.

Anglum, Mo.—Wensel & Hecht have just completed three new greenhouses, besides a new boiler house, coal pit and office, 20x66. Their range now consists of four greenhouses, each 27x100, and a propagating and potting house, 12x100. They are heated by Kroeschell boilers, and the greenhouse material was all furnished by the John C. Moninger Co. The houses are all well stocked, and everything about the place is in fine condition for the winter business.

Southwick, Mass.—Edward Gillett, who in 1878 established his gardens here for the growing of hardy outdoor plants, has increased his stock and improved its quality until now, it is said, there are few of the great botanical gardens that have not procured specimens from his fields. One of his specialties is ferns, of which he has fifty-three different kinds, which he cultivates under the most approved conditions of soil and shade, but he also grows peonies, some of the hardiest roses and a large assortment of perennials, besides shrubs and trees. He has a greenhouse for the starting of his more delicate stock. One of the interesting features of his place is the bog garden, where he grows plants for the beautification of swampy ground. He is now assisted in his work by his son, Kenneth Gillett, a graduate of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4-'01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dörner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

ABOUT all the big cut flower markets of the country have been overloaded with stock during the warm Indian summer weather.

THE bad check still is cashable, it seems, in many flower stores. The only sound rule is to decline to cash checks for strangers.

THE exhibit of the Washington Florists' Club is one of the features of the Householders' show now in progress at the national capital.

"PRICE competition," says a close observer, "is a squabble for the one ripe apple that has dropped to the ground. Quality competition, however, climbs into the tree."

THOSE 500-dollar premiums at St. Louis will be worth watching. About how many carnations should one stage in a class where the one prize is $500 cash? It is for the exhibitor to determine; accessories are not permissible.

THERE will be more really big flower shows this season than in any previous year and it is interesting to note that in most cases they are managed by commercial men, with dependence for success placed on commercial growers.

THE complete list of premiums has been issued for the flower show to be held in Minneapolis November 9 to 13 by the Minnesota State Florists' Association. Copies may be had by addressing J. P. Jorgensen, secretary, 3501 Portland avenue, Minneapolis.

OBITUARY.

William Unser.

William Unser, a florist of Greenspring, O., died suddenly Monday evening, October 17. The funeral was held on the following Wednesday, and among those who attended were several relatives from Tiffin, O.

Joseph M. Ahearn.

Joseph M. Ahearn, who had been gardener for Henry Clews on his estate, The Rocks, at Newport, R. I., for several years, died suddenly at his home in that city, in the thirty-first year of his age. He was a member of the New-pert Horticultural Society. He was following his usual duties up to within a few hours preceding his death, which followed an acute attack of indigestion. He leaves a widow and three small children.

Henry F. Scott.

Henry F. Scott, one of the oldest residents of the city of Pawtucket, R. I., died October 12, at the home of his daughter in that city, at the age of 82 years. He was retired, but for many years was engaged in market gardening and later operated a range of greenhouses for carnations and violets. He is survived by a son and daughter.

AN ADVERTISER'S VIEW.

Not all men buy advertising with the same discrimination, and applying the same tests used in the purchase of other necessities of business—but gradually they are beginning to weigh values:

We sold our entire lot by telegraph the very next day after the paper came out. We think The Review can not be beat for advertising.—Adgate & Son, Warren, O., Oct. 24, 1910.

The annual Special Autumn Number, to be issued November 10, will be an exceptionally strong edition for advertising.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Not one word is to be said in favor of last week. The spirit of those upon whom responsibilities sit lightly was crushed by the fact that our pitchers blew at the critical moment, while those whose motto is "Business first" were depressed by the impossibility of doing anything at all satisfactory with the enormous receipts of flowers. It is quite certain that chrysanthemums never before have sold so cheaply in this market. Practically all stock was in oversupply, but all the blame was laid to the door of the autumn flower, receipts of other stock not having increased in proportion. But with gladioli, dahlias, cosmos and other outdoor stock still doing a part to overload the market, there were more flowers received than there was any possible use for at any prices. Some of the class of stores that handle quantity at a price bought by the wagon-load, but in many instances found they would have been as well off had they not gorged themselves, for they lost a considerable part of their purchases. Wholesalers admit having sold accumulated odd lots of mums for as little as $25 and even $20 per thousand, but of course good stock was not sold at any such prices, except when a few good flowers were put in to sweeten a job. The best blooms brought $3 a dozen in limited number, but it was such stock as would have commanded $4 to $5 in previous years.

All other flowers felt the oppression of the mum glut. The best selection could command a fair price, but the culls sold at great sacrifice, if at all. Roses fared rather better than carnations, but cosmos was worse than anything else. There is an unprecedented quantity of the latter, and a large part of it spoils. Violets were almost lost sight of in the crowd, though some are now fine. Valley held up in demand and price better than almost any other item.

Local demand, from the first-class stores, was light, possibly because the other kind were so busy, and shipping trade fell away to half its usual volume, showing that the condition is quite general, but at the opening of this week there was some improvement in the out-of-town business, and an upturn is looked for as soon as the weather gets down to normal. It is almost November 1, and no frost yet.

Wholesale Employees' Dance.

In spite of the fact that the Wholesale Florists' Employees' Club gave its annual ball on short notice this year, the success achieved was rather greater than in any previous year. The ball occurred October 25 at Columbia hall, with

HERE ARE THE BEST OF THE MUMS!

All The Finest Shipping Varieties in Quantity.

If you want the best big Mum now on the market, that's our Crocus (yellow), but Pacific Supreme (pink), and Early Snow (white), also are leaders in their class. Other excellent sorts now in season are Touset (some buyers prefer it to anything else in the market), Halliday, Monrovia, Rosiere, Polly Rose, V. Poehlmann and Kalb.

There is no exaggeration in the statement that we have the best stock of Mums to be found anywhere in the west—every good commercial variety that's in season; all colors, all sizes, all prices. Let us hear from you about your Mum needs, it's to our mutual advantage.

BEAUTIES

No matter what other Beauties you are using, it will be to your interest to order some of us for comparison. We never have seen such high color at this season; splendid substance, strong stem and heavy foliage. The crop runs largely to long stems.

KILLARNEY

PINK AND WHITE

Here's another place where "seeing is believing." It's so common for every florist to think his own stock is "the best ever," that it is enough for us to say no one could ask for finer Killarney or White Killarney than those we handle in such large quantity. Order here; we invite comparisons. Also a large crop of fine

Richmond, Maryland and Kaiserin.

CARNATIONS

For years we have been known as handling the largest lot of uniformly high quality Carnations in this market, but we do not recall a season when our Carnations were so good or in such heavy supply at this date. Buyers who use Carnations in quantity will do well to write us about regular shipments.

Lilies

We can supply Easter Lilies in quantity every day in the year. Plenty of them NOW. Also Auratums and Rubrums.

Violets

We have the cream of the Hudson river doubles and we can say that they are really good; also singles.

Headquarters for Mexican Ivy, Smilax, Farleyense, Sprengeri, Adiantum, Asparagus Bunches and the best Fancy Ferns in the country.

Fitzgerald's orchestra. The grand march was led by Charles Zapfe and Miss Holmes and nearly 100 couples were on the floor, with quite a number of visitors who did not dance. The attendance included a larger proportion of young people than usual, so that several extra numbers were called for, and festivities were at their height when the home-going hour arrived.

The club consists of fifteen members, all of whom are employees in the local wholesale stores. George Poehlmann is president and John C. Enders secretary.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held a special meeting at the Union restaurant October 20. E. L. Schultz, Oak Park; Al. Fischer, Ralph Reese and F. S. Howard were elected to membership.

Flower show matters were up for discussion. President Asmus announced that since last meeting he had appointed A. C. Kohlbrand, D. A. Robertson, Alex. Henderson, Fred Lautenschlager and W. N. Rudd as the committee on banquet and called for a report. The committee stated that the La Salle hotel had been selected as the place for the annual festivities, at 6:30 p. m. Thursday, November 10, all out-of-town florists and their ladies to be guests, local people to provide themselves with tickets at $3 each. The club ratified the arrangement.

The bowlers now are planning to give their ball Friday evening at the flower show. All show arrangements were reported progressing splendidly; a fine show is assured. The club will run the flower booth, as usual, in charge of H. E. Philpott, assisted by E. F. Winter-son, Herman Schiller, Jas. Curran, H. N. Bruns, A. I. Simmons, W. H. Kidwell, Frank Pasternick and volunteers. The retreat in the basement will be operated in charge of Walter Scott, assisted by T. E. Waters, T. C. Yarnall and E. F. Winter-son, who, as club treasurer, gets in on everything.

Various Notes.

E. E. Pieser has an exceedingly bad index finger on his billing hand. The doctor tells him that it is as much the fault of the store attempts to dig out the rose thorn as it is the poisoning by the thorn itself.

Among the not-often-seen mums now in market the variety W. T. McNiece is well thought of at the store of Poehlmann Bros. Co. O. W. Frese says it is the best pink of the season. It is an imported variety, sent out by Hill and Smith some six years ago. The color was then described as rosy lilac.

Bassett & Washburn speak highly of the yellow mum, Crocus, saying that right through the unprecedented glut of mums this variety has brought them 25 cents for every flower cut.

E. H. Hunt is putting on extra help in the supply department to keep orders going out promptly.

Kyle & Foerster say they have not been able to find fault with the demand, even through the glut; there were as many sales as ever, and larger, but prices were so low it did not run into large money.

Joseph F. Pfeffer is the latest addition to the staff of Weiland & Risch.

Aphine has passed beyond the experimental stage. Men whose opinions are highly regarded among floriculturists concede it to be one of the best insecticides ever placed on the market.

A trial will convince you.

turned to the store of his brother, John Kruchten, to help market the big mum crop.

C. W. McKellar, Mrs. McKellar and friends motored to Champaign to spend Sunday.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. is cutting Beauties from its new place, also mums and a few carnations. Quite a little of the cut is retailed at Batavia; the rest is sold by O. Johnson at the Flower Growers' Market.

George Reinberg is spending ten days with relatives in South Dakota.

Winterson's Seed Store has this week received a carload of boxwoods from Holland. John Degnan says he does not recall a season when the imported stock has arrived in such uniformly fine shape.

N. J. Wietor is the one man in the market who remained cheerful through last week's events at Philadelphia and on the west side. He is a White Sox fan, and picked the Athletics to win from the start.

Dom Freres, who has a stand in the Flower Growers' Market, says the world never used him better than since he became a wholesaler.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. is "sending its message out into the night" by means of a large new electric sign that flashes alternately red and white, and can be seen for several blocks in either direction.

When Miss Martha C. Gunterberg was "down east" a few weeks ago she connected with a Beauty grower who has since been making regular shipments, and also with an eastern orchid grower.

C. G. Gilbert & Co., Oregon, Ill., are shipping mums to this market, but the informant does not state to whom.

The E. C. Amling Co. has recently added a nearby orchid grower to its list of consignors. Cattleyas may some day be as plentiful as mums were last week.

The West End Floral Co., 4035 West Madison street, had its decorated delivery outfit in the West Madison street merchants' parade October 19.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, says Touset and its sport are the popular mums; the best stock has sold while the lower grades hung. He says President Taft has been a disappointment to them.

T. J. McNally, florist and state representative, is said to be missing. His store at 447 Wabash avenue has been closed more than a fortnight.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg has had a fine run of orders for Richmond this week and has been fortunate to have that variety in heavier crop than any other.

At Vaughan & Sperry's a quick turn of the market is predicted with a turn in the weather, and no turn at all until the weather turns.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., says he has not yet been able to make the trip through Tennessee he has been promising all season.

Among recent visitors have been: Albert Pochelon, of the Bomb Floral Co., and Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, Detroit; H. M. Burt, formerly of Burt & Coggan, Battle Creek, who is opening a flower store at Jackson, Mich.; Gust Fredrickson, St. Joseph, Mich.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business is poor. There are excellent flowers of all kinds, but the buyers are not anxious to have them. Some of the theories advanced for this listlessness are these: There is a little financial stringency in the pocketbooks of the flower buyers, owing, probably, to the almost entire absence of a fall and the consequent quietness in other mercantile lines, and it is now getting close to the first of the month, and many prefer to hold their social affairs over until the first week in November and get their bills about twenty-five days later, instead of having them now and getting the bills within five days.

Choice pink roses were one of the redeeming features of last week's market. They sold readily at normal prices. Of other roses, especially white, there is an oversupply.

Carnations are coming in faster than needed. The blooms have practically their winter colors, while every succeeding crop has been having longer stems, until now they are long enough for any use.

More than a sufficiency of chrysanthemums is apparent. This is because the warm weather has brought out practically all the early varieties and they are now clashing with one another, instead of succeeding each other, as they were wont to do. The shorter and smaller ones do not move at all, while the choice ones sell at nearly if not quite the same price as last year at this time. This forcing of the blooms does not seem to have affected the quality in any way.

Good longiflorums are offered, but move slowly. For the first time this fall orchids and valley are not snapped up at once. Dahlias and cosmos still hang on, but rain and cool weather have told on them and they are not the same as they were. The request for them has almost ended, and they are liable to be put out of commission any night.

All green goods offered are of excellent quality and the supply is sufficient, except in the case of Asparagus plumosus, which is on the short side.

The demand created by All Saints' day is expected to relieve the market. Next Sunday some of the cemeteries will celebrate, while on the following Sunday the balance will do so. This day will also prove a great day for those growers who grew pot mums to sell at prices not to exceed 50 cents each.

Various Notes.

The roses that A. Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., is consigning to C. E. Critchell are of excellent quality. Wm. Murphy is finding a satisfactory

Shipping Orders

I HAVE established a very nice city business on the quality of the stock I handle and the attention I give my customers. With this foundation I am in position to take excellent care of some of the out-of-town buyers who want someone they can depend on to look out for their interests. I will handle rush orders, but I can do specially well by those who will place standing orders for regular shipments. If you are interested, write me to-day.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been quite satisfactory for the last two weeks. Stock has been plentiful—almost too plentiful, to tell the truth. Up to this date we have not had a killing frost, which is something unusual, as we generally have a killing frost about the middle of September. Dahlias and cosmos are still arriving in wagon-loads, which no doubt is a detriment to the mums. Beauties and Killarneys are good. Brides and Maids are improving. Orchids and valley have been in good demand. Some single violets are to be had. Carnations are of good quality for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

Flower show matters are progressing nicely and all indications point to the best show ever. The final premium list was mailed out last week. Anyone who has not received it can secure one from Secretary Baur. The premium list should prove attractive, as there are a number of liberal prizes. Judging from the number of inquiries, the entries will probably be large. The press committee, under the supervision of Herman Junge, has been working overtime, and if the show lacks in publicity it will not be their fault. A banquet has been arranged for Thursday night, at which the visiting florists are to be entertained.

The Indianapolis florists will make a trip to Richmond on Wednesday, November 2. This should be an interesting trip, as the show mums will be at their best at that time. We are figuring on a large party to make the trip, and any neighboring florists are invited to get on the band wagon. For further information inquire of Secretary A. F. J. Baur, as he has the arrangements in hand.

a visitor last week. Mr. Coles is enthusiastic about his American Beauties, and says that he would not be surprised if he took first money for the best 100 Beauties at the show here.

Albert Pettit is cutting some fine mums from his pink sport of Touset. He has quite a stock of them, and intends to put them on the market next year.

George Gause, of Richmond, Ind., J. E. A. Haugh, of Anderson, and E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, were callers last week. Mr. Barnes reports a most successful year with his dahlias. The late fall has enabled him to make shipments up to date which run into several thousand blooms daily.

The Bertermann Bros. Co. was represented in the industrial parade last week with an auto delivery and several wagons, decorated for the occasion.

L. Benson has resumed operations on the conservatory in the rear of his residence, work on which has been tied up a number of times on account of unavoidable delays. He expects to get it done in time for use this winter.

Ed. Rankin has been cutting some good mums. He says he has entirely overhauled his heating plant and expects no trouble in that line this winter.

Ernest Rieman still has two more months on the jury. He says this jury work is not what it is cracked up to be.

Sidney Smith, chairman of the entertainment committee, says he has a few surprises for the guests at the banquet.

A. Wiegand & Sons report business good. This firm has had a large number of decorations so far this year.

The florists on the flower market are booming their business with an ad in the Indianapolis News.

Ed. Larsen, with Baur & Smith, received an injury from a sprayer which he was pumping, and as a result was away from his work for a few days.

Young & Smith have been shipping quantities of cattleyas. Their Brides, Maids and Killarneys are also arriving in good shape.

Carl Sonnenschmidt has been selected as one of the judges for the flower show.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market was strong last week as to quality and quantity, but there it ended. The retail trade throughout the city was apparently quite dull, as little stock was purchased, and the wholesalers were simply loaded down all the week with all kinds of seasonable stock of extra good quality, in spite of exceptionally low prices. Of course, much of the stock had to be dumped to make room for the new consignments.

Chrysanthemum blooms are now coming in increasing quantities each day, and this has caused a bad slump in roses and carnations; the price realized for most of the stock was especially low the latter part of the week. Long, fancy Beauties suffered greatly for want of demand, and violets showed the effects of the warm weather; the quality is not as good as it should be at this time of the year.

It is hoped that this week will bring better results, as a number of the retailers have advance orders for weddings and other social events.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association will hold its regular monthly meeting Monday evening, November 7. Secretary Fred C. Weber, Jr., says he is receiving a list of deadbeats and slow-pay customers from the members, which list will be printed in book form and sent out to all retailers for their protection.

friends in the trade hope to see him back at work this week.

The Missouri Botanical Garden will again hold a fall chrysanthemum show at the garden this season. The show will open after the big flower show in the Coliseum is ended.

J. F. Ammann and Henry Johann have now taken charge of the store in East St. Louis, Ill., which they recently bought from Miss M. Schnell.

C. Young & Sons Co. says that the fall bulb trade has been fully up to expectations. The plant business also has been good, with plenty of funeral work in the cut flower department.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society is sending out the official programs for its show, which starts Tuesday, November 8. The executive board held a meeting October 18, at which final arrangements were made. It is reported that there are now quite a few entries for the three $500 prizes, one each for roses, carnations and mums, and a big showing in these classes is expected.

C. A. Kuehn has been receiving large consignments of fancy carnations, roses and early mums, but George Schriefer, of the cut flower department, says that even the best stock moved slowly.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, and Wm. Winter, of Kirkwood, have been consigning some extra good stock in roses and carnations to H. G. Berning, and expect to have a big crop all season.

The Riessen Floral Co., on South Broadway, is just putting on the finishing touches in its interior decorations. Mrs. Buechel says trade was slow last week, but with cooler weather a good business season is looked for.

Miss May Burns has taken a position with Miss M. S. Newman at Olive and Spring streets. Miss Newman's window displays are always attractive.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. has now completed its improvements.

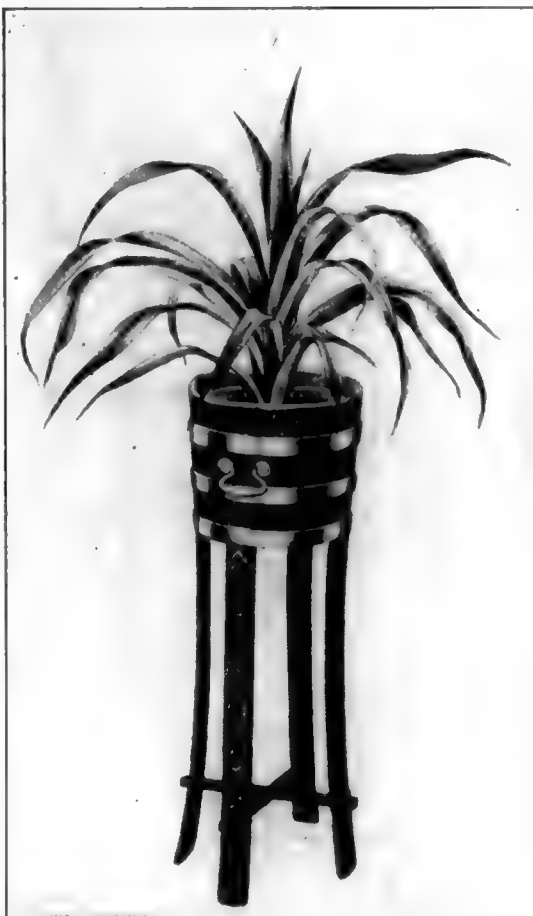

J. F. Windt's show house on Bayard avenue is looking fine these days with blooming plants and fancy cut stock.

The pretty window displays of Otto Sanders, Foster Floral Co., Riessen Floral Co. and A. Siegel, attract a great deal of attention, the main displays being chrysanthemum blooms.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Sometimes it seems that there are twice as many cut flowers as need be, while on bright days one-third of the cut only should go to Kamchatka to make things as they should be. Things are not as they should be—little wonder, with such enormous supplies of everything. The mild weather has lowered the quality of much stock and only fine flowers bring satisfactory prices. Chrysanthemums are in heavy supply. Yellow, when fine, sells best. Robert Halliday and Col. Appleton lead. In white, Beatrice May, Virginia Poehlmann and Ivory are seen. In pink, Pacific Supreme is excellent when well colored. There are other sorts, but these will suffice as examples. Tint of Gold sells poorly. Dahlias are nice, despite the nipping Jack Frost is giving them. Beauties and really choice valley are shy. Orchids are plentiful, but gardenias are not. The violet season has not opened in earnest yet. Choice white lilac has come a month earlier than usual. Ordinary grades of roses and carnations are abundant. Pompons are in, yellow and bronze, and a little mignonette.

The suburban debutante teas broaden the chasm between value of select and ordinary stock. The one realizes good prices even in these times of overproduction; the other is cruelly hard to sell at any price.

A Good Investment.

When the carnation growers learned that Henry M. Weiss had bought heavily of two novelties last spring, they shook their heads. Some said that was not the way to do; try a few and then you know. Others said that it was all right to buy heavily to distribute stock, but not for cut flowers. A few, a very few, believed it an able stroke. Then came the unfortunate break in the steam pipe, which badly scalded some of the novelties planted on a bench nearby. They recovered splendidly; Mr. Weiss said they looked none the worse for the burn. They grew well and were benched—and now?

Readers of The Review who watch the market price list may have noticed the following: "Carnations, the Wards, $4; select, $2 to $3; ordinary, $1 to $1.50." In plain English, that means that Henry M. Weiss & Sons are getting $4 a hundred for the carnations, Mrs. C. W. Ward, pink, and Alma Ward, white, today, when no other varieties are bringing that price. The market is badly overstocked with many flowers of ordinary varieties or of ordinary culture, sold below market price, and some not sold at all. Despite this condition, blooms of both Alma Ward and Mrs. Ward are eagerly sought at fancy price; the supply, though excellent, is unequal to the demand.

This clearly shows the possibilities of the cut flower market. It is not possible to get a price for only a few blooms, but it is possible to get a good price for a fine flower when there are enough blooms to make a market—that is, to enable the buyers to feel they can get this stock when they need it.

Three Specialties.

To give an extended account of a pleasant afternoon spent with Messrs. Eisele, Strohle and E. H. Michel in the greenhouses and grounds of the Henry A. Dreer corporation at Riverton would be an easy matter. Perhaps it would be more interesting to confine the impressions of that afternoon to three specialties—cocos, kentias and variegated pineapples. Riverton is famous for the first and for the second, and it will be famous for the third.

It is not many years since Cocos Weddelliana was the standard center for the table fernery. Everybody wanted one of these graceful little palms and the demand for them steadily grew. There were difficulties in the path of the cocos grower, just as there are in the path of a grower of anything else worth having—difficulties that had to be met with common sense and cultural skill; then they ceased to trouble. The first of these difficulties was the injury to the tap root that so often occurred when transplanting from the seed box to the pots. This was met by sowing seed in a cocos pot three inches deep. Then there was the yellows that so often attacked stock that was poorly grown and even occasionally stock that appeared to be well grown. So prevalent was the yellows that a large plant of this variety of cocos was rarely seen in perfect condition. A certain firmness of the right composition of soil, and skill in watering, to say nothing of temperature, went a long way toward overcoming this trouble, and then Mr. Eisele branched out and grew cocos in all sizes. I am told on excellent authority that nowhere else in the world can such a stock of Cocos Weddelliana be seen, in every size, of finest quality, in immense quantity. That briefly describes a view of the cocos range.

I am glad to say that made-up cocos do not seem in favor. Glad, because it always seemed to me this graceful palm suffered, from an artistic standpoint, by crowding. The specimens are now as perfect in finish as those of any other variety of palm, possessing a grace that outrivals all other varieties.

Kentias in both the leading varieties, both imported and domestic, have always been a feature at Riverton. The stock today is immense and, best of all, in magnificent condition. It is a pleasure to see the imported specimen kentias in decorative sizes go into their tubs without a blemish, as perfect as any grown from seedhood on the place; plants that can be depended on for immediate use, rivaling in durability under trying house and decorative conditions anything grown here. When a scarcity of kentias exists it is nearly always in the medium sizes, those most popular as house plants. A walk through the ranges shows no indication of such scarcity. The made-up plants are a feature. The general impression left by the kentias is that they are equal, if not superior, to anything seen in the market in former years.

The appearance of the golden pineapple as a commercial plant is surprising. There have been specimen Ananassa sativa variegata in some florists' collections for many years past, though they were but few in number. These specimens sold at a high price with fruit on them, their rarity greater than rare diamonds. A change had been predicted at Riverton two years ago; today it has come, a stock of 1,500 or more beautifully colored variegated pineapples in perfect condition, in, I think, 6-inch pots, officered, as it were, by larger plants, some of them showing fruit. The color was theirs, the durability was theirs, if the texture of foliage goes for anything. The only question remaining is the purchasing power of the dollar. I am assured on the best of authority that power has been greatly increased.

The future, then, of this new aspirant for popular favor seems to depend on the supply. A grower who called one day asked where in the world all that stock was grown. "Why," Mr. Eisele smilingly replied, "the woods in our new place are full of them." "Is the adjoining property for sale?" the visitor asked. "I fear there are none there," was the sorrowful reply.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

I cannot remember the wholesale market in New York experiencing a week of greater discouragement than it endured from October 17 to 23 this year. The long-continued drought, the summer temperature and lastly the pouring rain of Saturday, all combined to produce widespread demoralization. The shipments of chrysanthemums were enormous, and their domination of the market leaves little encouragement for the shippers of roses and carnations. Special Beauties were down to 10 cents on Saturday, and all the other roses were offered as low as $10 per thousand, in boxes. Carnations fell to the same figure, and even in small quantities could be purchased at $1 per hundred. There seemed to be no demand at the close of the week. Retail stores that had stocked up for a prospective Saturday trade found business paralyzed by the storm. The wholesalers' ice-boxes were bulging at the week end and the cellars were filled with chrysanthemums, beautiful stock that was a bargain at $4 per dozen in other years selling for less than half that figure.

So rapidly have the mums developed that some predict a shortage before Thanksgiving. It seems impossible that the tremendous inflow can be maintained much longer.

The demand for orchids and gardenias does not increase the value; if anything, the quotations are showing a lower range than that of a week ago. Lilies cannot advance while the mum supply continues, and good stock last week moved slowly at $3 to $4 per hundred.

The quality of the violets is improving, but still is far below the standard, while the increasing shipments have lowered the price to 30 cents per hundred for the best of them, the street securing ninety per cent of the stock at its own figures, the pavement merchants offering them at 10 cents per bunch. Growers may well pray for a freezing temperature.

The flower shows this week include the Red Bank exhibition on Wednesday and Thursday, the Glen Cove show on Thursday and Friday and the New Jersey Floricultural Society's exhibition at Orange, on Saturday. Lenox and Poughkeepsie have their exhibitions also this week, from Wednesday to Friday, so that visitors to all of them will have to keep moving night and day. Next week will be quite as interesting in the exhibition line, the Tarrytown show coming Tuesday to Thursday, with New Haven the same days, Dobb's Ferry on Friday and Saturday, with Mt. Kisco the same date with Sunday added. The big show, including the exhibit of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at Morristown, is November 2 to 4. The following week the exhibitions will close the season at Long Branch, Yonkers and in New York city, at the American Institute, and the Museum of Natural History.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are now at their flood tide and are likely to remain so for at least a fortnight longer. With the warm weather experienced during the last week, arrivals steadily increased and proved more than the market could dispose of. As a consequence, prices slumped considerably. Chrysanthemums dominate everything and seem more abundant than in any previous year. Few of even the best flowers bring over $1.50 to $2 per dozen, the lower grades selling as low as $2 per hundred. Carnations are plentiful and have taken a decided slump in price. Many were sold October 22 at $5 per thousand, and not a few lower. As yet stems are not long. Such growers as have good stems make better prices.

Roses are suffering with the rest and the only free selling sort is Mrs. Aaron Ward, which seems to have caught the popular favor. Richmond is something of a glut and hard to move. For White Killarney there has been a fair sale. They are as yet less plentiful than the pink variety. Violets want colder weather to improve their quality, which leaves much to be desired. They are only selling moderately well. Lilies are not overabundant, but lily of the valley is more plentiful. Outdoor flowers are over for the season. Some candytuft and cosmos are seen, but not of good quality. Some indoor grown cosmos carries fine flowers.

Orchids are coming into their own and are seen in almost every window. Gardenias are still of good quality. Quite a few white and yellow marguerites are now arriving and the first mignonette of the season. One or two growers expect to have Paper White narcissi this week.

With somewhat cooler weather at the start of the present week, business has picked up a little, but arrivals are heavy.

Pot plant trade is steadily improving. For fern dishes the demand is quite good. Flowering plants are scarce as yet, but an abundance of foliage plants are seen.

eral trade press representatives, sat down to a most excellent repast. The gathering included most of the big growers for the Boston market, such as Messrs. Nicholson, Elliott, A. Montgomery, the Peirce brothers, S. J. Goddard, A. Christensen, the Mann brothers and others. William C. Stickel, president of the corporation, presided. He at the outset specially welcomed the representatives of the trade papers and regretted that time would not allow of any speeches, as in previous years, but he later found time for a few talks. He traced the history of the wholesale flower market movement from its inception to the present time, and spoke of the great benefit it had proved to be for so many growers. He stated that the directors had voted to declare a dividend of ten per cent to stockholders November 1.

The secretary's records were duly accepted. The treasurer's report for the year ending September 30 showed total receipts of $20,859.30. New Imported Florists' Baskets

Send for $10.00 Sample Order, Our Selection. We can please you

Our line of baskets contains many absolutely new designs that have never been seen in this country. It is all freshly imported stock from Europe, and is the work of true artists. We want to send you our catalogue—it shows many distinctive styles—but we need your name and address. All goods sent C. O. D.

turned on, consumed 1,000 tons of coal daily; 192 firemen were employed in four-hour shifts of sixty-four each. In Europe cattle and sheep were grazing in fields with grass a foot or more in height, and everything looked luxuriant and green, in marked contrast to our droughty condition. The French terraced vineyards, the gardens, parks and boulevards, the network of underground railways in Paris, the river Seine with its heavy traffic and some of the leading buildings were spoken of. The German Rhine reminded him of our Hudson, the scenery being very beautiful. The Cologne cathedral was grand.

Other short addresses were made by J. L. Miller, A. S. Parker, who is an excellent humorist, J. T. Butterworth, who discussed market conditions and, quite naturally, finished up with an orchid talk. Robert Cameron spoke forcibly and entertainingly for the press. President Stickel and Eber Holmes completed the list of speakers, bringing to a close a most enjoyable evening.

Various Notes.

William Nicholson, of Framingham, is sending in some extra fine Pennsylvania, Matchless, Miss Alice Byron and other chrysanthemums. In carnations, Pink Delight and Dorothy Gordon are proving prolific, while Scarlet Glow is promising. Marguerites are being cut in quantity and the first mignonette of the season was picked last week. Mr. Nicholson will visit the Lenox and Morristown shows and will officiate as a judge at the latter.

Frederick Bell, of Stoughton, is the newest stall holder at the Boston Flower Exchange. Thomas Pegler handles his flowers.

J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, is bringing in fine lots of marguerites to 2 Park street. Mr. Simpson has many thousands of mums, chiefly late varieties, from which he is just starting to cut.

William A. Riggs, whose purchase of the John G. Forbes place in Auburn-dale was recorded in last week's Review, has been superintendent gardener for E. A. Clark, of Jamaica Plain, for quite a number of years. He is a skillful grower, as the numerous prizes secured at the Boston shows attest. Mr. Riggs is a Scotchman and prominent in local Scottish organizations.

J. Leach & Sons, of North Easton, are just starting with their new crop of lily of the valley, which is the best seen in the local market. They also have a fine lot of Bonnaffon mums. In carnations they have a light pink seedling almost intermediate between Fair Maid and Enchantress, which is proving a fine seller.

Chrysanthemum Chrysolora, exhibited by E. D. Smith & Co. before the local committee October 22, arrived in fine shape and has all the earmarks of a first-class commercial yellow.

William A. Walke, of Salem, has a splendid lot of cyclamens and pans of poinsettias for the holidays. He is quite a specialist in lilies and is cutting a fine lot daily. His flowers are handled at 2 Park street by J. M. Cohen.

The Willow Hill Greenhouses have a nice lot of pot chrysanthemums, the majority being of the single-flowered type, which are now quite popular.

D. Horrigan, of East Foxboro, who is one of the leaders in marguerites for the Boston market, is already sending in good consignments of the yellow variety. Spanish irises are Mr. Horrigan's other specialty.

Edward MacMulkin, during the discussion following the reading of his paper at the club meeting October 18, denounced the agitation against the street fakers in unmeasured terms and said they were a direct benefit to the cut flower trade, a statement which brought warm applause from his audience.

Edgar Bros. are cutting some extra fine flowers of Chrysanthemum Clemantine Touse, which also proves a good seller.

William H. Elliott is cutting Rhea Reid roses with stems nearly thirty-six inches long. This sells much better than Richmond, which is now something of a glut. Safrano and Bon Silene are both coming of good quality from Madbury. The new Mrs. Waddell, of a reddish orange color, while in bud is pleasing, while the new variegated Killarney sport is unique. Mrs. Aaron Ward is selling better than any other rose with Mr. Elliott at present.

John K. M. L. Farquhar's name has been substituted for that of Walter C. Baylies as vice-presidential nominee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. The annual election of the society comes November 19.

From S. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I., extra fine flowers of Mrs. Peacock, Pink Ivory and White Ivory chrysanthemums are seen at C Park street.

Alexander Porter, of Woburn, is handling the best sweet peas of the new season's crop seen this season.

All the leading retailers are featuring orchids, a lot of Cattleya labiata and Oncidium varicosum Rogersii being the most popular varieties. At the stores of Newman & Sons, Thomas Galvin, Wax Bros., S. Hoffman, Julius A. Zinn, Henry R. Comley, Philip Carbone, Edward MacMulkin, William E. Doyle, F. H. Houghton, N. M. Silverman and Henry Penn, among others, orchids are now being made a leading window attraction.

William Nicholson speaks highly of Chrysanthemum Edmond Albe as a commercial variety. It has a globular incurved flower of a charming satin pink color.

Eber Holmes is this year growing 2,500 plants of Mrs. Aaron Ward at the Montrose Greenhouses and likes it. He is getting some excellent Killarney and Richmond now.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, which will come November 15, nominations of officers for 1911 will be made. There will also be a lecture the same evening and an exhibition of late chrysanthemums.

The Massachusetts Horticultural Society will offer three gold and six silver medals at the national show of the S. A. F. in Boston next spring, the prizes to be awarded by its own plant and flower committee. The board of control of the national show met in Boston October 25 and reports were encouraging, the rented spaces showing a steady gain.

had several decorations last week, and among them was the decoration of the Gilchrist store, the largest department store in Boston, using over 600 plants on the job. They had several orders for the funeral of the late Julia Ward Howe, among which were telegraph orders from all over the U. S. and quite a few from abroad. Orchids, valley, and red roses were used extensively in the work.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.

Committees of florists and nurserymen are acting in conjunction with W. S. Dunning, manager of the Antlers hotel, in making preparations for the first annual Antlers chrysanthemum show, to be held in the ballroom of the hotel, November 8 and 9. The proceeds will be presented to the Colorado Springs Day Nursery. Carl U. Fohn, grower at Glen Eyrie, will have direct charge of the show, and will be assisted by John Berry, superintendent of the city park system, who will take charge of the decorations.

The Pikes Peak Floral Co., F. F. Crump, the Hayden Floral Co., all of this city; the Grand View Floral Co., of Colorado City; the Park Floral Co., of Denver; H. Schmidt, Mrs. E. K. Jewett, the Antlers greenhouse, and a score of other growers of flowers will be among the exhibitors, and the florists have agreed that the show shall be made an annual event.

An auction of the exhibits is being planned for the last night of the show. The Day Nursery Association will appoint a committee to work with the management of the show.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Business remains about the same as usual, though in the latter part of last week it was pretty lively. Carnations are in good supply now, with the demand also good. They retail at 50 cents per dozen. Good roses retail at $1.50 per dozen. Mums will soon have full sway, and then carnations will take a back seat for a while. Mums retail at $2.50 per dozen. Some nice snapdragons sell at 75 cents per dozen. Violets sell fairly well at 75 cents per hundred blooms, though with the advent of cooler weather these will sell much better. Funeral work was good last week.

The florists are all making nice window displays these days. On Wednesday night, October 12, there was considerable frost, but it did not kill all the outdoor flowers. Dahlias remained in full bloom, besides lots of other outside flowers.

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres.,
L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E.
Kendal, Cleveland, O.

SEVERAL of the Holland bulb exporters now have permanent representatives resident in this country.

PEA deliveries at the Wisconsin and Michigan growing stations, now about all in, do not afford any hope of relief.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH, Cincinnati, and a party of friends leave November 1 to spend the month hunting and fishing in Florida.

BEANS are not in any better situation than before. The weather has been good and bad by turns and the finish of the crops has been uneven.

THE southern seedsmen are hustling the catalogue makers, for they want to have the 1911 books in the hands of the planters by December 1.

THE Reichardt & Schulte Co., Houston, Tex., has moved into its recently completed new building, with seven times the floor space of the old building.

W. D. GARLINGTON, formerly of Fort Worth, Tex., has opened a brokerage house at Dallas and will book accounts for seed potatoes, field seeds, fruits and vegetables.

IF a wholesale seedsman asked his regular customers the prices he feels in his heart that seeds are worth there would be more excitement than the seed trade has seen in years.

THE southwest has had a fine autumn, with good rains. Conditions are excellent for all who till the soil and the seedsmen are busy continuously. Their only worry is as to what deliveries will be.

O. S. JONES, president of the O. S. Jones Seed Co., Sioux Falls, says it is much to his regret that they grew few peas in South Dakota this year, for what few were put in did quite well this year, much better than in 1909.

BECAUSE a seedsman will let a regular customer have, at a price, a small lot of peas, beans, or any one of a dozen other articles, it does not follow that the buyer may increase the quantity at will or that some other buyer can get the same stock at any price.

of Agriculture, chairman; Commissioner of Internal Revenue Roy Cabell, and Solicitor Charles Earl, of the Department of Commerce and Labor, charged with the administration of the new insecticide law, gave a public hearing to the manufacturers of insecticides October 20 with the object of obtaining information for drawing up regulations under the new law. The small attendance limited their discussion almost entirely to the subject of Paris green and the wild flower from which insect powder is made.

James A. Blanchard, president of the James A. Blanchard Co., of New York city, gave a general outline of the whole subject. Dr. Leon D. Adler, of the Adler Color & Chemical Works, set forth the varying grades of Paris green and how difficult it was to make a stable article. Dr. Adler concluded his argument with the request that no new CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

The overstock of the market is still with us. There is warm, spring-like weather, with carloads of stock and practically no demand.

Dahlias and cosmos are still to be had. Carnations, roses and mums are abundant. Lilies, violets and valley are plentiful, but the call for them is only fair and Beauties simply cannot be moved. All are praying for a frost soon, in the hope that it will do away with the outside stock and put some backbone into the market.

Various Notes.

G. M. Naumann has about completed the moving of his plant to a new location on Phillips street.

The F. R. Williams Co. is sending in a fine cut of pompon mums.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is cutting a fine lot of Killarney and White Killarney.

The Jones-Russell Co. has been showing some wreaths, statice and other straw flowers that are new and attract attention.

C. A. Bramley has been taking auto trips to the different small towns about Cleveland.

E. G. Wilson, of Euclid and Fifty-fifth street, has been showing some especially tasteful windows of late. B.

Oskaloosa, Ia.—Theo. A. Greeve, who started business last year on North Seventh street, is erecting another greenhouse, 25x80 feet. He is also installing a new boiler.

TOMATOES FOR FORCING.

I should like to know what is the best variety of tomato for forcing.

F. A. D.

Comet Forcing tomato seems to be the leading variety yet with most of the growers. Lorillard is also popular, but some of the early outdoor varieties are also good. Bonny Best, Wealthy and Earliana are among these early varieties. Stone and Beauty are larger and later, but give good satisfaction with some growers.

H. G.

FORMALDEHYDE DRENCH.

Can you give me some information about the use of formaldehyde as a fungicide or insecticide? Please give me a formula for its use on the sand of cutting benches, on soil that contains the grubs of red ants or for nematodes on the roots of tomatoes.

R. B.

One to 200 is the proportion recommended for good results, or one quart to a 50-gallon barrel of water. Apply with a sprinkling can and soak the sand or soil thoroughly. Just sprinkling lightly on the surface will not give the best results. Perhaps some subscriber can give more thorough directions from recent experiments.

H. G.

FORCING STRAWBERRIES.

I should be thankful to you for some information about the forcing of strawberries. I have some nice runners and should like to know how to treat them, and also how to winter them so as to have the fruit to pick about the middle of April. What I should like to know principally is, whether they would have to freeze any length of time before forcing.

F. A. D.

It is too late this season to do anything with your strawberries with the view of forcing them this winter. These runners should be potted up about the first part of August and well cared for. Later they should be shifted into 5-inch or 6-inch pots and plunged in cold frames, and then encouraged to grow and become well established before freezing weather. They should be frozen and given a rest before bringing them inside to force.

for it was an "ill wind" that blew across the state October 17 and 18, and one that will remain fixed in the horticultural annals of the state for some time. At Tampa the greatest velocity attained was sixty miles an hour, but in this vicinity and southward it probably attained more nearly seventy miles. The heaviest gales prevailed on the night of October 17, when the direction changed from the east and swung around to the west, via the north.

The damage was not nearly as great as was at first supposed, the worst being the loss of a considerable number of ornamental trees, some of them seventy-five feet in height and with a trunk diameter of two feet, including oaks, pines, hickories, etc.

At the Royal Palm Nurseries, in this place, quite a large number of lights were blown out of the greenhouses, and the main packing house was twisted a little out of "gee." In the nursery rows some young "buds" were torn away from the stakes.

The loss to the citrus crop cannot yet be determined, though throughout this county generally the loss in fruit blown from the trees probably does not exceed ten per cent. The estimated loss of grape-fruit in the magnificent Atwood grove, some four miles north of this town, was about 5,000 boxes out of a possible 50,000. Of course, a large per cent of that remaining may be badly damaged from thorning and bruising. Fortunately, the fruit was green and mostly small. Had it been later in the season, with the fruit ripened, the entire crop would have been ruined.

Five Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful a branch of the business that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

The Review originated the idea of the gathering and grouping of these cards—as a means of turning a penny for itself while performing a valuable service for its readers. There have been imitators, yes, but the legitimate efforts of others to make use of the idea has had the usual result of emphasizing the superiority of the original, and The Review now finds itself required to devote five pages to the Directory of Retail Florists.

While there is a large daily exchange of orders by mail and wire between retailers in distant cities, it is such an event as the death of a prominent citizen that brings out the special usefulness of this Directory. The death of David B. Hill last week brought a flood of orders to Albany; the death of Senator Dolliver, of Iowa, would have done the same for any florist of Fort Dodge had one been represented in these pages. The following letter from a Boston retailer tells the story:

"We had a large number of orders for the funeral of Julia Ward Howe, among which were telegraph orders from florists all over the United States and quite a few from abroad."—Penn the Florist, Boston, October 20, 1910.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders. They are growing more numerous every year.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are the queens of trade and have unceremoniously pushed everything else aside in public estimation. They will hold the sway from now until Thanksgiving. But this city is not what can be called a mum market; 15 cents is about the limit for the popular price for a single bloom, no matter how large it may be or how long the stem. Some pretty fine blooms are now coming to market, white, yellow and pink being the only salable ones.

Rose growers are holding back their crops and will reap the harvest after the mums are gone. Carnations are coming in more plentifully and in better quality than previously, and the outlook is better than it was a fortnight ago. Prices are normal. The supply is sufficient for all demands and few special calls are made. Funeral work is about average, while a few wedding functions and sociables help out.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, which was held at the rooms of the association in Swarts' hall, 98 Westminster street, October 17, was one of the best meetings that have been held in two years. The officers were much encouraged and the coming meetings this season are certain to reflect the awakening manifested at this meeting. President Robert Johnston was in the chair and reported that ex-President William Appleton, who has been seriously ill, was slightly improved.

A spirited discussion followed an interesting paper read by James Dillon, head gardener at Swan Point cemetery, on "Trees and Shrubs." One name was added to the membership list, and announcement was made that at the November meeting the annual election of officers will be held and the entertainment committee will have a special program.

Various Notes.

John Sharkey, who is in charge of the planting of the young maples that are being set out on the streets of this city by the Evening Bulletin through a contract with George Johnson & Son, received a slight shock from an electric wire a few days ago.

William Hay is cutting some fine roses in his new houses at Oaklawn. Since disposing of his range on Dyer avenue to the Burke Rose Co., he has devoted himself entirely to his new houses and the results are highly satisfactory. At present he is growing nothing but roses.

Gibson Bros. have installed a large new Lord & Burnham boiler at their houses in Newport.

Eugene McCarron has been busy the last fortnight with decorations and cut flowers for several east side weddings.

Matthew Macnair has returned from a several months' trip to Europe, during which he visited several of the continental countries.

Last spring William H. Fly took charge of the greenhouses at the head of South Main street, Woonsocket, and, assisted by Howard Dickey, began putting things into shape. Over 2,500 chrysanthemums now afford evidence of some of the work done.

The old Jurgens greenhouses, on Mill street, Newport, where the now large business of growing lily of the valley in season and out of season, for the trade of the country, was begun a quarter of a century ago, are now being torn down.

A. W. Vose & Son are completing the erection of two greenhouses at their range on Cumberland Hill. These are 38x100 and 24x68, respectively.

Samuel Kinder, city forester of Bristol, was a visitor to Boston last week, to secure young trees for planting on the streets of his town.

Several of the growers in this vicinity complain that they are having trouble with bulbs and other imported stock being held too long at the custom-house.

James J. King has begun the erection of a dwelling house and a greenhouse on his recently acquired property on Plainfield street.

Wedding decorations have been keeping James B. Canning, of Smith street, on the jump lately.

S. Kinder & Bro., of Bristol, have a seedling red carnation of which they think pretty well. It is not named yet. It is a profuse bloomer, with a strong

OF FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertiser

PACIFIC COAST.

VICTORIA, B. C.

Trade Organizations in the Province.

During the last few months a concerted and successful effort has been made to organize the florist, nursery and seed trades of British Columbia. The direct cause was an official notice to amend the Provincial Horticultural Act so as to include all greenhouse stock in compulsory inspection and fumigation. Realizing the advantage of concerted efforts, an organization called the British Columbia Florists', Nurserymen's and Seedsmen's Association was formed. A. J. Woodward, of Victoria, was elected president, and H. Tidy, of New Westminster, secretary. A thoroughly representative deputation was appointed and waited on the government, which readily agreed to kill the amendment, and did so.

October 5 this parent society held its first annual meeting, at New Westminster. The officers then elected were: President, S. S. Gordon, New Westminster; vice-president, Mr. Wallace, of the Flewings Gardens, Victoria; secretary-treasurer, H. Tidy, New Westminster. Messrs. Hillman, Davis and Brown, of Vancouver, and Talbot, of Victoria, were appointed as the executive committee.

Three local societies have been successfully organized since the parent society was formed, and they are all doing good work. They are the Westminster branch, of which H. Tidy is president; the Vancouver branch, of which J. Brown is president, and the Victoria branch, with A. J. Woodward as president. The constitution says that "the object of these societies is to bring together the florists, nurserymen and seedsmen of the province * * * for the interchange of ideas," etc. The fees of all except the Victoria branch are: First year (1910-1911), $2; each succeeding year, $5.

There is, in connection with the provincial department of agriculture, a board of horticulture composed of five members, one of whom at present is also the official in charge of the working of the department which has charge of all matters relating to nursery stock, fruits and vegetables imported into, or at present in, the province, as the other four members are all fruit growers or ranchers. The fact that there were no practical florists or nurserymen on the board was considered an injustice by the trade, and individual efforts have been made during the last two or three years to have the matter remedied. The government, however, always made the excuse that there were no vacancies. The lamentable killing of the late Captain Elliston created a vacancy, which was promised by the acting minister of agriculture to the florists, and A. J. Woodward was unanimously appointed, at the meeting of the parent body in New Westminster, as the trade representative. However, in spite of promises, the appointment went to another fruit grower. A letter was sent by the minister of agriculture to Mr. Woodward, "regretting," etc., and saying that, as soon as the House met, legislation would be introduced to amend the act so as to give the trade representation. This, however, for good reasons, was not considered satisfactory. The executive committee met and a resolution was passed which will be sent to the government, clearly setting forth the trade's grievance, its probable cause and its remedy.

At the organization meeting of the Victoria branch, certain changes were made in the constitution, as applied to that branch, so as to admit professional gardeners to membership, make the first year's fee $1 instead of $2, and leave the future dues open for the present, instead of making them $5, as in the other societies.

In the description of the new sweet pea, Jimmie Bland, in a previous report, Mr. Bland was wrongly stated to be secretary of the Vancouver society. Mr. Bland is secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver Island (Victoria) Horticultural Society. F. B.

The Market.

A wave of unprecedented warm weather for this season has had the effect of bringing into town an abundance of all kinds of flowers, especially such as mums and carnations. Roses, too, seem to feel the heat greatly and we have had an overabundance of them for the last week. The asters are holding on much better than they usually do and there are still quantities of really good flowers in the market. Although their season is about over, one hates to see their finish, as they have proven an extra good seller this year, the public never seeming to tire of them. Mums are now in their glory and the prices have dropped quite a little since last week. Carnations hold their own, but some of the lighter colors are rather hard to dispose of. In roses only the best sell well, but these bring especially good returns. Valley is plentiful and moves slowly. Japanese lilies, except longiflorum, are over for the year, and the same can be said of gladioli, although a few late beds will be in evidence for a few weeks yet. Business is not as brisk as we should like to see it, and everyone seems to think that a good shower of rain would do some good.

The Flower Show.

The regular fall exhibition of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the California State Floral Society was held in the Fairmount hotel, October 20, 21 and 22. Although not as large as those of some former years, the stock shown and the interest taken, both by the trade and by the public, was fully as great as at any other flower show. The showing of carnations and outside-grown roses, owing to the excessive heat during the last few weeks, was not as extensive as it might have been, while the displays of orchids, dahlias, ferns, stove plants, mums, tuberous begonias and miscellaneous stock were the best ever shown here. Too much praise cannot be given to the gentlemen who attended to the details, and Messrs. Matraia, Plath and Atkinson deserve much credit for their skill in making the affair such a huge success. Among the exhibitors of chrysanthemums, the Redwood Nursery Co. had the largest and most-comprehensive showing. They captured about a dozen first prizes for specimens in pots, in single vases, and for collections from a dozen to fifty blooms. Enemoto Bros. and Domoto Bros. also received first awards for the same kinds of flowers.

In roses, F. Rosa took first prize for a magnificent display of Kaiserin A. Victoria and Beauties, as did E. W. McLellan & Co. for My Maryland, Bride and Richmond. The H. M. Sanborn Co. received a second award on vases of Beauty, Bride and Kate Moulton. On carnations, Enemoto Bros. received first prizes for best fifty flowers, also for their collection and seedlings. J. A. Carbone showed some extra good outside-grown Mrs. John Laing and Ulrich Brunner. William Kettlewell drew about a dozen first prizes for his collections of dahlias, herbaceous perennials, hardy annuals, vegetables and hanging baskets. J. W. Bagge, for single dahlias, received first award, and Paul Uhlmann received second. P. H. Eckelman got first for a large vase of Minnie Burtle dahlias and the Golden Gate Park also showed a large assortment of these and other kinds of hardy blooming shrubbery.

The best award for tuberous begonias went to F. W. Breen, with James Niven a close second. The display of orchids by the MacRorie-McLaren Co., comprising thirty-eight varieties, was the most elaborate showing in the hall. The arrangement was decidedly artistic and attracted much attention. They received several first prizes for these and also for foliage plants and specimen ferns. J. A. Carbone, of West Berkeley, also had a splendid showing of orchids, ferns, carnations and roses. He exhibited a beautiful specimen of C. Gaskelliana and received an additional first prize for a specimen of phalaenopsis.

The exhibit of ferns was large and H. Plath was awarded many first prizes for the various varieties of nephrolepis, as well as for dracaenas. W. Hill got first on crotons and two firsts for specimen cactileas. C. F. Crocker was first on Primula obconica, dahlias and mums. E. James Co. received firsts on nephrolepis and cyclamen in pots.

The department devoted to table decorations was the center of much admiration and the prizes were awarded to J. Seulerberger for the most artistic decoration and the H. M. Sanborn Co. for the second best. The MacRorie-McLaren Co. also exhibited a large lot of bay trees of various sizes and shapes.

Various Notes.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THE Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., has just let contracts for a large addition to its packing shed facilities and also storage cellars where bay trees and other half hardy plants can be stored through the winter. It also is extending the office space and adding to the drafting room.

STORAGE OF NURSERY STOCK.

[An extract from a paper by L. C. Corbett, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture, at the request of the Committee on Refrigeration for the International Congress now being held at Vienna.]

The modern commercial nursery handles such an immense volume of stock, of such a varied nature, and possesses a patronage scattered through so wide a territory that in order to successfully handle and pack the product and deliver it for spring planting, the old practice of heeling in the stock has been abandoned, to give place to the modern system of storing in retarding houses. The season for handling the stock is so short, because the plants start so quickly in the spring, even when dug in the fall and heeled in according to the old practice, that it is practically impossible to operate extensive nurseries on such a basis. Small nurseries and plant gardens, designed to meet the requirements of local purchasers only, can be successfully operated without retarding buildings or the intervention of cold storage. In extensive enterprises, however, where the sales lists reach thousands of people, and where the distribution is made through a number of states possessing a variety of soil and climatic conditions, the distribution must extend over a considerable period of time, a period of time much greater than is allowed by the normal behavior of the plant; therefore artificial means must be resorted to in order to hold the nursery stock in suitable condition for shipment, to provide for this wide distribution.

Types of Structure for Retarding.

The type of structure best suited for the work of storing nursery stock is determined by the quantity of stock to be handled and the location of the nursery. In those sections where long, uniformly cold winters prevail, the cellar or half-underground structure is satisfactory. Farther south, where conditions are less severe, and where there is greater variation in temperature within short periods of time, the above-ground type of structure, insulated by providing multiple partitions of boards and paper in the outside walls, gives better satisfaction than any other type of structure. In these southern territories cellars become too damp, and are influenced by soil temperature during the late spring months to such an extent as to greatly lessen their usefulness as retarding houses. The above-ground structure with walls packed with sawdust is not satisfactory, because the humid conditions which must be maintained within the structure, in order to successfully preserve the nursery stock, greatly lessens the life of the structure. At the same time, a moist wall packing is a less efficient insulator than a dry one. Air spaces are, therefore, most satisfactory, particularly if the spaces are made horizontally, rather than perpendicularly, so as to prevent rapid circulation of air. It is necessary that these buildings be frost-proof, as well as capable of holding or retaining cold temperatures for a long period.

Built on the Unit or Room Plan.

Large structures, designed for this purpose, are built on a unit scheme. There are different storage rooms provided, each room being stored with material for a given geographical area. Those containing stock to be planted first are emptied quickest, and those which contain stock to go to most northern localities are not opened after the temperature has been once reduced, more than is absolutely necessary, until time for packing out arrives.

Besides being built on the unit or room plan, these buildings are provided with ventilating apparatus which can be controlled to regulate the circulation of air in the rooms as much as possible. While circulation of air is desirable, great caution is necessary in ventilating the rooms to so manipulate it as to allow the entrance of air only at times when the temperature of the room will not be raised above the desired point, or lowered beyond the safe limit for the stock in storage. Deterioration in stored stock is largely due to changes in humidity within the storage house, brought about by fluctuations in temperature. Uniformity of temperature is of greater importance than low temperature. Besides the value of the retarding house as a means of facilitating the work of the nursery during the digging and packing season, the retarding house is a great safeguard to the nurseryman. Little stock is injured from storage in buildings with a uniform temperature, as compared with the loss of stock which is dug and heeled in. Much stock was lost under the old system from severe winter conditions, but because the temperature is never allowed to reach the danger point in the retarding houses this is not possible. Storage houses are, therefore, a great safeguard to the business.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The weather seems to be the first thing to comment on these days, because it has had a great deal to do with trade in general. Better weather than we have had in the last two weeks could not have been asked for, it being most of the time more like summer than anything else. We have in the last two days had our first frosts of the season, but they were slight and did little damage. Consequently outdoor stock has to a great extent killed business for the stock grown under glass, and at the same time these bright, warm days have brought stock of all kinds into good crop.

Chrysanthemums are now in their glory, and are arriving in immense quantities. This, however, is not regretted by the Dayton florists, for the date of All Saints' day has been changed to a week earlier in this city. Many bouquet orders are being booked for this date. White chrysanthemums are especially plentiful, and these, of course, are the variety in demand at this time. It might be said that trade during the last two weeks has been seemingly controlled by funeral work, for which the demand is exceedingly variable. Roses of all kinds are quite plentiful, with the exception of pink, on which crops are a little short. Carnations are fine and the cuts are increasing daily, while the demand also keeps up well. Giganteums are scarce just now, and callas are just commencing to come in.

Various Notes.

A. Carey spent October 22 and 23 in Cincinnati.

The Miami Floral Co. is among those who feel grateful for this warm weather, as the new buildings are still unfinished and the heating system is not yet in good working order.

Visitors last week were: William Frisch, Piqua, O.; Henry Ehrhardt, Sidney, O., and Mr. Wagner, of the Wagner Greenhouses, Sandusky, O. R. B.

SONG—WELCOME HOME.

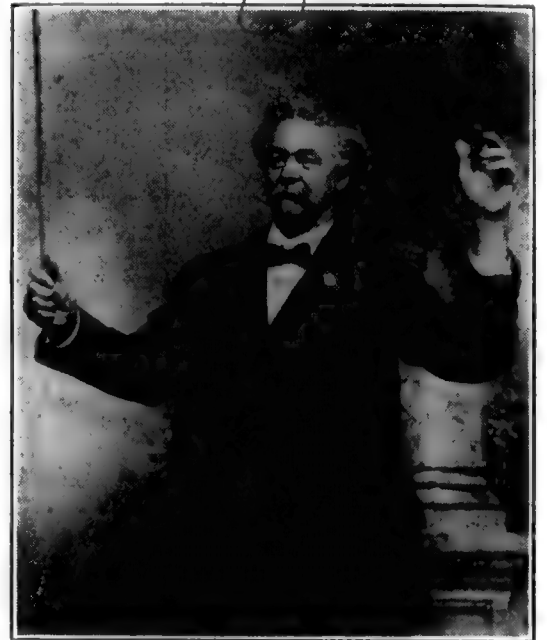

Tune — When Johnnie Comes Marching Home Again.

When Aschmann comes sailing home again, hurrah! hurrah!
A warm-hearted welcome he'll obtain, hurrah! hurrah!
The florists will gather from far and near To greet his return with hearty good cheer,
For we'll all be glad when Aschmann comes sailing home.

He has sent us pictures of other lands, hurrah! hurrah!
He never neglects the jolly home band, hurrah! hurrah!
We will go to see the plants he has bought,
To serve us well the best he has sought.
Won't we be pleased when Aschmann comes sailing home!

A glorious sight we shall see this fall, hurrah! hurrah!
The best of Europe for each and all, hurrah! hurrah!
For size and health, for color and price,

(Composed by one of Mr. Aschmann's florist friends.)

We shall hold our breath, they'll look so nice;
We'll hustle and buy when Aschmann comes sailing home.

We hope his journey will pay him well, hurrah! hurrah!
He has bought for us that we may sell, hurrah! hurrah!
So we'll sing a song with a rich refrain,
We're heartily glad he is home again,
A cheer from all when Aschmann comes sailing home.

AZALEA INDICA

Owing to the cold and wet weather this summer in Belgium and the large demand for azaleas all over the world this year, Azalea Indica is very scarce and high in price, but in spite of all these facts I want every florist to know that I have just arrived from Europe with a large cargo of Azalea Indica, the finest stock in Ghent. My grower on the other side has done justice to me this year, again reserving for me the cream of his 200-acre azalea field, giving me my own pick. When a cigar maker smokes a cigar, what will he smoke? The worst he has? I should say not. He'll smoke the best he has, the one with the finest aroma, giving his customers evidence of the quality of his goods. So do I. What I force for my own use is certainly good enough for my customers.

Now is the time to force Azalea Indica for Christmas. What varieties will you force? Surely the ones, the early varieties, that I know I can get in in time for Xmas. There is Deutsche Perle, one of the best early double whites. We have plants full of buds, at 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Simon Mardner, you know this variety well. It is an early deep double pink variety, 60c, 75c, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeana, one of the old standard, well-favored, large, double, variegated varieties, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. How about Apollo? This is a deep, single red variety, always full of buds, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Didn't you ever hear of that earliest of all varieties, Mme. Petrick? This is a variety hard to beat, pink, double flowers, full of buds and never fails to bloom. A child can bring this variety into bloom for Christmas. It is very scarce and high in price this fall in Belgium. You must have a few of them anyhow, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

EASTER VARIETIES

For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Thelerman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, varie-gated, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

Dracaena Bruanti, 22 to 25 inches, 35c, 40c to 50c.

Latania Borbonica, 25 to 30 inches high, 40c to 50c.

All plants 25 at 100 rate. Cash with order, please. All plants must travel at risk of purchaser only.

DREER'S HARDY PERENNIAL PHLOXES

We are the largest growers of Perennial Phlox in the world, having this season over a half million field-grown plants in stock. The collection offered below embraces every known color in this gorgeous race of summer-flowering plants, and we are prepared to furnish many of the later as well as the older standard varieties in large quantities at a low uniform price. The plants we offer are all strong one-year-old field-grown, and will make a fine display of flowers next season.

Albion (Medium). One of our own introductions; producing very large panicles of pure white flowers with a faint aniline-red eye.

Aglae Adanson (Medium). Immense flowers, snow-white with red eye.

Antonin Mercie (Medium). Light ground color; upper half of petal deeply suffused bluish lilac; large, white halo.

Bacchante (Tall). Tyrian rose, with crimson carmine eye.

Belle Alliance (Medium). White, with large pure red eye.

Clara Benz (Dwarf). Lovely carmine-rose, with darker eye.

Colibri (Tall). White, with crimson carmine centre; very late.

Consul H. Trost (Medium). Pure red, with bright French purple eye.

Champs Elysee (Dwarf). A very bright rosy magenta of an effective shade.

Coquelicot (Dwarf). A fine pure scarlet, with crimson-red eye.

Caran d'Ache (Medium). Geranium-red with old rose shadings and white eye; very effective.

De Miribel (Medium). White, suffused with bright rosy scarlet, red eye.

Diadem (Dwarf). A fine dwarf pure white.

Danton (Medium). Scarlet, with pure red eye.

Etna (Medium). Crimson red, suffused with fiery red; cherry-red eye.

Eugene Danzanvillier (Tall). Lilac, shading white towards the edges; large white centre.

Edmond Boissier (Dwarf). Bright reddish-violet, with large white halo.

Eclairer (Tall). Brilliant rosy magenta, with large lighter halo; an excellent variety.

Frau Dora Umgeller (Tall). Crimson red; a strong free-flowering late variety.

Gruppenkonigin (Tall). Delicate pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.

George A. Stroblein (Medium). Bright scarlet, with crimson-red eye; does not bleach.

General Giovaninelli (Dwarf). Bright Tyrian rose, with light shadings at the base of each petal; a pure red eye; very effective.

General Van Hentsz (Medium). Scarlet, with rose shadings and crimson-red eye.

Hermine (Dwarf). The dwarfest variety in our collection, never exceeding ten inches in height; pure white flowers of good size; early; unequalled for bordering; a perfect little gem.

PRICE: Any of the above General Collection, $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

Helena Vacaresco (Dwarf). Very large-flowering dwarf; white.

H. O. Wijers (Tall). Glistening white, with bright crimson-carmine eye.

Henry Murger (Tall). Beautiful variety; white, crimson-carmine centre.

Henry Marcel (Medium). Pure red with very bright salmon shading.

Henry Royer (Medium). Tyrian rose, with lighter shadings; large flower, dwarf.

Jules Cambon (Medium). Brilliant reddish-purple, with exceptionally large, pure white centre.

Jeanne d'Aro (Tall). A good standard late white.

Louis Blanc (Tall). Reddish violet, with purple shadings and darker eye.

La Vague (Medium). Pure mauve, with aniline-red eye.

Le Mahdi (Tall). Deep reddish violet, with darker eye.

La Foudre (Tall). Rich, glowing French purple, shading crimson.

Louise Abbema (Dwarf). Very large dwarf, pure white, of fine form.

Le Prophete (Dwarf). Bright violet-rose, large light halo and bright rose eye; fine.

Mme. Paul Dutrie (Tall). A delicate lilac-rose, reminding one of some of the beautiful soft pink Orchids. The flowers are very large and borne in panicles of immense size.

Mozart (Tall). Ground color white, suffused salmon, aniline-red eye.

Mrs. Jenkins (Tall). The best tall early white for massing.

Obergartner Wittig (Medium). Bright magenta, with crimson-carmine eye; large flower and truss; one of the best.

Professor Virchow (Medium). Bright carmine, overlaid with orange scarlet.

Pantheon (Tall). Bright carmine rose.

Von Hochberg (Tall). The ideal crimson phlox, the richest of its color.

ERIE, PA.

The Market.

There have been many funerals here recently, and the florists have been pleasing their patrons with Harrisii lilies, mums and roses in all varieties for these occasions. Weddings and parties have been plentiful, too, and with the approach of Hallowe'en festivities the prospects for business during the next few weeks are good. We are having a few fine days, which have brought out an abundance of flowers. The florists' stores never looked prettier than at present.

Various Notes.

Miss Jennie Adams, who has been ill since her return from Cleveland, is convalescent.

Fred Wagner has accepted a position with the Baur Floral Co.

William McCarthy has returned from a business trip to Buffalo.

S. Zelnick, of Cleveland, O., and Mr. Dickhoff, representing Schloss Bros., New York, were in Erie October 17 and October 19, respectively.

The new Masonic building was dedicated October 21. The interior was decorated in good taste by J. V. Laver.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Niemeyer celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary October 21, with a reception and supper at their home on Elmwood avenue. The floral decorations were elaborate and were carried out in yellow and white. Mums and roses were the leading flowers.

A pretty October wedding took place at Girard, a suburb of Erie, last week, when Miss Anabel Culbertson, of Erie, and Wm. S. Taft, of Rochester, were united in marriage at the fashionable country home of the bride's parents. The elaborate floral decorations, which consisted mainly of white mums, Killarney roses, garlands of asparagus and southern smilax, were furnished by the Baur Floral Co., of this city. B. P.

Superior, Wis.—Mrs. L. D. White, formerly proprietor of the Floral Park Greenhouses, has sold the business to Andrew Murphy and has removed to St. Elmo, Tenn., where she will build greenhouses and conduct a general florists' trade. Mr. Murphy will continue the business here.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade is on the mend at present, with a good lot of stock coming in. Roses are good and quite plentiful, with a good demand. Killarney and White Killarney are coming with heavy crops, and Maid, Bride, Richmond, etc., are about equal to the demand. Carnations of good quality are arriving in quantity. The stems are of good length, and the size of blooms is all that could be desired.

Mums are here in heavy supply, the principal varieties being Touse, Pacific Supreme, Halliday and Early Snow. Some of the early varieties are all cut and gone now. The weather up to October 22 was entirely too warm for mums, and it made them soft; the demand also was rather light up to that time, but we are having seasonable weather now and they are moving much better.

Violets are coming in now, but are not extra good at present, and demand is light on them. The call for valley is rather light, but there will be a number of weddings shortly that will call for quite a supply. There is little moving in the way of plants—a few ferns and palms now and then—but the bulk of the business is done on cut stock.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held a call meeting Tuesday evening, October 18, at the Fifth Avenue Floral Co.'s store, to arrange for the first dance of the season, which will take place November 2 at Vandalia hall. The club has secured quarters in the same building for meetings during the winter months.

The Columbus Floral Co. reports things moving nicely. They have two neat delivery wagons, which make a good advertisement for them. They are cutting quite a few mums and carnations now.

Mr. Davey has severed his connection with the Leo Miller greenhouses and will conduct a fruit stand at Central market for the time being.

E. Metzmaier reports business good.
J. M.

Whittenton, Miss.—A large greenhouse, with walls of cement blocks, is being erected at the residence of Clinton Macomber.

Upper Alton, Ill.—Newman Bros., on East Second street, have been displaying in their store a monster fern, grown by themselves and said to be the largest in the state. It attracted wide attention.

PANSIES.OUR SPECIALTY.

Giant pansies, the finest sorts and the finest plants the market affords. Strong, field-grown with care. Our own specials are as fine a collection as can be found, including nearly all colors and rich in red shades. Our cut flower collection contains pure white, golden yellow and purple, light blue, red and wine shades and other light colors. This collection we especially recommend for cut flower planting. We also grow the following in separate strains and varieties. Giant Orchid Flowered, a splendid and quite distinct sort; Bugnot, superb blotched; Mme. Perret, giant flowered, rich red and wine shades; Emperor William, ultramarine blue; Fairy Queen, light blue with white border; Fire King, golden yellow and purple; Masterpiece, curled, wavy petals, splendid; Peacock, large peacock blue; Snow Queen (candidissima), pure white. Let us add your name to our list of satisfied customers. Here is what one of our customers said Oct. 17: "Rec'd the plants in fine shape. A fine lot—much pleased. C. E. Young, Poughkeepsie, N. Y." We have lots of testimonials and second orders which also shows that our packing is appreciated. Here is our way of doing business—if you are not entirely satisfied, your money refunded. Our prices are as low as can be made. Your own selection of any of the above, $3.00 per 1000; 2000 for $5.00. Our selection of all the above kinds, mixed, $2.50 per 1000; 2000 for $4.50; 5000 for $10.00. Always mention what express company to use.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, Olean, N. Y.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the best market strain of giant show and fancy pansies; largest, most perfect in form with greatest variety of rich and rare colors and markings. I have made a specialty of growing pansy seeds and plants nearly 40 years, and this strain is of most careful breeding and selection. It also contains all the new varieties introduced by foreign specialists during all these years. Samples of many reports—"If your pansies are as good in colors and size this year as they were last, I will need double the amount next year." G. H. T., Detroit, Mich. "The pansy plants obtained from you last year were quite satisfactory. Book our order for 50,000 and deliver in October." W. S. M., Supt. of Parks, Baltimore, Md. Over 60 varieties in mixed or separate colors, fine, stocky, field-grown plants, from my best selected seed, sown thinly in sandy soil broadcast, and extra well rooted, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $26.00. Cash. Special prices on lots of 25,000 or more.
L. W. Goodell, Pansy Park, Dwight P. O., Mass.

RICHMOND, IND.

Everything is looking well at the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co. In roses approximately 50,000 plants are grown, but the most notable variety here at present is the Pink Richmond, which has been named Rose Queen. This variety is a seedling and has been grown by the company for the last four years. The color is a pleasing pink. It has a good stem and is said to be a remarkable producer and an excellent keeper. The flowers now being cut are superior to anything else grown at this establishment. Aaron Ward, a yellow, is also showing up well.

The company is working with a view to propagating 1,000,000 young plants of all the leading varieties, for next spring. In five of the houses several thousand young plants are grown and some 40,000 cuttings are taken every week. In the summer all the cuttings are propagated in frames outdoors, and when one batch is ready to be potted off there is another batch ready to be propagated. In this way several men, boys and girls are kept busy all the time in this department.

Five houses have been built this summer—three for young rose stock, one for propagating and one for grafting and budding. Two large houses are now filled with young plants and they will be kept dormant during the winter and sent out in the early spring. Several thousand ramblers are also grown in the field.

The E. T. Grave place, which has been leased by the Hill Co., contains about 50,000 square feet of glass and is being devoted to carnations in a large list of varieties. Several seedlings are also being grown and the most notable variety at present is Beckwith, a large red. It will be sent out this season. No. 111 is another good red which will be sent out sometime in the future.

The firm is growing this season some 50,000 chrysanthemums of about 200 varieties, including all the standard sorts, besides several seedlings and novelties of the last few seasons. The mums here always rank with the best at the numerous shows all over this country. The single and pompon varieties are also largely grown, and they are, as usual, a picture of health.

Cannas, coleus, geraniums, ferns, fuchsias, heliotropes, lantanas and soft-wooded bedding stock are grown by the thousands and the propagating season is now on. Thousands of peonies are also being dug and shipped. The new Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora alba is in great demand.

Besides adding five houses during the summer, as already stated, the firm has installed a large new boiler.

Joe Hill is the manager and about sixty-five men, boys and girls are employed the year around.

DISEASED GARDENIA FOLIAGE.

You will find enclosed a few gardenia leaves, which I have sent for your inspection. Can you give me any information as to how I can get rid of the diseased foliage on some of the gardenia plants, which are grown in benches in a temperature of about 81 degrees at night? No heat is used at present; there is sufficient natural heat.

M. L.

It is not uncommon to find, at the bottoms of the shoots, a few leaves similar to those forwarded, especially if the plants are being grown close together or are heavily foliated. If you have not tied up the plants at all, use one stout stake to the center of each and tie up any shoots which are sprawly. This will let the sun strike the soil and dry it out better. It will also permit more thorough spraying of the plants. Avoid overwatering. The beds should dry out well between waterings. Keep the surface scratched over. If your minimum temperature is as high as 81 degrees, you certainly have all the heat the gardenias need; 65 degrees is a good winter minimum. Leave some air on all night when the temperature is 75 degrees or over.

Greenhouse Heating.

LEST you forget we say it yet, coal's going to be scarce this winter.

COMPUTING THE HORSE-POWER.

On what basis is a horse-power computed in a tubular boiler? How many horse-power would be needed in a tubular boiler to heat 25,000 square feet of glass to 60 degrees in zero weather? Or, in other words, how many square feet of glass should each horse-power care for at zero, with the house at 60 degrees? We are located in southeastern Pennsylvania. F. & R.

The horse-power of a boiler is generally based upon either the area of the grate or of the exposed fire surface of the tubes and shell. One foot of grate area is generally figured as furnishing three horse-power in small and medium sized boilers, while twelve to fifteen square feet of heating surface is computed as giving one horse-power.

When a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, there should be one foot of radiating surface to six feet of glass and one horse-power will generally heat 100 square feet of radiating surface in the larger plants, but it is best to furnish a horse-power for every 60 to 80 square feet in the smaller plants, in accordance with the minimum outside temperature as well as the exposure and construction of the houses.

THE BOILER ABOVE GROUND.

I should like to get some information in regard to heating our greenhouses. We have five houses, each 14x120 feet, running north and south. They measure six feet to the gutters and from ten to eleven feet to the ridge. We shall use hot water. The boiler house is at the north end.

We can not put our boiler in a pit, as we should then be troubled with water. Our plan is this: With the boiler on the level, connect an ell to the boiler; run a short piece of 5-inch pipe straight down and then to the main, running east and west; run our 4-inch flows from this, under the benches. Would this plan work, or what would you suggest? We expected to use four 4-inch pipes in the rose house and three 4-inch pipes in the carnation houses. Would that be enough, in our Michigan climate? P. L.

If the plan proposed is used, the circulation will be extremely slow and little heat will be secured. When the boiler stands higher than the returns, it is better to use smaller pipe, so that the flows can be carried overhead. For the rose houses use three 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. For carnations use two flows and six returns, keeping both flows and returns as high as possible.

STEAM FOR ELL-SHAPED HOUSE.

May I ask you how to pipe my house for steam? I have a thirty horse-power return flue boiler. My main house is 14x60, with an addition or wing 12x36, in the form of an ell. The boiler will be situated in the basement of a barn, which is attached to the ell of the greenhouse. I was figuring on using two 2-inch flows, running them about two feet from the eaves, to the extreme ends and then down, dividing them into four 1½-inch returns and running two of these back under each of the outside benches. Do you think this will be sufficient, in the climate of northern Illinois? I am growing carnations. The side walls consist of three feet of boards and eighteen inches of glass. The house is nine feet high at the ridge. J. E. M.

As no drawing was enclosed, it is not possible to tell just how the ell is arranged, but if it is at the end of the other house it will be an easy matter to heat the two houses by running two flows, as proposed, along the plates and connecting them with four returns under the benches. While it will be advisable to use four 1½-inch returns, there will be no occasion for using two 2-inch flows, as with the latter it would be possible to heat the house to 60 degrees. The use of two 1½-inch pipes as flows will furnish all of the steam required, and two 1¼-inch pipes as flows would probably answer.

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

ON SLOPING GROUND.

I have built two greenhouses, one of them 25x100 and the other 9x100, even-span, running east and west. The boiler is in the northwest corner of the greenhouses and about seven feet below the ground level. It is a sectional hot water boiler. I should like to know how to pipe these greenhouses, using 2-inch pipe everywhere, except for the main and return.

Owing to the sloping of the ground from west to east, I was obliged to build the benches in three sections. That is, one bench the entire length of the house would be too high at one end and low at the other, while by dividing the benches into three sections I could keep each section level. I intended to use one main pipe and two returns under each bench in the houses, the main pipe to fall to the east end and the returns to fall to the west end, but as the benches are built in sections, I cannot use this system of piping. The ground falls about three feet from west to east. I also intend to use four 2-inch pipes along the wall on the north side. I am located in western Maryland. E. W.

Unless there is some special reason for having a part of the returns under the benches, it is suggested that for the house 25x100 feet four 2-inch flow pipes and the same number of returns be placed on each side wall. The flows can be run on the walls just below, and at the same slope as the plate itself, and the returns can be placed underneath, starting at the farther end, just below the flows, if care is taken to grade them carefully and support them at frequent intervals so that there will be no pockets for air. It will answer if they are given a slope of one inch in thirty feet.

If bottom heat is desired for the benches, two flows and two returns can be placed upon each of the side walls and a 2½-inch flow can be run under the ridge. At the east end of each house, a 2-inch supply pipe can be taken off, which, after dropping below the beds, can feed a coil of six 2-inch pipes running the length of the respective houses under the benches. At the west end of each of these coils, a 2-inch return can connect the coils with the main return underneath. This should be 2½-inch from the point where the second coil joins, to the boiler.

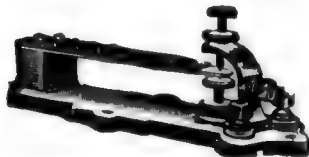

For the house 9x100 feet, a similar arrangement can be used, except that only one 2-inch flow and two 2-inch returns upon each wall will be required.

I shall heat with hot water and shall want a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees in zero weather. The boiler is tapped for a 2½-inch flow. W. M.

It will be possible to secure the heat required by the use of two 2-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. A 2½-inch main flow pipe from the boiler will suffice for both flows. The return connection with the boiler should be of the same size as the flow, although for a house of the size described it would answer if the two 2-inch returns leading from the coils are connected close to the boiler and joined with it by a single 2-inch pipe.

A FURNACE AND PIPE COILS.

I am building a greenhouse, 20x40 feet and five feet to the eaves, and should like to get some idea of how to heat it with hot water by using a furnace and pipe coils. I shall grow carnations and general bedding stock. I could run the smoke flue back on one side to save heat, but want to know how to heat the other side, as the flue would not be sufficient to heat the whole house. I am located in the northern part of West Virginia. G. C. H.

While a greenhouse could be heated by running a flue along one side and hot water pipes on the other, this is likely to be unsatisfactory and largely of a temporary nature. For this reason it would be advisable to put in a regular hot water system. It is often possible to buy a good second-hand boiler, which would be far better than a coil in a heater.

In a house 20x40 feet, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees, it would only be necessary to use two 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns. Even though a smoke flue runs from the boiler so as to heat one side of the house, the draft would be so much decreased that it would take almost as many heating pipes to heat the other side of the house as though the flue was not used.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been highly satisfactory to the florists of this city. The demand has been strong, and good flowers have met with ready sale. Chrysanthemums are, of course, the favorite flowers, with carnations a close second. Chrysanthemums were retailing at $1.50 to $3 a dozen last Saturday.

The Flower Carnival.

All members of the Rochester Florists' Association, and a good many outsiders, too, are intensely interested in the coming flower carnival, to be held November 1 to 5. The general chairman, C. H. Vick, says that the florists will have the hearty support of many of the largest private growers of the city and vicinity, among them being Mrs. F. F. Thompson, of Canandaigua, whose beautiful estate, Sonneburg, is famous in this part of the state. The rare and priceless orchids owned by Mrs. W. H. Kimball will be exhibited by C. B. Ogsten, superintendent of the greenhouses. The Kimball conservatories contain at present over 1,000 varieties. George Eastman has again consented to exhibit his chrysanthemums; last year his exhibit was one of the most beautiful in the hall. William Pirie will be in charge of these specimens.

Etienne Berry, gardener for Hiram Sibley, will exhibit, as a special attraction, a collection of potted celosias in twenty or more varieties.

Mr. Vick, in company with Messrs. R. G. Salter, G. B. Hart and J. M. Keller, has visited many of the conservatories and greenhouses about Rochester and reports that this show will far surpass the efforts of 1909. The entire floor space of Convention hall will be used, whereas last year only about half of the building was used for the exhibits.

F. J. Keller is in New York city, making arrangements with a Japanese designer to take complete charge of the construction of the Japanese garden. A. S. De Forest, a local landscape architect, will have charge of the general plan of the hall.

Various Notes.

Rochester is now really 76 years old; at least, the seventy-sixth anniversary of its incorporation as a city was celebrated on Tuesday, October 18, by an industrial parade in which every line of industry was represented. Among all the beautifully decorated floats, those of the florists were particularly pleasing. Salter Bros. were represented by two, as were also J. B. Keller's Sons. H. E. Wilson, Thomann Bros. and E. C. Campbell were represented by one each.

DETROIT.

The Market.

We have passed through another spell of summer weather, it being quite warm the whole of last week. Previous to this stock was scarce, but now there is plenty. Mums are arriving in large quantities, many being weak, owing to the warm weather. Roses and carnations also are plentiful.

Business opened up nicely with a change in the weather. A big run of funeral work kept all hands busy.

Various Notes.

Breitmeyer's branch store on Woodward avenue, in connection with the store of the McDermiad Candy Co., will soon be doing business. Miss Kraussman will be in charge.

Robert Rahaley and Albert Pochelon spent several days in Chicago last week. All the important wholesale houses were visited, also the principal retail stores.

Wm. Dilger, for a long time superintendent of Belle Isle park, has sent his resignation to Park Commissioner Hurlburt, to take effect November 1. Just what Mr. Dilger's plans for the future are he will not divulge, but it is understood he has several good things in sight.

J. F. Sullivan left Detroit Sunday, October 23, for New York. He will visit the Hudson river violet district to arrange for the year's supply.

A number of the stores have pretty Hallowe'en effects in the windows. A large corner in Breitmeyer's reminded one of a pretty nook in the woods, with its beautifully colored foliage. E. A. Fetter's window, always one of the prettiest, shows various effects in yellow mums, with just enough corn to serve as a reminder that pumpkins are in season. Schroeter's large window contains a real Hallowe'en table decoration. In the smaller window an old gate, torn from its hinges, gives the boys and girls a gentle hint.

A fine home is in course of construction on Mack avenue, to be occupied by Fred Miesel and his family.

The annual outing to Mt. Clemens by the Florists' Club will take place Thursday, November 3. A special car will leave the corner of Griswold and Congress streets at 9 a. m. The Toledo Florists' Club, as well as any other florist who can find it convenient to do so, will be welcomed by the Detroit club as its guests on this annual pilgrimage. H. S.

Geneva, Ill.—In the new Riverbank Greenhouses, owned by Col. George Fabyan, a complete system of electric lighting has been installed.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

There was a noted improvement all along the line last week. Houses in the residential district are opening up daily and the demand from this source, as well as that of numerous October weddings, has given an impetus to the trade that promises well. All kinds of stock show improvement, roses and carnations particularly being much better than those of a week ago. Violets can now be offered without an apology. A few doubles are on the market, but are not as good relatively as the singles.

Dahlias are in their prime, and are the best sellers, as they easily make more show for the money than any other flower on the market. Growers of inside stock look with hope, and gentlemen of the dahlia farms with fear, at the weather report, which predicts a heavy frost. At present the dahlia men have the best of it and are pushing their product in great shape. Cosmos is also plentiful and appears to sell well. Chrysanthemums are increasing in volume daily. Some good flowers are seen of Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, Montmort, Monrovia, Kalb, and some extra fine Pacific Supreme and Gloria.

Various Notes.

J. Bolgiano & Sons have begun their special sales of all kinds of house plants. Over 3,000 ferns were sold Friday and Saturday, October 21 and 22.

Harry Ekas, of Frederick road, had some extra fine Gloria mums in the market Saturday.

The ladies' bowling team is making things hum at the garage alleys every Wednesday night. Mrs. James Boone is captain of the team.

Conrad Hess, of Waverly, has an exceptionally fine lot of Scottii ferns.

Pay for themselves in a single season

Sunlight Double Glass Sash will more than pay for themselves in the better, earlier crops that will bring the big prices on the early market—and in time and labor saved in caring for the beds.

You never have to cover Sunlight Sash

You can throw away expensive, cumbersome boards and mats. You can save all the time you now take to cover and uncover the beds—because Sunlight Double Glass Sash have—

Two layers of glass instead of one

Between the two layers of glass is a $\frac{3}{8}$ inch layer of dry still air. This transparent blanket is a perfect non-conductor, keeping in the heat—keeping out the cold—permitting the plants to get all the light all the time. The result is that plants under Sunlight Sash will be ready for the market weeks ahead of those grown under single glass sash because the plants get the light from sun-up to sun-down—which means faster and stockier growth.

Sunlight Double Glass Sash Co.,

Glass is held in place without putty. Cannot work loose—easily replaced.

One user of Sunlight Sash writes: "The coldest day was 2 above zero and no plants were reached by the cold. Not only did the seeds germinate quicker under the double glass, but the plants do much better than under the single glass sash. And the labor saved in extra covering will soon pay for the sash."

The Question of The Hour

HAVE YOU USED

Sprinkleproof Ribbons

(Trade Mark)

They are emphatically the RIBBONS OF THE FUTURE.

Like Quicksilver, Water

Rolls From Their Surface

These ribbons, unlike ordinary ribbons, will not collapse when wet. They are made in various grades and widths at prices within reach of all.

We are increasing our facilities to promptly care for the volume of orders for these wonderful ribbons.

Do not confuse SPRINKLEPROOF RIBBON (trade mark), with our SPRINKLEPROOF CHIFFON (trade mark), which we introduced over a year ago.

Customers tell us that we are entitled to the support and patronage of all florists for the creation of these previously unthought of, time, labor and money saving textiles.

Samples upon request.

NOTE—Beware of imitations and substitutes.

POMPONS FOR TABLE WORK.

Pompon chrysanthemums are again beginning to make their appearance in considerable quantity and during the next few weeks will be more extensively used than ever before. Larger quantities are being grown than in any preceding year.

The popularity of the pompon is of comparatively recent date. A few years ago it was scarcely ever seen, but the success with which some retail florists used it in decorative work was so great that the small flowers sprang into immediate favor and were in large request.

For table decorations few flowers are finer than pompoms. They are adapted to practically every kind of arrangement which is possible on a dinner table. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of a dinner decoration arranged by George H. Cooke, the well known Washington retailer, and is an excellent example of graceful arrangement after the high style. It will be noted in this particular, that Mr. Cooke used an extremely tall, thin-stemmed, glass vase, thereby elevating the heaviest part of his arrangement above the eyes of the seated dinner guests and thus avoiding the obscuring of the view across the table.

THANKSGIVING WINDOWS.

Importance of Good Displays.

Among the preparations for Thanksgiving none is more important than the decoration of the window—or, better still, the windows—for the week or ten days preceding the festive occasion. Two or three windows, or changes of window decoration, are not too much for this period. All the time one can spare is not too much to devote to this work, and if trade is not what it ought to be, then something new and better should be devised for the window displays.

Of course, mums are the principal attraction, with violets as a close second, while the old favorites, the carnations, keep their steady patrons. All these, then, with the roses, must be displayed to good advantage—not all at once, however, nor yet any one flower too exclusively. No Thanksgiving window is complete without the addition of fruit or grain. Cornstalks, oats, or wheat sheaves, autumn leaves, pumpkins, cat-tails, all have wonderful capacities for developing the flowers just mentioned.

A Fence Corner, With Frequent Changes.

A window which represents a corner of a field, with a rail fence against which you may set a large group of cosmos, with tall ferns to hide the vase and with a liberal display of violets in rustic hampers, makes a good decoration for fall or Thanksgiving. Numerous combinations, with this as a theme, may be introduced, perhaps one each day; for instance, by adding yellow, white or bronze chrysanthemums, or the heliotrope or pink mums. Or, use the pink cosmos with a good blending color of pink mums, with or without the violets.

For another change, scatter woodbine leaves all over the floor and use the same vine to trail along the fence on one side. Against the other side of the fence, and in the corner, set a quantity of white or cream chrysanthemums. In the open space toward the front of the window, use hampers of smaller mums and white grapes. Another: Use oak leaves for the floor, and cornstalks, with yellow and bronze mums, for the large central group. These should be grouped in striking masses, with a few scattering out from the central point. Another: Bronze and yellow mums, with cat-tails for the tall of a cultivated variety or the native varieties. Anything in that line will do which has the style and length; for example, foxtail, ribbon grass, or natural-colored pampas plumes. If seeded, so much the better. Be shy of much ribbon or chiffon.

One immense corn shock, with a great vase of mums in the center, is a good Thanksgiving window design and may be adapted to church platforms or to banquet or dance hall decorations. If space permits, several shocks may be used at convenient distances. Do not crowd them. This plan would make a good cozy corner decoration in a large room, for any social affair. Pumpkins, with smaller flowers of the same color as the mums, may be strewn among the shocks to complete the picture. A violet and green window may be adapted from the same plan. Use deep heliotrope mums in the shocks, and dishes of violets placed inside of cabbage heads from which the centers have been removed.

The General Color and the Background.

In the foregoing color plans the pinks will be found the more brilliant for evening, and the yellow the richer for daylight decorations. Purple or violet develops a red tinge in artificial light.

Any of the designs described will be improved by a background which partakes of the character of the design portion against the fence and a pumpkin jardiniere out in front, filled with smaller mums.

A Complete Change of Scene.

Then, to change the entire scheme, have one basket set on a floor of loose wheat, native or bleached. Let the color scheme for the basket be pink mums or mums and cosmos, with a liberal addition of long grass, either itself. To illustrate: Place at the back of the window a large screen of burlap, preferably dark green, with a spray or border of cat-tails or cornstalks, or a side wall which can be paneled with wheat straws or small sheaves, or with grass, whichever is used in the principal display piece.

Long-leaved Boston ferns are exceptionally good with grain stalks. A stump filled with an immense cluster of Long-leaved Boston ferns are exceptionally good with grain stalks. A stump filled with an immense cluster of mums and autumn leaves, at the base of which are two or three good specimen fern plants, tipped so that the pots will not show, with a cluster of tall grass appearing to one side or behind the stump, is a good autumn piece.

A Realistic Wheat Field.

A display which was made last year at the A. Y. P. exposition, by the C. F. railway, gave a fine illustration of what might be accomplished with grain as a clerks will never do in a florist's shop, even when hiring the extra help for holidays? I have found that to be the case, and for this reason: The average transient customers buy flowers for two widely different reasons, either for joyous or for sad occasions; that is, for a wedding, a banquet, a dinner party, or for some young lady's gift; or, on the other hand, for a funeral, a sick-room, or to place on a grave. Hence we might call this a business which ap-setting for flowers. The whole was a picture of a wheat field, but done in natural wheat, having the effect of growing in the field, with grouse flying close over the heads of grain. The wheat stalks had been cut, cleaned and dried with the grain remaining. A screen of fine wire was stretched horizontally across the display space, about two feet above the floor. The wheat stalks were pulled through the meshes as far as the head, where they remained suspended, and when the meshes were all filled the spectator was looking down upon a wheat field with stuffed grouse suspended in a flying position close above the surface of the grain.

Any wild game birds could be substituted for the grouse. Long-stemmed mums could be interspersed freely among the wheat heads, with their stems in vases below. At some prominent place in the rear a great sheaf of wheat or a shock could be filled with a mass of chrysanthemums, as a break to the evenness of the field. With a reasonably large amount of reflecting mirror surface the wheat field might be made to look immense and most attractive.

Gertrude Blair.

THE RETAIL CLERK.

The article in The Review of October 21, entitled "Retailers' Troubles," suggests this question for the retail florist: Have you noticed, in hiring sales people for your store, that people who can make good sales in the average lines of business do not always seem to adapt themselves readily to the patrons of the florists' trade, and that rules applying to department store peals to the varied emotions of people, and the clerk, therefore, in addition to having a knowledge of the business, must be a keen student of human nature.

B. B. Spanner.

Marion, Ind.—Mr. and Mrs. Leo C. Smith, proprietors of the Marion Floral Co., have opened a store on Adams street, between Fourth and Fifth streets. They have greenhouses at Meridian and Thirty-first streets.

NEW LOS ANGELES STORE.

The sons of J. W. Wolfskill have succeeded to his business and, under the name of Wolfskill Bros., conduct in Los Angeles the store shown in the accompanying illustration, reproduced from a recent photograph. Lighting always is an important point in flower store equipment and how well the Tungsten lamps are adapted to the purpose is demonstrated in this picture. The photograph was taken at night by the aid of artificial light, the camera standing in a position to get the view of the passer-by.

PALMER'S SPECIAL DELIVERY.

Possibly the most unique automobile operating on the streets of Buffalo is the gasoline tricycle used by W. J. Palmer for special delivery. Its odd appearance attracts an immense amount of attention and Mr. Palmer says that in addition to providing exceptionally rapid delivery facilities the machine has proved one of the best advertisements he ever invested in. The car is capable of making thirty-five miles per hour and when making ordinary speeds on the city streets it consumes little fuel and has thus far caused no expense for up-keep.

Mr. Palmer's delivery facilities now include two Pierce cars of the usual type and this three-wheeled special delivery motor. He thinks the automobile to be far better than the old-style vehicle for a florist who has a large number of deliveries to make.

THE DEBUTANTE.

[Gleaning of an interview with Charles Henry Fox.]

The debutante's bouquet should be an arm bunch, preferably of one kind of flowers, the choicest blossoms of their kind. Killarney roses were used in the bunch shown in the photograph. Chrysanthemums are seasonable. Mr. Fox sometimes uses a combination of wild flowers. The reward of taste and skill in the arrangement of the debutante bunch is the honor of having that bunch carried. The recipient of the flowers may receive as many as a hundred bouquets; she can only carry one, her favorite; the others are arranged about the room in which she is receiving. Knowledge as to whether the young lady is a blonde or a brunette and as to her surroundings—her gown will always be white on this occasion—is a great assistance in producing a telling effect. Phil.

COLOR EFFECTS IN BEDDING.

[A paper by George S. Balthis, of Des Moines, Ia., read at the eighth annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, in Des Moines.]

This subject is one which appears to have been overlooked by a large number of florists, as much of their work has proven to me of late. Their work tends to show, however, how much thought and study have been given to the characteristics in the growth of the plants, though not in the blending of colors.

In summer bedding there are several things which must be considered, without regard to the colors, to insure success. We must know about the height each variety of plants will attain, in order to insure symmetry in the appearance of the bed. Attention should also be paid to the nature of the leaves, especially in carpet bedding. It is an easy matter so to mix alternantheras and coleus as to spoil an excellent design. It is almost impossible to arrange alternantheras on the inside of a coleus bed and make it look well. In the so-called carpet bed it is seldom that flowering plants can be used with any degree of satisfaction. Not long ago I noticed a good design spoiled because sweet alyssum was used, and the gardener, in his endeavor to keep it as low as the alternantheras, had necessarily pinched off the tops which would have flowered, and the space was green where it was intended to be white.

Harmony and Contrast.

As the color of a plant often changes to a certain extent after it is moved from the greenhouse to the garden, we should have a complete knowledge not only of what the color is, but what it will be.

If there are several beds to be planted in a certain space, we not only ought to choose colors which harmonize within a single bed, but also between the beds as a whole. For instance, a bed of red geraniums bordered with Madame Salleri geraniums looks much better near a bed of yellow cannas than near red ones. If the red cannas were used the individual beds would be satisfactory, but there would not be enough contrast between the beds. One of the best flower beds I ever saw was planted as follows, naming from the center out: First, Robusta cannas; second, Florence Vaughan cannas; third, Mrs. Page salvias; fourth, Golden Bedder coleus; fifth, Alternanthera brilliantissima. In every instance the contrast was good and the colors were bright and harmonized perfectly. An example of a smaller bed might be as follows: A center of King Humbert cannas, then two or three rows of Buttercup cannas, bordered with any good red alternantheras.

Some Poor Combinations.

Having mentioned a few instances of good color combinations, I will now describe some which I have seen and consider quite undesirable. In one of the parks of this city I noticed a good bed planted with King Humbert cannas in the center, with salvias next and the coleus, John Pfister, as a border. How much better would it have looked, however, had there been some bright color, such as yellow or white, to separate the different shades of red! I have also seen beds similar to the foregoing, except that they were intended to be all yellow, but, owing to the different shades of yellow, it would have looked much better had there been some darker color to separate them.

One of the most unsatisfactory pieces of planting in regard to the blending of colors is to be seen in a prominent place in this city. There we can find red and pink geraniums with some blue ageratum. A worse combination would certainly be impossible to find. How much better would a simple bed of red geraniums bordered with sweet alyssum, or a bed of white geraniums bordered with blue ageratum, have looked!

Planting the Background.

In planting a flower garden or even in planting a few beds on a large lawn, there are several points to be considered in planting either the background or foreground. If, when planting the background, you wish to give the grounds a larger appearance, plant such colors as blue, orange, deep red and the like; while, if the background is to appear closer, any bright color, such as scarlet, white and yellow, will have the desired effect. I first noticed this in my experience in planting at Union park. The predominating colors in the back half of the garden included such as pink, salmon, orange and the like. But after planting a couple of beds of Golden Bedder coleus it seemed to bring the entire background closer.

Some of you will perhaps disagree with me in my plea for a sharp contrast in adjoining colors. But if you will notice in particular a bed planted all red or all yellow and the like, or two adjoining beds of the same color, and then look at one where the colors are contrasted or at the beds as a whole, I have no doubt but that you will quite agree.

A display which was made last year at the A. Y. P. exposition, by the C. I. railway, gave a fine illustration of what might be accomplished with grain as a clerks will never do in a florist's shop, even when hiring the extra help for holidays? I have found that to be the case, and for this reason: The average transient customers buy flowers for two widely different reasons, either for joyous or for sad occasions; that is, for a wedding, a banquet, a dinner party, or for some young lady's gift; or, on the other hand, for a funeral, a sick room, or to place on a grave. Hence we might call this a business which ap setting for flowers. The whole was a picture of a wheat field, but done in natural wheat, having the effect of growing in the field, with grouse flying close over the heads of grain. The wheat stalks had been cut, cleaned and dried with the grain remaining. A screen of fine wire was stretched horizontally across the display space, about two feet above the floor. The wheat stalks were pulled through the meshes as far as the head, where they remained suspended, and when the meshes were all filled the spectator was looking down upon a wheat field with stuffed grouse suspended in a flying position close above the surface of the grain.

Any wild game birds could be substituted for the grouse. Long stemmed mums could be interspersed freely among the wheat heads, with their stems in vases below. At some prominent place in the rear a great sheaf of wheat or a shock could be filled with a mass of chrysanthemums, as a break to the evenness of the field. With a reasonably large amount of reflecting mirror surface the wheat field might be made to look immense and most attractive. Gertrude Blum.

THE RETAIL CLERK.

The article in The Review of October 21, entitled "Retailers' Troubles," suggests this question for the retail florist: Have you noticed, in hiring sales people for your store, that people who can make good sales in the average lines of business do not always seem to adapt themselves readily to the patrons of the florists' trade, and that rules applying to department store peals to the varied emotions of people, and the clerk, therefore, in addition to having a knowledge of the business, must be a keen student of human nature.

The photograph was taken at night by the aid of artificial light, the camera standing in a position to get the view of the passer by.

PALMER'S SPECIAL DELIVERY.

Possibly the most unique automobile operating on the streets of Buffalo is the gasoline tricycle used by W. J. Palmer for special delivery. Its odd appearance attracts an immense amount of attention and Mr. Palmer says that in addition to providing exceptionally rapid delivery facilities the machine has proved one of the best advertisements he ever invested in. The car is capable of making thirty-five miles per hour and when making ordinary speeds on the city streets it consumes little fuel and has thus far caused no expense for up keep.

Mr. Palmer's delivery facilities now include two Pierce cars of the usual type and this three-wheeled special delivery motor. He thinks the automobile to be far better than the old-style vehicle for a florist who has a large number of deliveries to make.

THE DEBUTANTE.

[Gleaning of an interview with Charles Henry Fox.]

The debutante's bouquet should be an arm bunch, preferably of one kind of flowers, the choicest blossoms of their kind. Killarney roses were used in the bunch shown in the photograph. Chrysanthemums are seasonable. Mr. Fox sometimes uses a combination of wild flowers. The reward of taste and skill in the arrangement of the debutante bunch is the honor of having that bunch carried. The recipient of the flowers may receive as many as a hundred bouquets; she can only carry one, her favorite; the others are arranged about the room in which she is receiving. Knowledge as to whether the young lady is a blonde or a brunette and as to her surroundings her gown will always be white on this occasion is a great assistance in producing a telling effect. Phil.

COLOR EFFECTS IN BEDDING.

A paper by George S. Balthis, of Des Moines, read at the eighth annual meeting of the Society of Iowa Florists, in Des Moines.

This subject is one which appears to have been overlooked by a large number of florists, as much of their work has proven to me of late. Their work tends to show, however, how much thought and study have been given to the characteristics in the growth of the plants, though not in the blending of colors.

In summer bedding there are several things which must be considered, with regard to the colors, to insure success. We must know about the height each variety of plants will attain, in order to insure symmetry in the appearance of the bed. Attention should also be paid to the nature of the leaves, especially in carpet bedding. It is an easy matter so to mix alternantheras and coleus as to spoil an excellent design. It is almost impossible to arrange alternantheras on the inside of a coleus bed and make it look well. In the so-called carpet bed it is seldom that flowering plants can be used with any degree of satisfaction. Not long ago I noticed a good design spoiled because sweet alyssum was used, and the gardener, in his endeavor to keep it as low as the alternantheras, had necessarily pinched off the tops which would have flowered, and the space was green where it was intended to be white.

Harmony and Contrast.

As the color of a plant often changes to a certain extent after it is moved from the greenhouse to the garden, we should have a complete knowledge not only of what the color is, but what it will be.

If there are several beds to be planted in a certain space, we not only ought to choose colors which harmonize within a single bed, but also between the beds as a whole. For instance, a bed of red geraniums bordered with Madame Salleron geraniums looks much better near a bed of yellow cannas than near red ones. If the red cannas were used the individual beds would be satisfactory, but there would not be enough contrast between the beds. One of the best flower beds I ever saw was planted as follows, naming from the center out: First, Robusta cannas; second, Florence Vaughan cannas; third, Mrs. Page salvias; fourth, Golden Bedder coleus; fifth, Alternanthera brilliantissima. A PICTURE TABLE.

Yellow was the color scheme of the table decoration shown in the accompanying illustration; there was just enough white and green to emphasize the principal color.

This was called a picture table and was arranged by Mrs. R. Hall Ryno for the Appalachian Exposition, held recently at Knoxville, Tenn.

The table was covered by a drawn-work cloth over yellow satin. Yellow flower the whole winter. Bulbous plants, such as hyacinths, tulips and narcissi, can be used; also such fibrous rooted begonias as Gloire de Lorraine, incarnata and semperflorens rubra; Primulas obconica, Sinensis and Kewensis; cyclamens, heliotropes, genistas, Astilbe Japonica and its varieties, zonal geraniums, callas and amaryllis. Carnations and roses could be grown, but not quite satisfactorily. Quite a variety of foliage plants could be grown if desired.

far apart should they be set in the beds? Are they as hardy and will they bloom as early as pansies? Will they sell as well as pansies in the spring, when put up in baskets? H. D. H.

Bellis or daisies require much the same treatment as pansies. They are a little more tender than pansies and will die out quite badly during winters when the snow covering is scant, if the mulching is insufficient to protect them from the sun's rays. Set the plants in the beds four inches apart each way and, when the ground freezes, cover with a light mulch of leaves, hay, straw or pine needles. The plants bloom just as early as pansies and are quite salable if put up in small baskets, though hardly as popular as pansies and forget-me-nots.

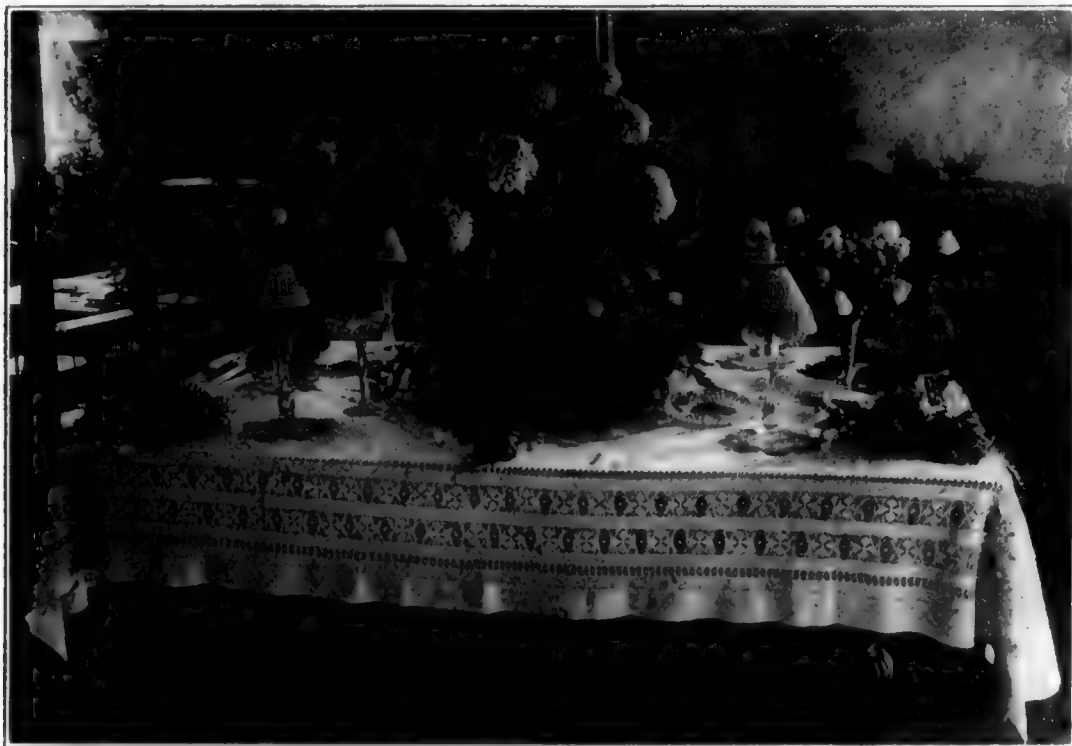

In wintering them outdoors, select ground with a gentle slope, where no water can stand. If they are placed in coldframes you will get earlier flowers and may be sure that all are in good shape in early spring. Mulch with forest leaves after the beds are frozen; then put on the sashes. They will uncover as fresh as when the mulch was given them. C. W.

WILTING OF POINSETTIAS.

What is the proper way of handling cut poinsettias to prevent wilting? W. M. R. S.

The temperature of the house in which the plants are growing should be dropped 10 degrees a couple of days before they are cut. When cut, either sear the ends of the stems with a hot iron or hot coal, or dip them in water at or near the boiling point for a few seconds. Only the bottom part of the stem, of course, should be immersed. Searing the ends with a hot iron has proved, on the whole, more satisfactory than the hot water. Bleeding will also be stopped if the stems are stood in water of a temperature of 120 to 140 degrees for five minutes.

After they have been seared or dipped in hot water, plunge the stems in deep jars of cold water in a temperature of 45 degrees. Too low a degree of cold has a tendency to cause the foliage to turn yellow quickly. It

The border or frame was of Maryland roses and Rose-pink Enchantress carnations.

DOUBLE POINSETTIAS.

I do not think, however, that it will displace the ordinary pulcherrima. I do not know what firms can supply stock of it. ly destructive. Hand picking at night will alleviate the trouble somewhat. Syringing is of no avail and lime water will not trouble these pests in the least. A poisoned mash of shorts, molasses and Paris green will prove attractive to some of the cut worms and sow bugs. When they are buried in the soil, you can suffocate them by using carbon bisulphide, boring holes three to four inches deep and eighteen inches apart each way, pouring a scant teaspoonful into each hole and immediately afterward covering the holes to keep the fumes in. This carbon comes in cans and retails at 25 cents to 30 cents per pound. It will suffocate all pests in the soil and is not in the least harmful to plant life. C. W.

CALLA STALKS ROTTING.

What is the cause of our calla lily stalks rotting off at the ground? They are in a raised bench and were planted about the last part of August. They did the same thing last year in another bench. We give them lots of water. Can you state the cause and a remedy? D. G.

Are you sure that the drainage of the benches is good? Callas want plenty of water and are really semi-aquatics, but under glass they sometimes rot off almost unaccountably. The water supply, when the tubers are planted, should be moderate, and not until the benches are well filled with roots should the soil be kept more than moderately moist. The curling of the tips, such as your specimens show, is nothing uncommon among certain varieties of carnations. Neither does it portend serious trouble. Usually you will find it shortly after the plants have been housed and when they have resumed their growth. You will also find it more prevalent when the plants were housed unusually late. It seems to be caused by the severe

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The sixteenth annual fall exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, held in the state armory, October 27 and 28, closed quite successfully, although not considered up to the standard of last year, which eclipsed all previous records. The unpleasant weather was held responsible for the smaller attendance, and the earlier date was blamed for the smaller number of exhibits. The queen of autumn was preëminent, although roses and carnations were strongly in evidence.

The commercial element was well represented by the Saltford Flower Shop, B. Willig and Valentine Burgevin's Sons, who were strong competitors with the several private gardeners, who made an excellent showing.

The exhibit of vegetables was considered the finest ever set up, both in quality and variety. The ornamental groups were splendidly arranged.

The dinner tables brought out four competitors, each distinct. W. Allen, gardener for Fred W. Vanderbilt, decorated with Cattleya labiata and lavender sweet peas. N. Harold Cottam used Ivory chrysanthemums. Walter Paritt, gardener for Miss Atwood, used outdoor flowers entirely, the centerpiece being white cosmos. This was much admired, owing to its simplicity and perfect arrangement. Mr. Paritt also secured first prize for the best collection of vegetables, the prize being offered by A. T. Boddington.

Burgevin's Sons swept the deck on roses, with Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond.

Saltford made a fine display with Canary Bird carnations and considers this variety the best yellow the firm has yet grown; it is a capital grower and free bloomer. They also had a grand lot of bay trees, arranged through the hall, which, with the overhead decoration of cedar in place of bunting, as formerly used, made an excellent setting for the blooms staged beneath.

The Julius Roehrs Co. had a grand exhibit of Celosia Pride of Castle Gould, which was greatly admired. The Saltford Flower Shop secured the entire collection.

Fred Saenger, gardener for F. Ruenbold, was first on carnations, with the old favorites, Windsor and Enchantress.

A. Rogers, Hyde Park, gardener for T. P. Connors, was first on groups.

H. J. Osterhoudt, gardener for W. P. Clyde, New Hamburg, N. Y., was first on specimen plants, well grown.

N. Harold Cottam exhibited a small collection of orchids in bloom, complete and perfectly grown.

James Blair, gardener for Ogden Mills, won first on cut flowers in largest variety.

Mrs. G. L. Hoyt secured first on a finely arranged basket of mums.

Mrs. W. Paritt, first for basket of mixed flowers.

During the show Conrad C. Gindra made an attractive display in his store window downtown, which, being close by, caught the eye of the crowd. M.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The annual fall show of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, October 27 and 28. Chrysanthemums, of course, were the main attraction, but great interest was taken by the visitors in the fine display of outdoor flowers and single mums. The last named are certainly growing in favor every year.

A surprise to many was the fine exhibit of pot-grown dahlias made by H. Matz, of this place; splendid plants, with perfect and large blooms, showing plainly the great future of dahlias grown in pots.

Chrysanthemums were extra fine and competition was keen; in fact, it is doubtful whether better blooms will be seen at any other show this season.

The judges were W. Turner, I. F. Huss and W. Scott.

The awards were as follows:

Group of chrysanthemums, fifty square feet, Wm. Eccles, first; Alex. McKenzie, second.

Group of ornamental plants, seventy-five square feet, A. McKenzie, first; J. Ingram, second.

Chrysanthemums—Six distinct, J. F. Johnston, first; H. Gaut, second.

Six white, A. McKenzie, first; R. Marshall, second.

Six yellow, A. McKenzie, first; R. Marshall, second.

Six pink, R. Marshall, first; A. McKenzie, second.

Six crimson, I. Everett, first; W. Cleres, second.

Six bronze, I. McDonald, first; I. Everett, second.

Specimen bush, R. Marshall, first; A. McKenzie, second.

Roses—Twelve white, I. Robinson, Center Island.

Twelve pink, V. Cleres.

Twelve any color, V. Cleres.

Carnations—Twelve white, A. McKenzie, first; P. Reul, second.

Twelve pink, W. Eccles.

Twelve red, W. Eccles.

For commercial growers, Chas. Weber, Rockville Center, first; H. Matz, second.

Violets—Single, I. Reidenbach; double, H. Gaut.

Centerpiece, I. Quintin, Roslyn, first; H. Gaut, second.

F. Petrocchia was a heavy winner in the vegetable class. Others were: R. Marshall, I. Reidenbach, J. F. Johnston, F. Johnson, F. Barton, V. Cleres, P. Reul, I. McDonald and S. J. Trepess.

Collection of outdoor flowers, I. Reidenbach.

Chas. H. Totty's special, thirty-six blooms, A. McKenzie, first; J. Everett, second.

Cottage Garden's special, carnations, W. Eccles, first; J. Duthie, second.

Burnett's special, twenty-five mums, A. McKenzie.

Lager & Hurrell's special, orchids, R. Marshall.

Peter Henderson's special, twenty-five blooms, A. McKenzie, first; J. F. Johnston, second.

W. Marshall's special, H. Gaut.

Vaughan's special, F. Petrocchia.

Weeber & Don's special, J. F. Johnston, first; H. Gaut, second.

Hitchings' silver cup, A. McKenzie.
Lord & Burnham Co.'s gold medal, R. Marshall.
Butler's special, H. Matz.
Julius Roehrs Co.'s special, J. Everett.
Mrs. Smithers' silver cup, hardy mums, G. Ashworth.
I. H. Troy's silver cup, hardy roses, J. Forbes Jericho.
Rickards Bros.' special, A. McKenzie.
Mrs. Bucknal's special, J. McDonald.
M. Underhill's special, J. Reidenbach.
W. Weeks' special, V. Cleres, first; J. Everett, second.
Titus & Bowne's special, A. McKenzie.
M. Shottwell's special, J. Everett.
M. Stapleton's special, J. Ingram.
Bon Arbor special, J. McDonald, first; J. Everett, second.
H. F. Meyer's special, A. McKenzie, first; H. Matz, second.
Mrs. H. Pratt's silver cup, collection of fruit, J. Everett.
Mrs. Byrnes' special, F. Petrocchia.
H. Matz's special, I. Reidenbach.
Buds' special, P. Reul.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The second annual flower show conducted by the Rochester Florists' Association was opened Tuesday afternoon, November 1, with an address by Mayor H. H. Edgerton, who in a few pleasing remarks announced the exhibit open to the public. His Honor was followed by Geo. Deitrich, president of the Chamber of Commerce, who stated that he believed no other city could conduct so successful a show with the commercial and advertising elements entirely removed, and that it shows a remarkable feeling of "get together" and friendship in the Rochester Florists' Association.

Among the guests at the opening were many gentlemen prominent in the business and public life of the city: President Lamberton, of the Park Commission; Prof. Geo. M. Forbes, president of the Board of Education; C. F. Carroll, superintendent of schools; Commissioner of Public Safety Charles Owen; President Dwyer, of the Common Council; John Hall, secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen; F. B. King, Francis Mitchell, A. E. Crockett, George Eastman, George W. Crosman, H. E. Wilson and others.

Immediately at the close of the opening exercises the Fifty-fourth Regiment Band, conducted by Prof. Fred A. Zeidler, played the first number on the concert program, "The March of the Flowers." Band concerts were given each afternoon and evening, the musicians being stationed in a beautifully decorated booth on the main floor. During the intervals between the selections by the band, an orchestra of ten pieces furnished music in the Japanese garden, which had been constructed in the annex to Convention hall.

The musical program for each evening not only gave the visitors an opportunity of hearing first-class band and orchestral music, but furnished an added attraction by presenting a number of Rochester's favorite vocalists. Tuesday evening Mrs. Edgar McIntosh, contralto, delighted the visitors with four solos. Wednesday evening Bruce Wainman, barytone, gave a splendid rendering of "Iago's Curse," from "Othello." Thursday evening Mrs. Herbert Koehnle, recently of New York city, sang two pleasing soprano solos.

One thing that made the show particularly pleasing to the visitors was the fact that most of the members of the reception committee were men connected directly with the growing of flowers and plants, and under the direction of E. S. Osborn, chairman, the committee rendered valuable service in naming plants, describing their characteristics and answering many questions.

No advertising of any kind was permitted in the hall, and the only cards shown were about 6x9 inches, bearing the name of the exhibitor, and the address if out of the city.

As at the first show, the famous orchid collection from the conservatories of Mrs. William H. Kimball attracted the lion's share of attention. The chrysanthemums from the private greenhouses of George Eastman and Hiram W. Sibley were excellent and the carload of plants, potted shrubs, dwarf trees and cut flowers sent by Mrs. F. F. Thompson, of Canandaigua, made an exhibition in itself. Much of the material used in the Japanese garden came from Mrs. Thompson's conservatories.

The management was in the hands of Charles H. Vick as general chairman. E. S. Osborn had a staff of sixty-three on the reception committee. Other committee chairmen were: Music, F. W. Vick; finance, W. L. Keller; advertising, A. H. Salter; decoration, F. J. Keller; ushers, E. P. Wilson; concessions, George B. Hart. E. F. R.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America is holding its annual exhibition at Morristown, N. J., this week, in conjunction with the annual exhibition of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society. The joint exhibitions are staged at the Morris County Golf Club at Convent Station. It is quite the most extensive exhibition ever undertaken at the New Jersey gardening center. Arthur Herrington is chairman of the executive committee and manager of the show. William Duckham, C. H. Totty and Robert Schultz constitute the exhibition committee and many other well known florists and gardeners are assisting. The prize list includes $3,000, besides the special prizes of the Chrysanthemum Society, and the exhibits include as highly finished chrysanthemums, roses, carnations and pot plants as are likely to be seen anywhere in America this season.

As touching on the work of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at the annual meeting of that organization, President Elmer D. Smith said in part:

"The membership is far too small when we consider the vast number interested in the queen of autumn. The desire to gain knowledge is apparent from the many inquiries showered in upon those conversant with such topics, and yet we seem unable to bring these inquirers within our fold. We should have 500 more enrolled as members of good standing. Will some one please suggest a plan to bring about this end? No florist who grows any quantity of chrysanthemums can afford to remain aloof. He owes this obligation to himself for the practical knowledge that may be gained. At New York last year I suggested we consider the affiliation of this society with the Society of American Florists. I still believe it is our best course to take. We certainly have nothing to lose, with the possibility of much to gain. I hope at this meeting the subject will be thoroughly discussed.

"One change in the scale for judging exhibition blooms has been proposed, reducing the number of points allotted to size and adding same to color. If such a course meets your approval, it should be remembered that size is quite an important factor in considering varieties which are suited for this purpose, and especially so if color or long necks prevent them from being considered from a commercial standpoint. If I were permitted to express my views I would say color is of equal importance to fullness, form and depth, even from an exhibition point of view. Should you decide to make them equal, the new scale would then be: Color, 15; foliage, 5; fullness, 15; form, 15; depth, 15; stem, 5; size, 30.

"The fine specimens displayed in the exhibition hall are positive proof there has been no retrogression, and it affords me great pleasure to know our course is upward and onward. Some ten years ago a worthy gentleman at one of the western shows, in responding to his toast, stated that the limit in size had been reached and it was folly to try to produce larger ones. I will leave it to you to decide the truth of this statement by bringing to mind those shown at that time in comparison with those before you today. As in the past, there are still many possibilities, soil that is still unturned, and so it behooves us to keep our eyes to the front and strive for greater achievement.

"This has been a very trying season in the development of chrysanthemums. In the middle west we had ten days in early March with the thermometer around the 80-degree mark, and a cold April and May. Through June, July and August the weather was warm and the air very dry, with practically no precipitation during these months. October, the month for finishing, has been extremely warm for the buds to expand freely, and many cases of burning have resulted therefrom. As near as I can learn, these conditions have prevailed to a certain degree throughout the country, so that many have suffered losing fine blooms. Hope is the anchor of the soul, and so we must wish for better conditions another year.

"Since our last meeting one of the world's most prominent originators has passed to the great beyond, M. Ernst Calvat, of Grenoble, France. His products have been popular both in England and America. While most novelties are soon cast aside and later products take their places, yet there are several originated by this worthy raiser which have gladdened the hearts of all exhibitors and are today among the best for this purpose. I refer to such varieties as M. Loiseau Rousseau, Pres. Viger, Mme. Carnot, S. A. Naceur Bey, Chrysanthemiste Montigny and Pres. Loubet.

"Before adjournment we should decide on the next meeting place, and I would suggest that our vice-president be selected from the same city or immediate vicinity. I wish to thank the members of the committees, who have given their time, regardless of other duties, to be on hand to examine seedlings: I am assured these gentlemen are benefactors, not only to this society but to the growers at large, in pointing out such of the new creations as are best adapted to the various purposes."

There was a magnificent display of chrysanthemums and other flowers at the annual chrysanthemum show, held in the town hall by the Lenox Horticultural Society, October 26 and 27, and the attendance was so large as to be quite gratifying to the officers of the society. The competition in some sec-

ly. All they want is a light covering. Outdoors two or three inches extra covering makes no difference, but under glass, with artificial conditions, it is different. I would advise reducing the water supply. Let the benches dry out well between waterings and keep the surface soil stirred. This will tend to sweeten, as well as warm it. Persevere in this treatment and I think your damping off will disappear. Do not keep the house too hot and close. Give ventilation on every favorable opportunity. C. W.

THE AUTUMN

EXHIBITIONS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The sixteenth annual fall exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society, held in the state armory, October 27 and 28, closed quite successfully, although not considered up to the standard of last year, which eclipsed all previous records. The unpleasant weather was held responsible for the smaller attendance, and the earlier date was blamed for the smaller number of exhibits. The queen of autumn was preëminent, although roses and carnations were strongly in evidence.

The commercial element was well represented by the Salford Flower Shop, B. Willig and Valentine Burgevin's Sons, who were strong competitors with the several private gardeners, who made an excellent showing.

The exhibit of vegetables was considered the finest ever set up, both in quality and variety. The ornamental groups were splendidly arranged.

The dinner tables brought out four competitors, each distinct. W. Allen, gardener for Fred W. Vanderbilt, decorated with Cattleya labiata and lavender sweet peas. N. Harold Cottam used Ivory chrysanthemums. Walter Paritt, gardener for Miss Atwood, used outdoor flowers entirely, the centerpiece being white cosmos. This was much admired, owing to its simplicity and perfect arrangement. Mr. Paritt also secured first prize for the best collection of vegetables, the prize being offered by A. T. Boddington.

Burgevin's Sons swept the deck on roses, with Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond.

Salford made a fine display with Canary Bird carnations and considers this variety the best yellow the firm has yet grown; it is a capital grower and free bloomer. They also had a grand lot of bay trees, arranged through the hall, which, with the overhead decoration of cedar in place of bunting, as formerly used, made an excellent setting for the blooms staged beneath.

The Julius Roehrs Co. had a grand exhibit of Celosia Pride of Castle Gould, which was greatly admired. The Salford Flower Shop secured the entire collection.

Fred Saenger, gardener for F. Ruembold, was first on carnations, with the old favorites, Winsor and Enchantress.

A. Rogers, Hyde Park, gardener for T. P. Connors, was first on groups.

H. J. Osterhoudt, gardener for W. P. Clyde, New Hamburg, N. Y., was first on specimen plants, well grown.

N. Harold Cottam exhibited a small collection of orchids in bloom, complete and perfectly grown.

James Blair, gardener for Ogden Mills, won first on cut flowers in largest variety.

Mrs. G. L. Hoyt secured first on a finely arranged basket of mums.

Mrs. W. Paritt, first for basket of mixed flowers.

LENOX, MASS.

There was a magnificent display of chrysanthemums and other flowers at the annual chrysanthemum show, held in the town hall by the Lenox Horticultural Society, October 26 and 27, and the attendance was so large as to be quite gratifying to the officers of the society. The competition in some sections was so close that the judges were not able to finish the awarding of prizes on the opening day, and their labors were continued on the following morning.

In the exhibit of miscellaneous plants arranged for effect, much interest was shown in the contest for the Henry A. Dreer silver cup, to be won twice before becoming the property of an exhibitor. Last year a similar cup, offered by the same company, was won by Fred Heeremans, grower for William D. Sloane, and this year Mr. Heeremans won again, it being the third year in succession in which he has won this event.

The Lenox chrysanthemum show is one of the few of which the national Chrysanthemum Society takes cognizance. This society offers a silver cup for the best ten chrysanthemum blooms of one variety. It was won by A. J.

Loveless, grower for Mrs. John Sloane, who showed ten Rose Pockett.

In the groups of orchids, not to exceed fifty square feet, A. J. Loveless won the award for the best group, and also the special prize offered by the Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J.

Among the novelties were fine specimens of Nephrolepis exaltata superba, shown by Henry A. Dreer, and an excellent display of cypripediums and cattleyas from the Julius Roehrs Co.

Seedsmen who visited the show praised the vegetable class unstintedly. They say it was the finest they have seen anywhere this year. The cup offered by Eustace Jaques for a display of eighteen varieties of vegetables was taken by Edwin Jenkins, grower for Giraud Foster, of Bellefontaine. The president's cup, offered by George Foulsham, was won by S. Carlquist, grower for Mrs. Robert Winthrop.

The plants will furnish flowers for several months.

Berried Plants for Christmas.

Christmas is the only holiday on which berried plants in pots meet with a ready sale. The principal varieties sold are ardisias, solanums, or Jerusalem cherries, and Christmas peppers. In order to have the stock really salable, it should be well grown and must have the fruit ripe. No matter how fine the plants may be, if the fruits are unripe, no one will buy them. A fine bench of ardisias was seen last year at a well known commercial place, which could not be moved—fine plants, capitally grown, but with fruit not half colored. This, of course, means a considerable loss to the grower. Ardisias are slow growing and must be retailed at a fairly high price, to allow any margin of profit. If the berries are still only partly colored, give them a warm, sunny house; 65 degrees at night is not too much and will help to ripen the fruit.

In the case of solanums, there is rarely any trouble in ripening them. The same holds true of Christmas peppers. If the latter are a little late, give them a sunny bench and a night temperature of 55 to 58 degrees. The berried solanums can, of course, be grown quite cold. Seedlings of the latter ripen later than plants raised from cuttings. They are, however, more bushy, robust and in every way more desirable. Such as are planted outdoors and lifted are also far superior to pot-grown stock.

Paper Whites and Roman Hyacinths.

The earliest Paper Whites are now in flower. The call for bulbous stock is as yet light and a small pick will suffice for the demand. There are too many mums still in season. With the crop of them decreasing, the call for miscellaneous flowers will improve. It is a good plan to place a batch of Paper Whites on the benches each week. Do not force them hard; 50 degrees at night will give you more satisfactory flowers than 60 degrees. When the flowers are expanded and until they are cut, keep them quite cool; 40 degrees at night will suffice. Roman hyacinths for Thanksgiving should be given a warm, moist house, 60 to 65 degrees at night; as they open, give 10 degrees less heat.

Rambler Roses.

The present is a suitable time to dig up and pot field-grown plants of any of the rambler roses wanted for forcing. No ball of earth is, of course, needed, but save as many roots intact as possible. Pot firmly and use good, fibrous loam, to which has been added some well-decayed manure and fine bone. Keep the plants outdoors yet for a week or two, until frost of sufficient severity to break the pots comes along. Then it is a good plan to protect the pots with straw for a time and not move them under cover until really severe, snowy weather compels it. Of course, the flowers from these dug-up plants are not equal to those on pot-grown stock, but they will flower well if not forced too early and, of course, Easter is the time when this class of rose is mostly in demand.

If purchasing rambler roses, do not limit your varieties to Crimson Rambler and the so-called Baby Rambler. The former is less popular than it was; pink varieties sell far better. Dorothy

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Azaleas.

The imported azaleas have recently been received and potted. Before potting, the bulbs were well soaked in tubs of water, as some of them get quite dry in transit, which means a considerable loss of foliage. Plants for Easter must be kept as cool as possible. Anything just clear of absolute freezing is all right. Such as are wanted in flower for Christmas are now started in a house where an average minimum temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is maintained. The hose is freely used among them and the atmosphere is kept quite humid. These moist conditions sometimes cause the plants to start into growth. It is best to rub out any of these young growths.

Two popular Christmas varieties, which have proved great sellers during the last two or three years, are Firefly, also called Hexe, crimson in color, and Charles Encke, pink. These are dwarfer in habit and carry smaller flowers than the general line of Indian azaleas. They also naturally flower rather earlier. Of the large-flowering class, Deutsche Perle will need but little forcing; Mme. Petrick, bright rose, is fine; Veraneana can be had in good shape for Christmas, as can Simon Mardner, silvery rose in color. Of the scarlets, Apollo can be had in flower if forced moderately. The color is just what is wanted at the holidays.

Storing Biennials or Perennials.

There are quite a number of biennials and perennials which, while they may prove quite hardy in the southern states, cannot always be depended upon to come through a northern winter unscathed. Were we sure of getting a substantial snow blanket after Thanksgiving, which would lie until St. Patrick's day or thereabouts, there would be less need to store many of these plants in frames, but the uncertainty of our climate forbids our taking many risks of this kind. Even in states quite well north, such things as Canterbury bells, foxgloves, Coreopsis grandiflora, sweet williams and similar plants can be planted out in late fall and will winter all right, but it is a good and safe plan to lift a good proportion of these plants now and plant quite closely in coldframes. Do not place any sashes over them for a while yet; it is sufficiently early to do this when we have had one or two quite sharp frosts, which have tightened the ground. Then scatter a light coating of perfectly dry leaves over the plants and place sashes over them. Air during warm weather and do not allow the leaves to get damp.

Pansies, daisies, forget-me-nots, violas and other spring flowering subjects, where they do not winter well in the open, should now be placed in coldframes. There is one advantage in having them under glass, as it is then easy to advance their flowering period over the outdoor grown stock, and baskets of the aforementioned little plants are fine sellers in early spring; the growers who are able to get them on the market in good season are always the best paid.

Calendulas.

Calendulas are of comparatively easy culture under glass. They may be common, but their colors are pleasing, and in late winter or early spring the stores are glad to get a bunch or two of them. Calendulas do not need a warm house; 45 degrees at night will grow them well; 55 degrees is altogether too warm. They make a useful crop to follow chrysanthemums with, being best on a side bench. Sow the seeds rather thinly, as the plants spread quite a little, and thin out the seedlings if they come up too thickly anywhere. Orange King, deep orange, and Lemon Queen, lemon yellow, are two desirable sorts to grow.

Rose Hilda, the Deeper Pink Sport of My Maryland.

Perkins, Farquhar and Lady Gay are all fine; Hiawatha, single, scarlet, and Wedding Bells are beauties. Be sure to get a few of the beautiful Tausendschon, which will sell on sight. Leuchstern, with its apple-blossom colored flowers, is also a charming thing.

General Outdoor Work.

In many sections rain is still sorely needed and the extreme dryness of the soil is seriously delaying fall planting. As to hardy perennials, it is now rather late to move peonies, but nearly all other varieties can still be planted and they will give a far better account of themselves if moved now than in April. About all perennials succeed better if replanted every third year, and all appreciate ground which has been well manured and deeply plowed or spaded. Far too many put off this work until spring, when a host of other duties crowd. Planting in early November will give vastly better results than planting in April. Try both plans and be convinced.

With a few exceptions, deciduous shrubs can now be moved with perfect safety. Perhaps in the coldest states, fall planting of these, owing to the early freezing of the ground, may be undesirable, but there can be no question that over a wide stretch of country much of the work usually postponed until spring would be more profitably done now. With dry soil, of course, watering is necessary. Soak the roots thoroughly and firm the soil well and few plants will fail to grow. The one great danger from fall planting is in an insufficient supply of moisture at the roots before the ground freezes up tight. Shrubs with roots dry when the soil freezes will probably die if no winter thaws allow water to reach the roots. In the case of evergreens, dryness at the root causes far more deaths than winter's cold. Even with valuable plants, which are not to be moved, it is an excellent plan to soak the roots well before winter sets in, unless copious rains reach them.

HILDA, SPORT OF MARYLAND.

It will be recalled that Myers & Samtman, of Chestnut Hill, Pa., were among the first large growers to take up My Maryland rose and plant it extensively. From the first time they saw Maryland growing at the Baltimore establishment of John Cook, they never have lost faith in the variety; after their first season with it they declared it to be the most profitable rose they ever had grown, and when a deeper, darker pink sport appeared at their place it was welcomed with much joy. After working up considerable stock they gave it the name Hilda, and now are cutting some splendid blooms. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made of some flowers shipped from Chestnut Hill to the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, who are the western representatives of Myers & Samtman. The flowers were shipped on Monday, reached Chicago

Wednesday and were photographed on Thursday afternoon; some of them were good enough on Saturday evening so that they were worn to the theater. These blooms were on stems from thirty to forty inches in length and had the Maryland characteristics coupled with much deeper color. As the vase stood on the counters of the Randall Co. the flowers were examined by many retailers and growers, who invariably passed favorable comment on the variety. It is said that Myers & Samtman grow it on solid beds.

STOCKS NOT FLOWERING.

My stocks, Princess Alice, do not bloom. They are nice, bushy plants, about one foot high, but no signs of flowers are to be seen. What can I do with them? Can they be transplanted inside, or potted up? What is the best thing to do with them?

W. F.

It would not pay you to lift the stocks. They cannot be taken up with a ball, as they make few fibrous roots. Of course you could pot them and probably get them to live after losing a lot of foliage, but the returns will not pay for the trouble. My advice would be to sow seed of some of the better forcing varieties, such as Beauty of Nice, White Column or early ten weeks'. These will flower in early spring, at the time when the flowers will be quite salable, much more so than in midwinter.

tions was so close that the judges were not able to finish the awarding of prizes on the opening day, and their labors were continued on the following morning.

In the exhibit of miscellaneous plants arranged for effect, much interest was shown in the contest for the Henry A. Dreer silver cup, to be won twice before becoming the property of an exhibitor. Last year a similar cup, offered by the same company, was won by Fred Heeremans, grower for William D. Sloane, and this year Mr. Heeremans won again, it being the third year in succession in which he has won this event.

The Lenox chrysanthemum show is one of the few of which the national Chrysanthemum Society takes cognizance. This society offers a silver cup for the best ten chrysanthemum blooms of one variety. It was won by A. J.

Loveless, grower for Mrs. John Sloane, who showed ten Rose Pockett.

In the groups of orchids, not to exceed fifty square feet, A. J. Loveless won the award for the best group, and also the special prize offered by the Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J.

Among the novelties were fine specimens of Nephrolepis exaltata superba, shown by Henry A. Dreer, and an excellent display of cypripediums and catleyas from the Julius Roehrs Co.

Seedsmen who visited the show praised the vegetable class unstintedly. They say it was the finest they have seen anywhere this year. The cup offered by Eustace Jaques for a display of eighteen varieties of vegetables was taken by Edwin Jenkins, grower for Giraud Foster, of Bellefontaine. The president's cup, offered by George Poulsham, was won by S. Carlquist, grower for Mrs. Robert Winthrop.

The plants will furnish flowers for several months.

Berried Plants for Christmas.

Christmas is the only holiday on which berried plants in pots meet with a ready sale. The principal varieties sold are ardisias, solanums, or Jerusalem cherries, and Christmas peppers. In order to have the stock really salable, it should be well grown and must have the fruit ripe. No matter how fine the plants may be, if the fruits are unripe, no one will buy them. A fine bench of ardisias was seen last year at a well known commercial place, which could not be moved—fine plants, capitally grown, but with fruit not half colored. This, of course, means a considerable loss to the grower. Ardisias are slow growing and must be retailed at a fairly high price, to allow any margin of profit. If the berries are still only partly colored, give them a warm, sunny house; 65 degrees at night is not too much and will help to ripen the fruit.

In the case of solanums, there is rarely any trouble in ripening them. The same holds true of Christmas peppers. If the latter are a little late, give them a sunny bench and a night temperature of 55 to 58 degrees. The berried solanums can, of course, be grown quite cold. Seedlings of the latter ripen later than plants raised from cuttings. They are, however, more bushy, robust and in every way more desirable. Such as are planted outdoors and lifted are also far superior to pot-grown stock.

Paper Whites and Roman Hyacinths.

The earliest Paper Whites are now in flower. The call for bulbous stock is as yet light and a small pick will suffice for the demand. There are too many mums still in season. With the crop of them decreasing, the call for miscellaneous flowers will improve. It is a good plan to place a batch of Paper Whites on the benches each week. Do not force them hard; 50 degrees at night will give you more satisfactory flowers than 60 degrees. When the flowers are expanded and until they are cut, keep them quite cool; 40 degrees at night will suffice. Roman hyacinths for Thanksgiving should be given a warm, moist house, 60 to 65 degrees at night; as they open, give 10 degrees less heat.

Rambler Roses.

The present is a suitable time to dig up and pot field-grown plants of any of the rambler roses wanted for forcing. No ball of earth is, of course, needed, but save as many roots intact as possible. Pot firmly and use good, fibrous loam, to which has been added some well-decayed manure and fine bone. Keep the plants outdoors yet for a week or two, until frost of sufficient severity to break the pots comes along. Then it is a good plan to protect the pots with straw for a time and not move them under cover until really severe, snowy weather compels it. Of course, the flowers from these dug-up plants are not equal to those on pot-grown stock, but they will flower well if not forced too early and, of course, Easter is the time when this class of rose is mostly in demand.

If purchasing rambler roses, do not limit your varieties to Crimson Rambler and the so-called Baby Rambler. The former is less popular than it was; pink varieties sell far better. Dorothy

MUMS AT BINLEY'S.

A. J. Binley, Glens Falls, N. Y., has just sent out a rather unique advertisement in the shape of a Japanese banner. It was printed on yellow paper, shaped like a banner, the upper end pasted on a 3-inch piece of match stick and the lower corners clipped a bit. On one side were the so-called Japanese characters and on the other the "translation." They are here reproduced in one column for economy of space:

菊
花
展 見
多 ク
ハ
ー

THE characters on the other side of this paper are Japanese and we have taken a great deal of pains to have the characters printed and translated into English. The first two constitute the word "Chrysan-themum," the next two "Exhibition," the next one "at," the last four "Binley's." It therefore reads thus:

"Chrysanthemum Exhibition at Binley's."

As we have enlarged our plant the past season we would respectfully invite all lovers of this Japanese Flower to come and see our display. We have Giant Chrysanthemums, Baby Chrysanthemums, Single Chrysanthemums, Double Chrysanthemums, Incurved, Crimped, Fluted and all other kinds, together with a nice stock of those beautiful Lace Ferns, Palms, Araucarias, Rubber Plants, etc., and we shall be pleased to see you during the week commencing November 1st.

YELLOW TOUSET.

I noticed in The Review for October 27 that a subscriber wants to know if there has ever been a true yellow sport of Mme. C. Touset introduced into the trade. A true yellow sport of this variety originated at our North Side Greenhouses, at Columbus City, Ind., in 1909. We now have thirty plants and by next year hope to have a good stock of this variety worked up. It is one of the finest yellows we ever have had and is a good seller and has the other good qualities of its parent stock.
D. C. Noble.

J. A. Budlong, Chicago, has a yellow sport of Touset, which has been this season one of the best selling cut blooms for this firm. The flower at certain stages of development has the same pinkish tinge in the center that is characteristic of Touset, but in other stages is clear yellow.

STOCK BECOMES MIXED.

I have had a peculiar experience this fall and should like to get your opinion on the matter. I have been growing Golden Glow chrysanthemums for two years previous to this and they have come all right in color. I have also had, perhaps, twenty-five plants of Pink Pacific. I was careful to keep all the clumps separate and labeled in the taking of cuttings. I also labeled them all in the cutting bench and in transplanting them to the flats of soil. I only wanted a few pinks and all the rest yellow, but now, as they begin to show color, they are all coming pink and white. I planted them on a solid bench June 15, and took the first bud August 23. Now, what is the reason for this? Are they a sport which reverts back, and will I have to get new clumps to start anew again next spring? C. E. Y.

There seems to be no question whatever but that C. E. Y.'s stock has become mixed. My reason for thinking that he must have made a mistake, is because yellows do not sport to pink and white. Yellow is supposed to be the original color of the chrysanthemum, and when a chrysanthemum sports, as it often does, it will run from pink to white and from white to yellow in an endeavor to get back to the primary color, but I do not at this moment recall any instance where a yellow has sported any other color.

The foliage of Golden Glow and Pink Pacific is entirely distinct and C. E. Y. should be easily able to see which varieties the plants resemble.

It would be an easy matter for the Pink Pacific to be sporting white this year, as it has done so on many occasions, Polly Rose and several others having come from Pacific as the parent. The only supposition that seems to me to explain the situation is that the Golden Glow stock has died out completely and some of the Pacific have sported to white. As before stated, it is against botanical history, unless I greatly mistake, for a yellow to sport to pink or white. Chas. H. Totty.

FLOWERS FADING.

Can you tell me what is the matter with my Glory of Pacifics? We are growing them outdoors, under canvas. They were the most vigorous grower among the fifteen varieties planted; when about one-third open they were a beautiful shade of pink, but when in full bloom a pure white. In fact, the most popular white among my customers. When in bud I gave them a 2-inch mulch of horse manure. Could that have affected the color? T. O.

It is by no means unusual for Glory of Pacific to fade, although it does not often bleach out, as this correspondent says, to a pure white. I do not consider that the mulch of horse manure affected the color, but the sun most certainly does, and in an autumn as bright as this has been it would appear that this is the solution of the problem. Anyone who watches his flowers closely in a greenhouse can see them fade from day to day, and especially with pink varieties the color of which seems to be of an evanescent nature. C. H. T.

SCALE ON PLUMOSUS.

I am sending a leaf of Asparagus plumosus and wish you would tell me whether there is mealy bug on it. It does not look like mealy bug, as the specks seem to be finer. The foliage all turns brown and dies after a time. Can you tell me what the trouble is, and the remedy? L. H. T.

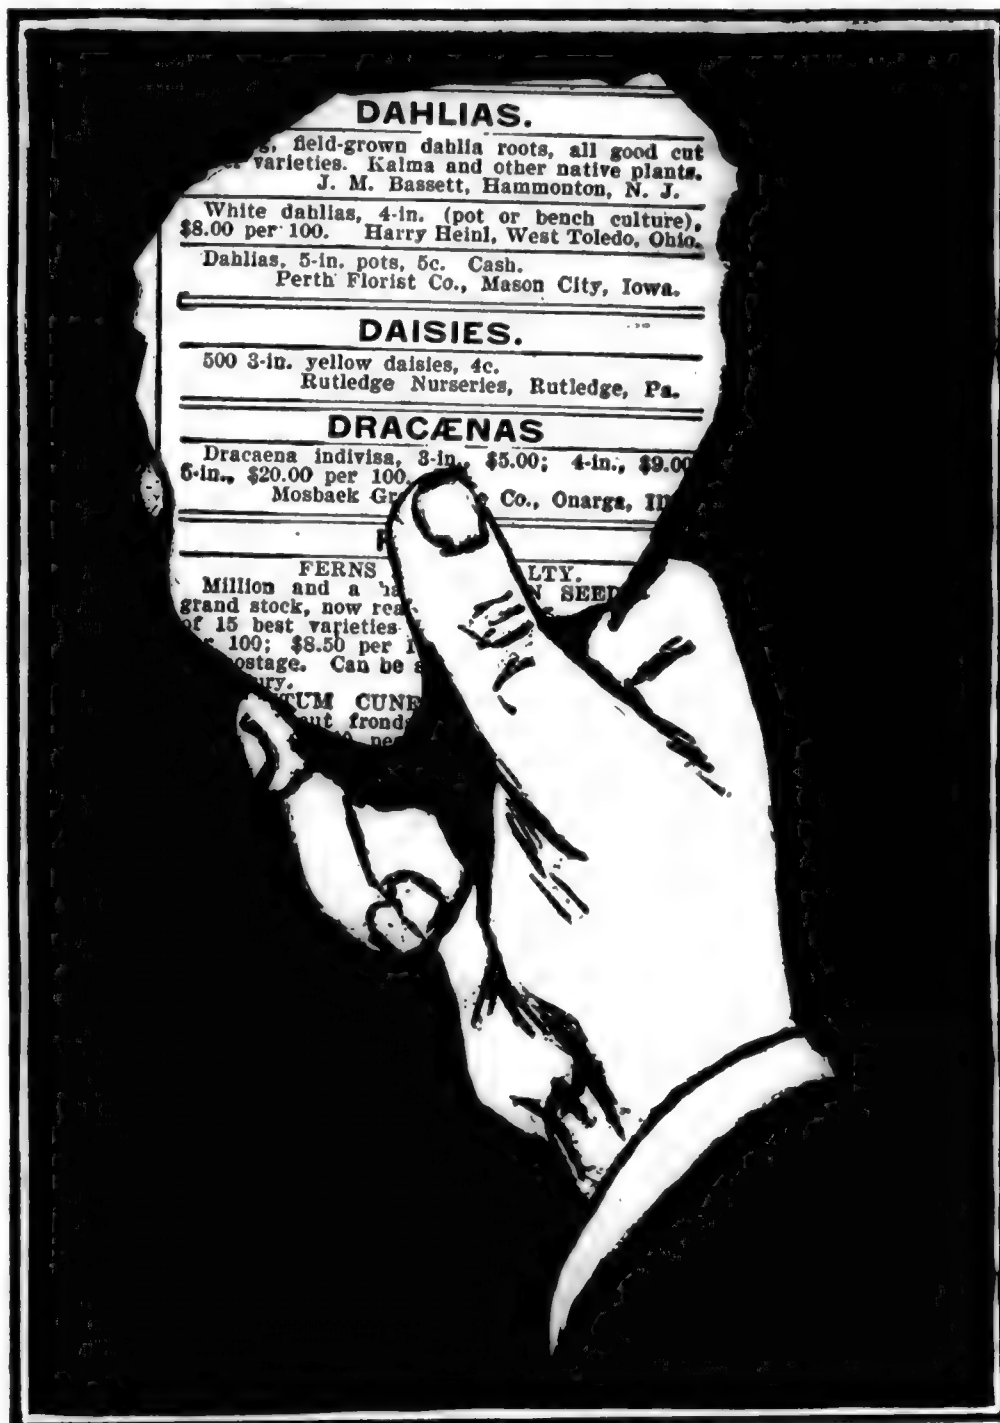

The asparagus in question is suffering from white scale, a pest that is not easy to eradicate on such a plant. Try dipping in a solution of Ivory soap, the solution to consist of one ounce of the soap to one gallon of water. Two or three applications of this remedy, at intervals of about three days, should kill the scale. After dipping, lay the plant on its side to drain, as it would not be good for the roots if much of the soap solution should run down into the soil. W. H. T.

FORMS FOR CONCRETE.

Since freshly mixed concrete is a plastic material, forms of some kind are necessary to hold it in place and in shape until the cement sets up and the concrete becomes hard. Lumber is the material most commonly used.

The first requisite of good forms is that they should be tight, so that the liquid cement may not run out between the cracks, cause pockets or hollows, and thus ruin the looks of the work as well as decrease its strength. Consequently straight boards are most desirable. Dressed lumber is usually straightest and yields a neater finish to the concrete. But for ordinary purposes rough lumber is sufficiently good. Naturally the siding must be stiff enough not to bulge out of shape when the forms are first filled with concrete. This does not mean that heavy siding is necessary. In fact, 1-inch boards are usually sufficiently strong. The bulging may be prevented by setting 2x4 studs from twenty to thirty inches apart, according to the thickness of siding boards or sheathing used.

Most concrete work is built in what is known as the box form, which, with variations, consists of one box within another, between which the concrete walls are molded. See that the forms are lined up properly before beginning to fill them, as they must not be disturbed after the concrete is in place.

If new forms are wet, before the concrete is placed, and allowed to remain in position until it has thoroughly set, bits of concrete will seldom stick to them. For particular work, or where forms are to be used more than once, it is advisable to coat them, previous to erection, with soft soap or oil. Linseed, black or cylinder oil is suitable, but kerosene is not good. Upon taking down the forms, immediately clean off all bits of concrete clinging to them. For this purpose a short-handled hoe is convenient, but it must be used with care, so as not to gouge the wood.

All other things being equal, the strength of concrete is dependent upon its density or compactness. Where possible, the easiest way to render concrete dense is by mixing and placing it wet. For very wet concrete the forms must be tight, so that the liquid cement cannot escape. To give a neat finish to the surfaces which will later be exposed, force the larger stones back from the outside by running a straight spade or a wooden paddle down in the concrete next to the wall forms and working it back and forth.

It frequently happens that very wet concrete cannot be used. To make it drier, mix dense and strong; tamp or ram it into place with a heavy wooden or iron tamper.

Exposed surfaces of freshly placed concrete should be shaded to protect them from rain, dust and the hot rays of the sun. Freezing injures freshly placed concrete. Hot water and salt are sometimes used to counteract the frost action; but, on the whole, it is better to attempt no outside work in winter. During the early months of spring and fall see that no frozen sand, gravel or rock is used in the work. In summer ordinary forms, for walls supporting no loads, may be removed after the concrete is three days old, but in cooler weather they should not be touched short of five days.

ORCHIDS

CATTLEYA BUDS ROTTING.

Can you advise me in reference to Cattleya labiata? My plants make fine, healthy sheaths; the buds grow up in the sheaths from one to two inches and then stand still and rot, the sheath remaining in an apparently healthy condition. It seems as if too much water had been given at some stage of development. Will repotting into new fiber help them? G. B.

The sheath forwarded was a fine one and contained five buds which were quite rotten. You evidently have strong plants, as this is more than the average number of flowers C. labiata produces per sheath, though occasionally six are produced and in exceptional cases seven. All cattleyas want a good water supply until the bulbs are made up. This is before the flower buds begin to push up in the sheaths. Cattleyas may have no real resting period, but it is imperative that the supply of moisture at the roots should be gradually decreased before any buds show through the sheaths, and they need little water while the buds are developing or while the flowers are open. It is a common error to give an abundant water supply while they are in bloom, growers thinking that this will keep the flowers fresh longer and improve their quality. The reverse is the case.

From the time the bulbs are made up until new growths are nicely started, cattleyas want a light water supply and it is safer to err on the dry side. The fleshy bulbs in themselves, if cut off, will keep the flowers fresh as long as though they were placed in water. The same is true of cælogynes, dendrobiums and other orchids.

Repotting of cattleyas should be done after the flowering season is over and just before new growth commences. Your plants may or may not require repotting. As a general thing, they are better if they get an overhaul each season. This will not prevent rotting in the sheaths, but will be good for the plants. Too much water at the roots is undoubtedly the cause of your trouble. Reduce the supply considerably another year when the bulbs are well plumped up and you should have no further loss of this kind. Quite a few growers have the same trouble, from too much heat, too much root moisture and insufficient ventilation. The ventilators on the cattleya house should be open both night and day as late in the season as possible, and even in midwinter it is possible to leave bottom air on, except on the coldest nights. Plenty of fresh air is what cattleyas like, and a position as near the glass as possible. Add to this careful watering, firm potting and a winter minimum temperature of 55 degrees and the bulk of the regular commercial varieties will do well. C.

WATER VS. OIL.

There is only one place where water is at a premium and that place is on the desert. There water is worth as much if not more than oil, and there only.

Water is the cheapest ingredient that can be put into paint, and the most deceiving as well; for very few people imagine that water and oil will mix.

Contrary to the old adage, water and oil do mix by chemical action, through the assistance of a powerful alkali, making an emulsion of oil.

Paint made in this manner must necessarily be much cheaper than that made with pure linseed oil and turpentine, and its use is always at the expense of the house owner.

It cannot last any longer than common whitewash, and the labor of applying is just as great as for first-class paint. When this inferior paint begins to deteriorate, it leaves the wood bare in spots, and it costs money to remove it; so that "the last state of that house was worse than the first."

Seventy per cent of the cost of painting a house is the labor. Can anyone afford to use a paint that does not state in plain language, on every can, its true contents?—Patton's Monthly.

PRINCETON, N. J.

Stockton & Howe have nearly 40,000 feet of glass, devoted to roses, with calla lilies and Adiantum hybridum as side crops. Their latest house, 55x316, is planted with Richmond and Killarney in solid beds. Three older houses, 21x310 each, are filled with roses in raised benches—two with Brides, the third with their new rose, Princeton. The front bench of their north side propagating house is planted with Adiantum hybridum and a corridor house with calla lilies, just coming into bloom. The plants are all looking well, promising to uphold the firm's reputation for high grade stock during the coming season.

The heating is by hot water from a Pierson sectional boiler and by steam; the two systems are working together, the former being used in severe weather, while the steam is used in mild weather and for emergencies. Mr. Stockton prefers steam. Water is pumped from two artesian wells, each having a capacity of twelve gallons per minute, into an elevated tank. A compression tank is also used to give power for syringing.

The product of this place is handled by Berger Bros., of Philadelphia. The flowers are packed in wooden trays, made of spruce three-eighths of an inch thick. The spruce is sawed in a mill into strips five feet long and six inches wide; each box is twelve inches wide and six inches high. After being unpacked, the spruce strips are taken apart, fastened in bundles and shipped back by freight, an economical and most satisfactory method. Phil.

Oneonta, N. Y.—B. Ackley has added a conservatory to his dwelling, making an excellent show house. He is replacing wood with concrete, and intends adding a house for carnations.

LILY OF THE VALLEY

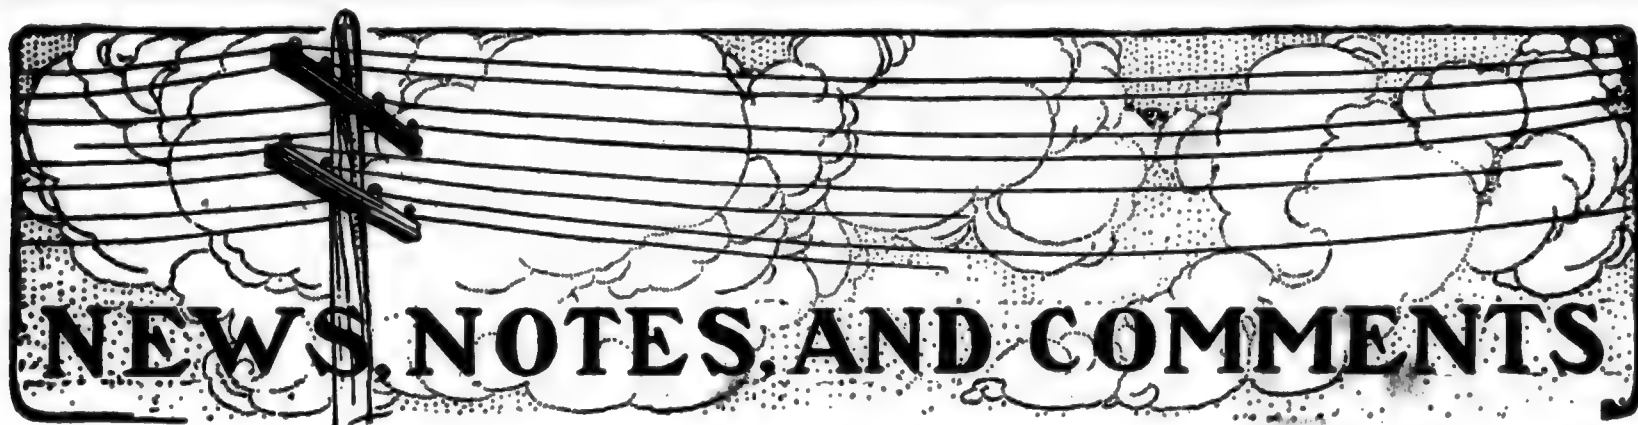

VALLEY IN COLDFRAMES.

Can you give me cultural directions for lily of the valley in coldframes, so as to have a succession of flowers, beginning in the early spring? E. A. P.

Any well built wood or brick frame will answer your purpose. It is essential that it should be of sufficient depth to allow a foot of warm manure for the earliest batches. After April no bottom heat is necessary. A bed of clean sand, six inches thick, is the best and cleanest material to plant the pips in. It is an advantage to have this sand moderately coarse, rather than fine. Let the pips, when planted, be twelve to eighteen inches from the glass. For the first ten to fourteen days, or even longer for the first batches, keep the glass darkened with boards or cloth. Gradually inure the plants to light, in order to get some foliage. Do not use any water after the flowers start to expand, as they are liable to damp.

A fresh batch should be started every week, and one sash with a close division should be set apart for each. A frame of half a dozen sashes would suffice if you wanted only a moderate quantity. The pips can be planted quite thickly in the sand and the same sand can be used as often as desired. The pips do not make any roots while being forced. A strong bottom heat should be accompanied by a much lower atmospheric heat. For instance, in forcing valley at a bottom heat of 80 to 85 degrees, the heat above should not exceed 55 degrees. If it were 80 to 85 degrees, the stems would be thin, spindling and of poor quality. It takes longer to get the flowers in the lower temperature, but you get the quality as a compensation. C. W.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Geneva, Ill.—John Lietzau is planning to make a large addition to his greenhouses on North First street.

Cedar Falls, Ia.—F. W. Fagan has gone out of the florists' business and his name should be marked off mailing lists.

Newport, R. I.—Edwin S. Manuel is well pleased with his success at the recent dahlia show at Providence, where he captured three first and three second prizes.

Norwich, Conn.—The large estate of Mrs. William Camp Lamnan will be run as a strictly commercial place, under the name of the Ghlambones Greenhouses. Charles T. Beasley is in charge.

Goshen, Ind.—A. E. Kunderd has planted about 6,000 peonies and 10,000 tulips on his gladiolus farm at Cline's crossing. His stock of peonies is said to contain 235 varieties. It is his intention to have ten acres in flowers by next year.

Durham, N. C.—Frederick Roll has removed to his own property, at the corner of Lakewood avenue and Chapel Hill road, where he owns a tract of six acres, on which he has erected three greenhouses, each 20x80. He will build another greenhouse next year.

Alameda, Cal.—G. Vandenberg, proprietor of the Alameda Floral Co., won several prizes for orchids and ferns at the fall flower show held in the Fairmont hotel, San Francisco, under the auspices of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society and the California State Floral Society.

Houghton, Mich.—The Lakeside Floral Co., of this city, Calumet and Chasell, has discontinued the bakery business which was a part of the establishment here. The firm's flower business had grown to such proportions as to be much in need of the space which was occupied by the baking department.

Holyoke, Mass.—G. H. Sinclair, on Appleton street, has one house devoted to a carnation originated by himself and named by him Alena, for his little daughter. It is white, with a red center. It is large and full and is said to be deliciously fragrant. Some growers have the opinion that, if it holds true, it will be one of the most beautiful carnations ever put on the market.

New Orleans, La.—J. A. Newsham, of the Magnolia Nursery, recently had a special display of his orchid stock and presented an orchid flower to each lady who called at the nursery during the day. Mr. Newsham now has a fine collection of orchids, including twenty of the choicest varieties, some of which were collected by himself and by his 15-year-old son, Dan, in Central America.

Gorham, Me.—A new heating system has been installed in the Roland Barrows greenhouses, on Main street.

Lake City, Ia.—Mrs. M. M. Titus has purchased the greenhouse stock of Mrs. Fuller, who is no longer in business here.

Norfolk, Va.—A greenhouse, 21x100, is being constructed at Diamond Springs for Prof. T. C. Johnson, in charge of the Virginia Truck Experimental Station.

Dayton, O.—C. M. Schaefer, manager of the Advance Floral Co., has had a souvenir post card prepared showing his firm's float in the fall festival parade, and has already distributed over 5,000, finding it an excellent advertisement.

Atlanta, Ga.—Since Borg & Erickson purchased the business of the Atlanta Floral Co., a few months ago, many improvements have been made and new facilities have been added. W. G. Adams, an experienced decorator, was recently engaged by the firm.

Canton, O.—The business of the Lamborn Floral Store has been purchased by J. R. and V. A. Cowgill, enterprising young men who are already connected with the trade in Salem, O. The store here will be conducted by J. R. Cowgill, while V. A. Cowgill will continue the business at Salem.

New Orleans, La.—J. C. Quinette, who conducts nurseries and greenhouses here and has been well known in the trade for twenty-five years, has now added a flower department to his tree and plant store at 727 Common street. The store will be known as the Floral Shop. Mr. Quinette is a native of this city.

Newton, Kan.—During the last six months the Rosebud Co. has been reconstructing and restocking the range of seven greenhouses at 435 West Seventh street, and now the whole establishment is in first-class condition for business. The proprietors are Miss Hurst and Mrs. Frank Jones, who purchased the place from C. L. Shanks. They are assisted by an experienced florist.

Dallas, Ore.—D. L. Thomas, proprietor of the Central Willamette Floral Co., sees a bright outlook for the trade in this section and is preparing to put up a range of glass large enough to do more than supply the needs of his own retail store, so that he can cater to the wholesale demand in both cut flowers, blooming and ornamental plants. In addition, he has outdoor space for field-grown rose plants and similar stock. At present a store and a small amount of glass are operated along the lines on which expansion is proposed.

Watertown, Wis.—George Benke has been succeeded by the firm of Benke Bros.

Missoula, Mont.—Chas. F. Dallman has removed from the Higgins building to a store in the Montana block.

Naugatuck, Conn.—H. G. Dennison, of Union City, has sold his greenhouses to H. L. Hamilton, of Rockville.

Amesbury, Mass.—Herbert G. Leslie has built an addition to his greenhouses, on Main street. The addition includes a boiler room.

Woburn, Mass.—The greenhouses of J. Howard, at the Lexington and Woburn line, were damaged by fire on the night of October 20. The shed where the gasoline engine was housed was destroyed, and a part of a greenhouse.

Albany, N. Y.—Greenhouses are to be erected in the rear of the residence of George C. Hawley, 994 Madison avenue. The palm house is to be twenty feet high and the other houses sixteen feet high, with walls of vitrified brick.

Attica, N. Y.—Anton J. Pauly, formerly head florist at Frederick C. Stevens' Maplewood Stock Farm, has resigned that position. He has some greenhouses of his own, which hereafter will demand most of his attention.

Helena, Mont.—The Florists' and Nurserymen's Association of Montana continues to make steady progress and the latest additions to its membership are as follows: James King, of the Butte Floral Co.; Victor Larson, with the State Nursery Co., and M. L. Tiffin and E. W. Horton, with the Montana Nursery Co.

St. Joseph, Mo.—Fred Krumm, of the Krumm Bros. Floral Co., was recently the victim of an assault which proved almost fatal. While seated in a bedroom connected with the greenhouses, on Hansen avenue, at a late hour in the evening, he was struck in the back of the head by someone who had entered unnoticed. Mr. Krumm fell to the floor and was unconscious for half an hour. His brother, Henry Krumm, was sleeping in the same room, but was not awakened.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The Central Floral Co., at the corner of Twenty-sixth and Central avenues, has invested $5,000 in the construction of greenhouses, so that the firm is now able to supply its customers with blooms and plants of its own growing. The greenhouses contain three 175-foot benches of carnations and three 150-foot benches of roses, besides some good sized beds of violets, chrysanthemums and other stock. Connected with the greenhouses is a boiler house, 18x32, with a cement basement, in which a fifty horse-power boiler has been installed.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS, MARCH 4-'01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE flower markets all have showed a little better tone in the last week. The weather is the greatest single factor in this business.

FOUR of the largest flower shows to be held this season will be in progress in the west next week. It makes it hard for exhibitors.

THERE has been a sharp drop in the price of window glass. Some big orders have been placed this week much below recent quotations.

THERE is prospect of a comparative shortage of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving. Early midseason and late sorts have all been on the market at the same time and many growers had cut the larger part of their crop before October's end.

C. S. BARNETT, who in addition to being a florist and chrysanthemum specialist is superintendent and county examiner of the public schools at Eureka Springs, Ark., advises that the Civic Improvement Association there will hold its eighth annual flower show this week, November 4 and 5.

OBITUARY.

Matthew N. Knox.

Matthew N. Knox, 71 years old, a retired nurseryman of San Antonio, Tex., died recently at his home, 1702 North Comal street, after an illness of six months. He was born in Mississippi, September 6, 1839, and removed to Brenham, Tex., in 1860. He was married February 22, 1862, and enlisted that summer in the Twentieth Texas Confederate Infantry, serving to the close of the war. He made his home in San Antonio in 1868, engaged in the nursery business in 1876 and continued his active connection with the trade until four years ago. He was a member of the Southern Methodist Church and Albert Sidney Johnston Camp, United Confederate Veterans.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna W. Knox, and four children, Edward W. and William J. Knox, of San Antonio; Mrs. C. W. Palma, of Chickasha, Okla.; Mrs. C. F. Goodenough, Jr., of Sutherland Springs, and a sister, Mrs. Allan Harris, of Batesville.

John Grant.

John Grant, a florist and farmer of Portsmouth, N. H., died at the Cottage hospital, in that city, October 22, after a long illness. He was 67 years old. For forty years or more he had conducted greenhouses on his farm and had built up a good business. He is survived by two brothers, D. W. Grant, of Portsmouth, and C. M. Grant, of Haverhill, and by three sisters, Mrs. M. E. Joaquin, Mrs. Lydia McClusky and Mrs. Clara Gillett, all of Minneapolis, Minn.

FAILURES IN ENGLAND.

What the trade press in England has said about dwindling profits of florists, nurserymen and gardeners in that country seems hardly borne out by the government reports on business failures in these trades. Close records are kept, from which it appears that in the last five years there were only 204 failures, involving total liabilities of $1,007,250, the English pound being figured as $5 in the following record:

Year.	Failures.	Liabilities.
1906	31	$135,325
1907	32	811,715
1908	45	177,835
1909	48	219,055
1910	48	163,820

This makes an average liability for each of the 204 failures of only £987, or, in round figures, $4,900.

Similar figures are not available for the United States, but if they were it is to be doubted if they would make an equally good showing, certainly not in number of failures, and probably not in percentage of failures as compared with the numbers engaged in the florists, nursery and gardening business, or in the smallness of the average liabilities. And this in spite of the fact that the period covered includes the most prosperous years the rapidly expanding horticultural trades of this country ever have experienced.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

It has been the weather that has been playing titter-totter recently. Following a week of abnormally high temperature came three days much colder than usual; at the greenhouses readings as low as 18 degrees were reported on the morning of October 28, and outdoor flowers are now out of the running for this season. Since the cold snap the temperature has moderated and then taken another sharp drop. The flower business has not yet recovered its equilibrium. There was good business October 29 and 31, but demand was light the first two days of November.

The chrysanthemum continues to dominate the market. Receipts are heavy, but there is a change since a week ago; Bonnaillon and the later, larger and better varieties, such as Eaton, are coming in, so that better prices are being received without there having been any special change in the

A constant supply of the finest Cattleyas.

In addition to our many other strong lines we have arranged for a steady supply of the finest Cattleyas—you can order of us with every assurance that you will get first-class stock on time.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS!

The later varieties—the best of all Mums—are now coming in. There is no exaggeration in the statement that we have the best stock of Mums to be found anywhere in the west—every good commercial variety that's in season; all colors, all sizes, all prices. Let us hear from you about your Mum needs, it's to our mutual advantage.

KILLARNEY

AND OTHER ROSES

It is not alone on Killarney and White Killarney that we are strong—we can supply all other roses of excellent quality and any quantity. Excellent crops of Richmond and Maryland now on.

BEAUTIES

We have a splendid crop NOW, and the showing in the greenhouses warrants us in saying we shall have the most successful Beauty season in the history of our business. If you want to get in touch with a source of supply that will leave nothing to be desired, write us.

CARNATIONS

For years we have been known as handling the largest lot of uniformly high quality Carnations in this market, but we do not recall a season when our Carnations were so good or in such heavy supply at this date. Buyers who use Carnations in quantity will do well to write us about regular shipments.

Lilies

We can supply Easter Lilies in quantity every day in the year. Plenty of them NOW. Also Auratums and Rubrums.

Violets

We have the cream of the Hudson river doubles and we can say that they are really good; also first-class singles.

demand; there still are too many medium and small mums.

The growers of Beauties and roses have learned that the chrysanthemum season is not the best time for other flowers and they are working their crops as far as possible to get the heaviest cut before chrysanthemum time, and later. The result is that the market is not overloaded with Beauties and roses to the extent that it usually is during the chrysanthemum season. Better prices are being obtained than frequently has been the case in other years. Beauties actually are on the short side; not that orders are cut, but that Beauties are not pressing for a market. Some wonderfully fine Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland are now received, stock that readily commands a special figure, though it is not every buyer who can use such goods. Richmond is not as abundant as the other varieties.

There is much difference in the quality of the carnations cut by the different growers. Some are strictly first-class, while others are as yet cutting only short stems. The market for carnations is not strong, though it is better than during the hot weather. The supply of carnations so far this season has certainly been ahead of all previous records and the prices realized have been below normal.

At the close of last week violet shipments were much reduced, but they are now heavier again. The best grade of goods has commanded an advance in price and the wholesalers are hopeful that the violet market has once more come into its normal winter course. A few sweet peas are arriving, much earlier than in other years. Orchids have gone off crop and the price of cattleyas has been advanced. At the opening of this week there was a flurry in valley. Easter lilies are once more abundant. A few good daisies are seen.

The green goods market remains quiet.

October Business.

October did not fulfill the hopes of the wholesalers. The first part of the month was fair, or better, but the latter part of the month brought a discouraging two weeks, during which the sales of the majority of the houses fell off to a marked extent in spite of a considerable increase in the quantity of stock handled. There was some improvement at the end of the month and a fairly good run of business for All Saints' day, most of these orders coming in October 29, but All Saints' day is no longer what it was in years gone by; the wholesalers fear it never again will have its old-time importance, except in a year when the southern growers meet misfortune with their outdoor crop.

Club Doings.

The Florists' Club will hold its monthly meeting tonight, November 3, at the Union restaurant. The following applications for membership are on file: Thomas Laing, La Grange, Ill.; Fred Dietsch, John Then and F. W. Martin.

Wheat Sheaves

If you could be in our factory and see plain, loose wheat take shape — watch its transformation into our "Famous Sheaves"—it would be of absorbing interest to you to see our Patented Wheat Sheaf-making device, by the use of which we are able to make our unsurpassed sheaves more rapidly, thus lowering the cost of production, giving you the benefit thereof in our quality and low prices.

We hold the recognized distinction of being the largest manufacturers of Wheat Sheaves in the United States. Quality, Workmanship, Appearance and Price is a combination hard to equal and impossible to beat.

since 1900, and with three exceptions, the warmest since the official records began in 1871. The temperature during the first twenty-six days was almost continuously above the normal. The only cold days were October 28 and 29, on the latter of which the first killing frost of the autumn occurred, two weeks later than is usual. The precipitation was below the normal, and about sixty-two per cent of the total amount fell during the daytime. The wind movement was slightly deficient, and the amount of sunshine somewhat greater than usual for October.

Various Notes.

E. C. Amling calls attention to the fact that chrysanthemum growers early this week caught up with their crops, and that the stock since sent in shows that the mums are no longer pressing for a market.

E. B. Washburn and one of his friends in the real estate business are at work upon a project for a florists' building at the corner of Randolph and Market streets. It is thought that a saving in money with increased facilities can be shown to wholesalers, and space in the building can be provided for the entire market interests.

H. A. Philpott arrived from Winnipeg October 31 to remain until after the close of the flower show. Mr. Philpott is vice-president of the Florists' Club and chairman of the flower booth committee. Some of his friends suggest that, although he is a suburban member, his record of attendance, having missed only two meetings within the year, entitles him to a promotion at the next election. As a matter of fact, not many members can say that they have attended ten of the last twelve regular meetings.

C. W. McKellar says there will now be a shortage of cattleyas until the next crop comes.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. has distributed its annual booklet, "Engagements," which is without doubt the highest class of any advertising matter issued by American retail florists. The illustrations are splendid examples of the art of printing in colors.

At Kyle & Foerster's, F. F. Benthey says the crop at their New Castle place will be just right for Thanksgiving.

Phil Schupp says he does not see how the vegetable growers can have made any money this year on their catch crops of mums. The big fancy mums have paid, he thinks, but not the lower grades.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co., with greenhouses and retail store at Batavia and wholesale store in the Flower Growers' Market, has just increased its capital stock from $8,000 to $12,000.

Although W. J. Smyth's store, being enlarged, is all torn up, he had one of the biggest days of the season October 31, with a large wedding and two funerals.

Peter Reinberg is contemplating the purchase of a motor truck to bring the stock in from the greenhouses, replacing the two teams now used.

John Kruchten reports that one of his growers has recently taken up the forcing of valley, intending to make it a specialty. Valley growing has been in the hands of an exceedingly small number in the last year or two.

Miss Josephine Then had a leading part in the farce, "What Became of Pauline?" recently presented by the Young Men's Sodality of St. Clement's church.

October 29 Hoerber Bros. began cutting Bonnaillon, their first crop from a part of the new greenhouses.

N. C. Moore & Co., of Morton Grove, have been hauling water in a tank wagon for nearly a week, the wells having failed.

H. C. Wiffin, of Des Plaines, is suffering with rheumatism. He has given up the winter-flowering sweet peas, which he grew extensively last year, and says they dropped the buds too easily to be a dependable crop.

Paul Blome has been on the sick list for a week or more.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports that the first shipment of Bonnaillon from George Bayer, of Toledo, arrived October 31, several days earlier than usual.

Wietor Bros. say they did quite their usual business with New Orleans for All Saint's day.

Vaughan & Sperry say that boxwood has become a peculiarly difficult proposition, but that recent shipments have been of much better quality than much of the stock seen in the market last year.

The George Wittbold Co. will furnish and put up 150 cases of wild smilax at the flower show.

The biggest flower show sign is on the east side of the Atlas block. It spreads over space of Winterson's seed store, Zech & Mann, Hoerber Bros. and George Reinberg.

W. N. Rudd is away on a trip of inspection of some of the western experiment stations.

October 31 Poehlmann Bros. Co. bought the glass for the addition decided upon some weeks ago. The plan has been enlarged to provide for thirteen houses, each 500 feet long.

John P. Risch is ill at his home in Evanston.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., has been spending several days in Milwaukee.

has begun to operate a system of water supply installed by the Kewanee Water Supply Co., Kewanee, Ill. It consists of two electric pumps, discharging at the rate of 115 gallons per minute for each pump. The water goes into a big pneumatic tank, which maintains a pressure sufficient for syringing, and the pumps start automatically whenever the pressure goes below the required point. It is understood the Am-ling Co. will supply water for some of the neighboring greenhouses.

The Riverbank Co., Chicago, has been incorporated, with $2,500 capital stock, to do a general horticultural business. The incorporators are Charles J. O'Connor, J. Weilby and K. Kelly.

At Marquette park a range of ten houses, each 18x100, is being erected for the propagation of stock for use in the south side parks. Two Kroeschell hot water boilers will be installed of such large capacity that it appears an addition must be looked forward to.

Harry Garland, of the Geo. M. It is understood that Mr. Garland has also been doing a bit of hunting on the side, but the extent of the bag is not stated. This firm is also furnishing about 1,000 feet of its iron gutters for the new greenhouses at Marquette park.

L. Baumann & Co. report that they are furnishing decorations in large quantities for the land show to be held at the Coliseum November 19 to December 4. Mr. Baumann stated that their business this fall is considerably in advance of a year ago.

of concrete and six feet of glass. One corner has been arranged as a garage. Mr. Oechslein has also recently added a small house, 10x100, across the street, to be used for propagating purposes. Two carloads of azaleas have just been received and are rapidly being potted up. James Hancock, who is Mr. Oechslein's right-hand man, said that celosia has been a remarkably good seller this year and that dracaenas are becoming more popular every day. The mum pot plants are now in full bloom and Pandanus Veitchii looks good. The same may be said of the several houses of small ferns.

The John C. Moninger Co. is preparing to use additional space in the old American Malting Co. building, two floors of which they have occupied since last winter. The additional space will be devoted principally to the rapidly growing heating department. The improvements include a large freight elevator and a traveling crane for loading and unloading cars on the siding. It is said that by the new method it will be possible to unload a car of piping in an hour and a half, including the placing of the pipe in whatever space is allotted to it. This company says that the demand for boilers to be shipped on short notice has been unusually heavy, and they are more than pleased with the volume of business done.

E. H. Hunt last week received nearly a carload of baskets from Japan. They call it Matsuma ware, but C. M. Dickinson says Mazuma would be more appropriate, because it's a fine seller.

H. N. Bruns says "things are boiling out here." All of which goes to show that business keeps him on the jump. He reports that the importation of valley pips has begun, with several cases on the way and more to follow. Just how plentiful the supply will be is still unknown.

The Raedlein Basket Co. reports that five cases of imported florists' baskets have just been received at their store at 717 Milwaukee avenue. Eight more cases are on the way and others are expected before the holidays.

Henry Van Gelder has been under the doctor's care for a week, but has stuck to business.

Bassett & Washburn report cutting the first Yellow Eaton October 31 and the first Eaton November 1, several days earlier than ever before.

Joseph Mendel is putting in a busy week on his campaign for the office of county commissioner. The election is November 8. Mr. Mendel succeeded in defeating about a dozen candidates for the democratic nomination and feels quite sanguine as to his election. He has two flower stores on the west side and many florists will vote for him regardless of their politics.

Visitors.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., was in town October 29 with specimen blooms of his rose and chrysanthemum novelties.

E. W. Metz, formerly of this city, who is now decorator for Mrs. J. B. Freeman, at Toledo, has been renewing acquaintance.

William Desmond, manager of the cut flower department of the L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, has been purchasing stock.

H. D. Roth, La Fayette, Ind., has spent the week here. He expects to be joined on Saturday by his father, H. Roth, and the two will root for Purdue in the game with the University of Chicago.

BOSTON.

The Market.

After one of the greatest gluts the flower trade has known at the end of October in late years, due in chief measure to the unprecedented spell of Indian summer weather, the tide took a turn for the better October 29 and the market cleaned up better than for some weeks. The cooler weather proved welcome, for both producers and retailers were getting somewhat disgusted and discouraged. Never before was there such an outpouring of chrysanthemums in October. Early, midseason and late sorts all seemed to be in at once. It is hoped the worst is now over and that better business may be expected. The probability is that mums will be worth good money for Thanksgiving, as some growers have now cut three-fourths of their entire crop.

Prices on mums have not materially improved, but they are moving much better. Bonnaillon is now abundant; so are the Ivories. These old-timers still retain all their popularity. Beatrice May, Halliday, Golden Eagle, Tousey and President Taft are seen in quantity. The latter is not liked, its stem being too weak and petals too soft. Quite a number of the single and pom-pom varieties are seen in bunches and sell quite well.

Carnations have recovered from the slough of despond, in which they were a week ago, and are selling better. Roses, with the cooler weather, are coming of better quality. Their sales were discouraging while the warm weather persisted. Killarney and White Killarney are still easily the leaders. Beauties are better than they were. Some nice Mrs. Aaron Ward, Safrano and Bon Silene are also seen.

Violets, which have been of poor quality, are improving a little, singles being better than doubles. Several growers are shipping sweet peas of good quality and they are selling well. Bouvardia Humboldtii continues to come in and is one of the most popular flowers on the market. Cosmos Lady Lenox is seen on some of the stands of good quality. Lily of the valley varies much in quality and is only selling moderately well. Some of it shows evidence of overforcing and is soft. Lilies are now all longiflorums and move quite well. Gardenias are not plentiful and sell as well as anything coming in. Orchids are getting too abundant, with prices showing a drooping tendency. Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, Vanda cærulea, cypripediums and Cattleya labiata are the varieties mostly seen. These are being much used for window effects at present. White and yellow marguerites are coming from several growers, but are as yet of only moderate quality. Some nice mignonette and pink antirrhinums are also seen. Paper White narcissi made their appearance last week and Roman hyacinths are due within a day or two.

There is a somewhat better demand for both asparagus and adiantum. A little smilax only is seen. Hardy ferns are meeting with a better sale.

In the way of flowering plants, Erica melanthera, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Azalea Deutsche Perle, A. Mme. Petrick and camellias are seen. Among foliage plants, crotons, colored dracænas, pandanus, Ficus elastica, F. pandurata, nephrolepis, cibotiums, cocos and kentias are the varieties most popular.

Assignment of W. E. Doyle.

The assignment of William E. Doyle, in business as a retailer for forty years and one of the oldest and most respected florists in Boston, caused surprise when it was announced October 26. It was, of course, known that Mr. Doyle had been in tight corners, but had always emerged safely from them, and no one imagined that an assignment was imminent. Many of the large growers are quite hard hit. Among some of the heavy local creditors are: Welch Bros., Waban Conservatories, Thomas Roland, H. M. Robinson & Co. and W. H. Elliott. The liabilities are estimated at about $40,000 and assets quite small. Book accounts amount to only $4,600, only part of which is considered good.

At a meeting of creditors, October 29, John McFarland was appointed chairman of a committee to investigate the books, etc., and report to a later meeting, November 2. Other members of the committee are: P. Welch, H. M. Robinson, W. H. Elliott and P. J. Donahoe. The likelihood is that Mr. Doyle will be allowed to continue to operate his two stores on Boylston and Beacon streets. Much sympathy is being felt for him. This is the heaviest retail failure the trade in Boston has known in many years.

Imported Prepared Cycas Leaves

We advertised these goods with our low prices a few weeks ago—the selling was tremendous, we knew it would be at those prices—we were splendidly prepared, but ran out of some sizes.

Another shipment of the same fine quality just reached us per S. S. "Numantia," and we can now supply all sizes.

The lowering in prices is due to the impetus given by M. Rice & Co. to the manufacturer of Imported Prepared Cycas Leaves by the great quantities we buy and sell, more than any other house in the United States.

A comparison of M. Rice & Co.'s prices for Cycas Leaves with those prevailing elsewhere, is bound to bring US your orders.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newtonville Greenhouses, reports business as starting in nicely at his Beacon street store in Boston.

At H. R. Comley's last week some well flowered camellias were noted, also Erica melanthera, Ananas sativa variegata, Rose Mrs. Waddell, which Mr. Comley says is an excellent seller, and splendid mignonette.

WE ARE CUTTING HEAVILY OF ROSES, CARNATIONS and MUMS

Can furnish good quality of American Beauties, Maryland, Jardine, Richmond, White and Pink Killarney — none better on this market, and of a quality that will suit your most critical customers. Try them and satisfy yourself on this score.

Carnations of the leading sorts, which for size of flower and length of stem are far above the average seen on this market, there being none better.

Chrysanthemums in heavy supply, of pink, white and yellow. For the past week pink mums have been on the scarce side. This is also true of good yellow mums. We are now able to supply these in quantities from the large late varieties.

Violets—fragrant, home-grown singles. These are now hardy and will travel safely. Can likewise furnish Hudson river violets. Owing to the length of time required for these to reach Chicago, we can only fill orders for such violets at buyer's risk.

Gateway to the South.

Glancing at the market from one side, it seems to be improving, and looking from another point it seems just as blue as at the last report. The frost has killed the competition of outdoor flowers, but many more greenhouse blooms have taken their place, so there is no decrease in the amount of stock on hand. Stock other than white seems to be in request, but does not bring unusual prices. The general level of prices is low for the time of the year. Everyone is expecting an improvement in a short time.

Chrysanthemums have the largest share of whatever demand there is for flowers. In spite of the many sold, they bring only fair prices. Many move in job lots at buyer's offer. The choice blooms do not sell as readily as a week ago, while smaller ones sell a little more quickly than they did at that time.

The saying that "a good rose always sells" is only partly true now, for pink alone moves quickly. White and American Beauties seem to have little charm for the buyers.

The supply of carnations slackened just about two-thirds immediately after the frost and colder weather set in, but even at that they were not scarce, and the balance of supply and demand held prices at a normal point. Reports from some of the growers state that by the time this paper reaches the readers they will again have quantities to offer.

Other stock is plentiful, but finds slow sale. Longiflorum lilies seem to have been hit hardest by the influx of chrysanthemums, which has coaxed away a large part of the demand for lilies. Lily of the valley is plentiful, but sells slowly. Both single and double violets are now good in quality, and, although they sold slowly the early part of last week, later they seemed to move nicely.

A sufficiency of nearly all kinds of green goods is on hand.

The florist stands in the Jabez Elliott Flower Market looked as though they had been prepared for chrysanthemum show purposes during the early part of the afternoon of October 29. Closing time found all pretty well sold out.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have changed. October 27 and 28 were just as unsatisfactory as any days in the preceding week; October 29, Saturday, came the change. The demand for cut flowers was increased to what some of the wholesalers called "an old-fashioned rush," until by night the supply of many varieties of flowers was exhausted. Hallowe'en and All Saints' day, October 31 and November 1, made a fair demand; the killing frost that preceded them disposed of the dahlias and cosmos so that the market is in better condition than for a long time.

The queen of autumn is the leading flower. Fine chrysanthemums sell well, ordinary and poor stock moderately. Pompons go better than they did. The chrysanthemum situation is curious. November 2 finds the late or Thanksgiving varieties already well represented. The leading sorts of the day include Ivory, Alice Byron, Mrs. Robinson, Harry Balsley, and Virginia Poehlmann, in whites, Mrs. Coombs, Mrs. Frick, Mrs. Shaw, Harry Balsley, Maud Deane, a few William Duckham and the rear guard of Clementine Tousey in pinks, with Col. Appleton, Major Bonaffon, Florence Harris and Golden Age among yellows. Tint of Gold also is still here. The orange, yellow and bronze pompons have been reinforced by white.

Violets are in evidence. The demand for the Penn-Indian football game seems to restart the season locally. Singles are good, doubles not yet so. Carnations have improved in quality and are in demand at times, but at other times they seem hard to sell.

There is no especial demand for pink roses, but Beauties sell well. Richmond is not in heavy supply. White roses are only in fair demand. Orchids are firm, white orchids buoyant. Gardenias are in demand, the supply rather short. Valley is selling splendidly. Greens go rather slowly. Autumn foliage is still fine.

Club Meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club Tuesday evening, November 1. Mr. Meehan gave an excellent talk on pruning, with practical demonstrations on how to prune and how not to prune. Robert Craig presented the club with a photograph of the late William K. Harris, from Mrs. Harris.

The American Plant & Rose Co., Springfield, O., sent a representative with its new type of Boston fern, to be named Roosevelt. It seems promising. The Leo Niessen Co. exhibited some handsome vases of Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward, deep pink, and Alma Ward, white, grown by Henry M. Weiss, of Hatboro. Both varieties were much admired.

The Dahlia Season.

The dahlia season has been of unusual length. The number of flowers sold has been larger than ever before. There have been no extreme prices, the average price rather low, due to poor quality of some of the stock. Single dahlias have not sold so well as in former years. Except where well grown there is no demand for them. When good single varieties are well grown and disbudbed, a limited number can be sold advantageously. The decorative class are best for cut flowers. Some cactus varieties are desirable. A close observer of the cut-flower market believes that fewer varieties and better culture will be needed to produce dahlias at a profit. The best dahlias for cut flowers today are Jack Rose, Kreimhilde, Lyndhurst, Flora and a good yellow. This is merely a selection, a number of other varieties are just as good. The point is to produce good flowers of good varieties, with good stems, in quantity sufficient to warrant taking orders for them.

Mr. Farenwald's Roses.

Ability and enterprise have placed Adolph Farenwald in the front rank of our eastern rose growers. Rose growing is a science on his place. His plans are carefully laid at the beginning of each season and they are as skillfully carried out, without deviation. This season Mr. Farenwald aims to produce long-stemmed Killarneys during midwinter. This aim will, barring some unforeseen accident, be successfully carried out. He has the foundation for a large crop of long-stemmed flowers that will be well scattered over the social season.

Two roses, Killarney and Richmond, are the varieties grown by Mr. Farenwald, in the proportion of about two to one in favor of Killarney. A casual glance over the houses shows a difference in method employed in handling the two roses, for while Killarney is carefully staked and tied, Richmond runs wild. A further difference appears in the style of growth; most of the heavy shoots in Killarney are top growth, while in Richmond ground breaks are depended upon. The question of grafting is unsettled, although the balance now swings in favor of the graft, for the last two houses devoted to Killarney contain grafted plants.

Mr. Farenwald's fall method of rose growing aims to secure the greatest amount of vigor—vigor that will be utilized during the forcing months of winter. He airs freely during late August and September until firing begins, which this season was in early October. This system courts mildew

A November Novelty

Everybody uses IMMORTELLS, red and white; they are indispensable for design work. We have a novelty that will startle you.

TWO TONE IMMORTELLS. Just think of it! The colors at your command, eighteen combinations, Nile and moss green together, pink and lavender together and all sorts of combinations that will enable you to make any effect desired. Try some sample bunches.

AN IMPROVED CHIFFON. We are now offering a beautiful hairline Chiffon in pink, white and lavender, a better article, finer finish than anything previously offered, comes in various widths and is particularly adapted for bows on plant baskets and for choice decorations.

ANTIQUE PLANT BASKETS. The word "antique" used with plant baskets means that our factory will give you that bronze-black effect that lends such a rich finish to any style, shape or size basket that you may desire, be it made of willow, twig or anything else. These "antique" plant baskets are the best for setting off arrangements to advantage.

and, if not skillfully carried out, will debilitate the plants. Well done, it appears in Mr. Farenwald's hands to give a reserve force of vitality that yields splendid results when flowers are wanted. Mr. Farenwald is a firm believer in wide planting as an incentive to robust growth in the rose.

The Rose Garden at Dreer's.

October is not exactly the month for outdoor roses, yet the improvement in the hybrid tea varieties made it possible to derive pleasure and profit from a walk through the trial rose garden. There are a number of long frames planted with the best varieties of recent introduction and with many novelties on trial. Quite a number of these varieties have been producing creditable blooms through October, giving an opportunity for noting those that keep right on doing well until the end of the season.

There are several new and old varieties that seem particularly beautiful here at this time. Laurent Carle was magnificent in size, color and form; a most attractive red sort. Hugo Roller, a pure tea variety of good size, was exquisite in its shading of white and pink. My Maryland, too well known to need description, is excellent outdoors. The old variety, Mme. Hoste, looked well. Good opportunity was afforded for comparison between Harry Kirk, so fine as an outdoor sort, and Mrs. Aaron Ward, the apricot novelty grown by W. H. Elliott, of Madbury, for the Boston cut flower market under number last season. White Killarney was there, too, and many more—too many for description here. When Antoine Wintzer saw those beds he stayed over night with J. D. Eisele, to enjoy another sight of them early in the morning.

Sharon Hill.

Robert Scott & Son have made extensive improvements in their large plant at Sharon Hill this season. The most important change is the sweeping away of the old Penrose Nursery houses that have so long been devoted to growing plants for mail orders. This range of houses has been replaced by a handsome King range, intended for growing their young plants of Melody and Double Killarney. It will not do to dismiss the old range without a word for that wonderful house, planted in Kaiserin ten years ago, that has yielded such remarkable stock ever since. The plants remained unchanged throughout a decade. They were cut back each season, started in time for Easter and flowered throughout the summer. Each season the plants gained in strength, until it is a question whether such a house of Kaiserin could be found anywhere else.

The other improvements include an immense manure tank for pumping liquid through the houses. It is built, of course, of concrete, to be roofed later. Last, but by no means least, a little house is being erected for testing the seedling roses of Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland. Alexander B. Scott spent a couple of weeks there in the summer of the present year, devoting five or six hours each day to an examination of their seedlings. Mr. Scott picked out forty-three varieties, which will be here in a few days for trial. The most important of these will, he believes, revolutionize rose growing in America, should it equal his expectations under our different climatic conditions. This variety he describes as a cluster rose with a long, pointed, single bud, bright red, with a coppery hue inside at the base of the petals. When Mrs. Scott wore a cluster of this rose it attracted instant admiration.

The rose houses at Sharon Hill are planted with Melody, Double Killarney, Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond and Mrs. Jardine. This last named rose Mr. Scott thinks the greatest winter rose today; it outsells anything else, but the market seems unwilling to pay the advance necessary to make it profitable. It is easy to get as much for Mrs. Jardine as for Killarney of equal grades, but difficult to average the ten per cent more required. The roses all looked well.

Gardenias are as important at Sharon Hill as in the past. You know that Alexander B. Scott was the first man who flowered gardenias successfully in midwinter. The houses this season looked better even than ever before. The plants are of straight thickness;

The Henry F. Michell Co. completed the move into its new store at 518 Market street last week. Everything was running with wonderful smoothness by the end of the week. An immense quantity of stock had been successfully housed with no appearance of confusion or disorder.

Edward A. Stroud will hold a chrysanthemum show in the Overbrook Golf Club November 4 and 5.

Duncan Macaw has been assisting Robert A. Craig to produce some magnificent stock this season.

The Johnson Seed Co. reports that the bulb season has opened with the advent of frost. People want their beds filled when they become unsightly.

M. Rice & Co. are working overtime; their silver corsage ribbon was heavily ordered ahead of its importation.

J. Stevenson, of Oak Lane, has his entire place in Mrs. Jardine this year.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have an interesting novelty in two-tone immortelles.

The Philadelphia growers who are shipping to New York are troubled by the expressmen's strike there.

Miss L. H. Dundore, formerly with Harry Shroyer, has opened a new store this week in Lancaster, Pa.

J. D. Eisele is on a flying trip to the south this week.

The Strafford Flower Farms have returned to the good old-fashioned outdoor field culture for carnations, with marked success. White Perfection looks particularly well; in these houses there has been no stem-rot.

Thomas Young, of Bound Brook, N. J., has added cattleyas and dendrobiums to his gardenias this season.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The anticipated cold snap materialized Thursday, October 27, but with it came no snow and little frost, and now we are back again to Indian summer. The flying machines, the elections and the express strike counteracted any good effects of the change in temperature, and the market is back in the doldrums.

The express strike has been a serious question for the florists here. Shipments have been seriously interfered with, and much stock has perished through delays. The outlook still is threatening, and some of the metropolitan journals are predicting a general strike all over the country. The latest news, however, was more cheering, and the early end of the strike is now hoped for. Wholesale florists have been forced to send to the railroad stations for their supplies, and great inconvenience and many disappointments have resulted. Yet, with all the scarcity, prices have not risen, and will not, probably, until these labor troubles are settled and the election excitement at an end.

There were a few dinners and weddings last week, but not enough of either to jar prices or lift them to the plane where they belong. The price of roses cannot advance much while the excessive chrysanthemum shipments continue. Though the tide has turned and improvement is noticeable, the increase in values is yet so slight that it is unworthy of special mention.

The quality of everything is now at its best. The supply of Kaiserin, Killarney, Maryland and Richmond, and the special grades of Maid and Bride cannot be surpassed in any wholesale flower mart of the country. Beauties will soon be in wider demand, and prices will advance. Carnations are also close to the high level of perfection, but prices do not lift, because of the enormous mum supply.

Orchids are rising, as they deserve to. The best flowers touched 75 cents Saturday, October 29. Their popularity seems to be increasing as their sources of supply grow in numbers. There is no danger of a serious glut in the orchid market, and the best gardenias are always in demand. Valley ran up to 4 cents last week, and lilies also advanced slightly. Violets are better every way, and good stock brought 50 cents per hundred easily.

The chrysanthemum still dominates, and will do so until the middle of November, and possibly until Thanksgiving, although some veterans are predicting a scarcity at that time.

Various Notes.

Lord & Burnham report that their new factory at Des Plaines, Ill., will be completed by the first of the year. R. W. Cobb has been appointed sales manager, succeeding Mr. Craw.

Marcus Reich, formerly with Ira G. Marvin, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is now in charge of the retail department of J. Wolff, Jr., in the New York store of Gimbel Bros.

Reed & Keller have many useful novelties for Christmas. One of Mr. Reed's most practical late inventions is his folding wire pedestal.

At John Scott's, Flatbush, a recent visit disclosed a splendid assortment of ferns, poinsettias, pandanus, azaleas, dracaenas, gardenias and orchids. There are nearly 40,000 plants of Scottii alone, and Manager Mackenzie says there is no decrease in its popularity.

The Market.

Trade was dull last week. Flowers were plentiful, with mums in full swing. They retailed at $2 and $2.50 per dozen. Nice carnations are to be seen; these retail at 50 cents per dozen. Roses retail at $1.25 and $1.50 per dozen. Violets sell fairly well; 75 cents per hundred blooms is their general retail price. Sweet peas are arriving in limited quantities; $1 per hundred blooms is the retail price here. Snapdragons sell pretty well at 75 cents per dozen, retail. White and light pink are the best.

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges—they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

SOIL FOR LETTUCE.

Will you kindly tell us the depth of soil necessary for good lettuce growing; also the composition of the soil?
M. & J.

Six inches of soil is the depth generally used for lettuce in greenhouses, although many growers who have solid beds have deeper soil, so that they can use the same soil in the beds for tomatoes or cucumbers in the spring. Six inches is plenty for lettuce, but hardly enough for cukes or tomatoes. Some growers use five or six inches for the lettuce in winter and add two or three inches more of compost early in the spring, when spading up for cukes or tomatoes.

Lettuce likes a loose soil, with considerable sand in it. My soil is too stiff and heavy, so I have to loosen it with sand, using about the same quantity of sand as of manure. I usually take three loads of good, clean, fresh garden soil, preferably from new ground, and one load of rotted manure; also some sand. Soil of ordinary looseness, however, does not require the sand, and many growers use only one load of manure to four loads of soil. It is better if piled a while before wanted, so as to decay together and thus be better mixed when put into the beds.
H. G.

THRIPS.

I am sending you a sample of a black fly that is killing my mums, lettuce, lilies and aspidistras. They seem to suck the life right out of everything they get onto. I have used the fumigating kind of tobacco, as strong as I thought I could without killing the plants. I have also used hydrocyanic acid gas, syringed with Whale Oil soap and caustic potash soap, and dusted with hellebore, and still they survive. I should be thankful to find some way of getting rid of these pests. The greatest difficulty is to get them off the lettuce, as I could not use any poisonous spray on it.
J. H. M.

The leaves sent for examination had been badly attacked by thrips and some of the pests were still on the leaves. One leaf had also two or three red spiders and a black chrysanthemum aphid on it, but the damage to the plants is undoubtedly from the thrips.

There are several kinds of thrips, but the kind makes no difference to the grower; they are practically the same as to injury to plants and the treatment necessary to keep them down. They can be killed by hydrocyanic acid gas, but the gas frequently injures the plants more than it injures the thrips, as it takes a severe dose to kill the pests. I have never found any other kind of fumigating material that would be of any real value on thrips.

I have found nicotine extract, diluted about twenty to one and sprayed on every leaf, underneath and on top, with a fine compressed-air sprayer, to be effective and have cleaned up a house thoroughly in this way.

You can also poison these thrips, but not on the lettuce, as you must not use poison on it or on similar crops. It would be all right on your other plants. To make a poisonous spray for thrips, take five parts brown sugar and one part Paris green, thoroughly mixed. Of this dry mixture, take one ounce for each gallon of water. Use pure, warm water and nothing else in it, and see that the foliage is clean of any previous spraying of any kind before using. It is best to let the liquid stand over night before using, as Paris green is hard to dissolve; it simply settles like sand. In using it, keep it well shaken up or stirred. When not using it, keep it well away from animals or children, or even grown people, as it cannot be handled too carefully. On account of the general use of Paris green, few people realize that it is about as deadly as any poison can be.

In using any new materials, it is important that they be tried by each person on a small number of plants first, as sometimes whole crops are injured by some little mistake in preparing the materials the first time. Get acquainted with them before going too far.

Five Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful a branch of the business that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The market last week was in about the same condition as reported for the week previous. Some of our leading retail florists said that October business was not up to last year, but they are looking forward to better and more settled business after next week's election.

Chrysanthemum blooms are now in their height and all of our wholesale markets are fairly loaded down with good flowers at reasonable prices. Appleton, Ivory, Bonnaffon and Robinson are among the best sellers. Roses are in abundance in all varieties and grades, but the demand is slow and a lot of them are being dumped or sold cheap in big lots.

Carnations, too, are coming in large lots, but sell better than roses at present. White and light pink have the best call. Violets are coming better now that the cooler weather has set in, and a large cut is promised for this season from the Kirkwood growers. The frost last week put an end to outdoor stock.

Everything in greens is now to be had, including bronze galax.

Various Notes.

O. K. Sanders, who has been with the Frisco railway system for the last two years, has given up his position and will take charge of the floral part of the Sanders nurseries, at Delmar and Clara avenues.

Groves, Mo., is sending to this market a fine lot of carnations. Mr. Goebel says he will also grow sweet peas and violets.

Henry Emmons, proprietor of the West End Floral Park, at Belleville, Ill., reports that he has a fine yellow sport of Mme. C. Touset chrysanthemum. Mr. Emmons consigned a lot of them to W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. last week and they looked mighty good to the trade.

The Ladies' Home Circle at its last meeting made all necessary arrangements, including a theater party, for entertaining the visiting lady florists who will be here during show week.

John M. Walther, 3645 Iowa avenue, has a fine lot of pot chrysanthemum plants. Mr. Walther says business has been good in his part of the city.

A. G. Greiner, the cactus man, says he has had a great season in the sale of cactus plants, California privet and shade trees.

Arthur Beyers has left the employ of Grimm & Gorly, and went to Chicago last week to take a position with Schiller the Florist.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., says that he has been kept busy of late finishing the remodeling of his greenhouses, and is almost ready for the winter season.

Himmer Bros., at Meramec Highlands, will have some extra fine cut chrysanthemums soon for the local trade.

The Kelley Floral Co., which is making a specialty of goldfish, has its new catalogue ready for distribution.

Ostertag Bros. did a lot of work for the real estate show held in the Coliseum last week. Henry Ostertag says decoration work of all kinds has kept them busy all this fall.

Chas. Bleekert, the Labadie avenue florist, is building a new office. Mr. Bleekert says he will grow more for the wholesale trade this year. He has an abundance of good plants for sale.

John Held, on South Tennessee street, has some elegant early varieties in mums and a fine house of Golden Wedding, Chadwick and Dr. Enguehard; in fact, all his houses are stocked with well-grown plants.

H. L. James, formerly of St. Louis, now secretary and treasurer of the Warfel Floral Co., Muncie, Ind., is calling on friends with a view to consigning to this market.

Everything is in readiness for the opening of the flower show next Tuesday, November 8.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will meet next Thursday afternoon, November 10. This meeting will be made attractive for the visiting florists, who are all invited to attend. The trustees say they have a big surprise in hand for the members and visitors, so don't fail to attend.

Puttering is lost motion

It is to the commercial world what lost motion is to the mechanical world

It implies not only loss of motion, power and time, but a "jarring," "thumping," "pounding," which racks the "whole machine."

One kind of commercial puttering is "home-made" collections.

Time and energy misdirected—lost. Some people have surplus energy.

But is that any reason why that surplus should be wasted—misdirected, lost!

But who has a surplus of time! Where is the business man who can afford to waste time!

We maintain one big Department for the special handling of delinquents for Florists and Nurserymen

Now, instead of laboring, fussing, fuming (all of which amounts merely to trying), give us your delinquent accounts to collect—actually collect.

Don't wait until you have uselessly spent a lot of valuable time. At the first suggestion that an account is "going to be hard to collect" give it to us.

Then the work and worry and trouble is all ours.

The Market.

The last week was one continued glut. Stock of all kinds was abundant and prices were correspondingly low on everything. However, the frost, so long looked for, came October 28, and there will be no more outdoor stock for this year. General conditions, therefore, should shape up better and prices should stiffen. The weather this week is ideal for greenhouse stock, for, while it is quite cool, the sun is shining brightly and stock is already showing some improvement. The retail stores are all doing well, with no unusual developments, but a nice, quiet business going on all the time and everybody in good humor.

Various Notes.

The A. W. Smith Co. had a Halloween decoration in one of the windows which was specially attractive. Among the decorations was a pumpkin with a face carved on it and colored so perfectly as to be unusually striking and characteristic.

H. L. Blind & Bros. were busy with medium sized decorations all last week. Their east end shop contains an attractive showing of chrysanthemums.

G. P. Weaklen & Co. report trade as all they could expect for their first month in business.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. is sending out an attractive catalogue of florists' supplies.

Randolph & McClements say there is nothing doing, but their large force of

The Market.

The first month of the retail man's busy season came to an end with a busy week. There has been a steady run of work all month, brought about by many funerals, openings, the good sale for plants and a good, live social season. Hallowe'en caused a big demand for flowers, particularly mums.

The local commission houses are handling big shipments of mums and other stock from the growers in Mt. Clemens, Greenfield and locally.

Various Notes.

Norman Sullivan took advantage of Hallowe'en with a most attractive window decoration. Between masses of corn were brass vases of yellow mums and receptacles made of pumpkins filled with flowers.

Robert Colquitt has moved the greenhouses formerly used by Colquitt & Son from Gratiot and Crane to Crane and Moffat avenues.

John Klang, who, since leaving school, has been in the employ of J.
 Breitmeyer's Sons, opened a retail store November 1 at Forrest and Chene

Seed Trade News.AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres.,
L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E.
Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE Holland bulb seedsmen are preparing to take wing for their annual migration earlier than ever before. Many will begin operations in the west, arriving in November.

CONSIDERING that the autumn has been one of the warmest and pleasantest in many years, sales of bulbs for bedding have been excellent. The season will prove the best in years unless winter comes suddenly and soon.

THE increasing importance of the southern trade makes it desirable that the general catalogues be ready at the beginning rather than the end of December. The houses that do the big mail order trade are rushing the printers.

THE first of the season's crop of lily of the valley pips reached New York October 29, fifty-two cases consigned to H. Frank Darrow. On the same vessel were numerous consignments of grass and garden seeds, including 176 bags of peas for Peter Henderson & Co.

THE Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, states that the warehouse recently destroyed by fire was merely an auxiliary building, used for storing a few cars of cotton seed. The four-story warehouse in which the offices are located, and a five-story warehouse where the extra seed stocks are kept, were not damaged in any particular.

THE catalogue-makers are taking a great deal of interest in prices, especially on peas and the other items on which deliveries are yet uncertain. But when the books come out the prices will be found not so high as some might expect; many will content themselves with slight advances on peas, but will quote only the smaller quantities.

THE weather has held so good in the Wisconsin woods that the lycopodium prospects are better than for some years, but it seems doubtful if bouquet green ever again will be as plentiful as it once was. Weather conditions at picking time always will be a factor, but of much importance is the increasing difficulty of getting pickers and the fact that each year it is necessary to go farther afield.

Nevertheless, the fact is, on an average, grass seeds have never been so high in the history of the seed business as this season.

"Although there has been a great deal of agitation along the line of pure seed legislation recently, the fact still remains that the purity of grass and clover seed will not, and moreover, cannot be improved, no matter what stringent laws may be enacted, and while the reports of seed tests are often very damaging to the seed trade in general, they do not result in any good to anybody. For all that, we do not for a moment hesitate to go on record and state that there is no country in the world that handles, on an average, such high qualities of grass and clover seeds as the United States.

"We really do not know of a case where grass seed has been misbranded. Of course, this may happen to the best and most reliable seed house, and in that case it would be the duty of the receiver to inspect the seed immediately on arrival, so that in the event of there being a mistake, it can be adjusted at once."

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending October 22 were as follows:

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $50,274.

SEED CROPS AT RANDOLPH.

"Peas are about forty per cent of a crop with us," says J. W. Jung, of Randolph, Wis. "Beans are not yet threshed, but we think they will be a good average. Cucumbers were excellent; in fact, the best crop of these we ever have raised."

The Jung Seed Co. has made something of a specialty of salvia and aster and in speaking of these Mr. Jung said: "Salvia will be a fair crop, but asters will be light, due to a severe attack of the aster disease, or blight. We are about positive that this is caused by souring of the soil, as before we had much rain it was hardly noticeable, but immediately after heavy rains it spread rapidly. The person who discovers something to check the ravages of this disease will indeed be a benefactor to all growers of asters."

THE PRODUCTION OF SEEDS.

Relative Supply and Demand.

The commercial value of all kinds of seed is dependent, even to a greater degree than is the case with most merchandise, upon relatively temporary supply and demand, says W. W. Tracy, formerly of D. M. Ferry & Co., in a recent bulletin of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. A shortage of seed can not usually be met with a fresh supply until the next season, and the forcing upon the market of even a small surplus has a more depressing effect than with most merchandise. As most seeds retain their vitality for several years, seedsmen usually guard against a short crop by carrying over a portion of the previous season's growth, but this carrying over of a large proportion of one's stock is objectionable not only because of the cost of storage, insurance, etc., but because of the prejudice, which in many cases is quite unjustifiable, in favor of fresh seed, and also because of the depressing effect which the putting upon the market of even a little more seed than is actually needed has upon current prices.

A wise seedsman will therefore not only hesitate to risk his reputation for handling pure and true stocks through purchase by sample, no matter how good the sample may seem to be, but will endeavor to limit his supply to seed which he knows was grown from pure and true stock seed, and as far as possible to that which was subject while growing to his own inspection and approval. He will also discourage the growing of speculative crops with the intention of selling by sample because of the liability of such crops to disturb the most profitable balance of supply and demand.

Low Prices for Growing Seed Crops.

Seedsmen are often able to place contracts for growing seed, particularly of sweet corn, peas, and beans, at very low prices—even lower than grain of the same species can be sold for on the market. That they are able to do so is the result of the following conditions:

(1) Though it is true that certain conditions of soil and climate are essential to profitable seed growing, lands fulfilling these conditions are so widely distributed and their total area is so much greater than is necessary for the production of all the seed needed that their possession and use for seed growing by no means insure a profitable crop.

(2) The growing of a seed crop for a widely advertised seed firm seems to many people more attractive than the growing of grain for sale in the open market, and farmers of this class are so numerous and are often so eager to get a seed contract that, through the influence of relative supply and demand in determining values, they lessen the price the seedsman has to pay.

(3) A seed crop which can not readily be sold in the open market or used by dribbles, but must be delivered at a specified time and place, has advantages as a crop on farms worked on share rentals.

(4) Crops of seed beans and peas requiring comparatively little hand labor early in the season are well suited for taking the place of those which have been killed out by the winter. Under such circumstances, the fact that the seed planted, which amounts to from ten to twenty-five per cent of the cost of the crop, is advanced by the contracting seedsman often makes a crop of seed beans or peas grown on contract a most convenient one.

Another factor in lowering the prices to the farmer is the use for seed of the get-away crops of canners and truckers. Canners endeavor to arrange the time of planting of the crops which are grown for them so that they will be able to care for each one when it is in prime condition, but from various causes they are sometimes unable to handle all of their crops at the proper time, and some of them become too mature for canning. Often the only available use of such get-away crops is as seed, and they are sold as such, and being in the nature of salvage the canners are glad to dispose of them at any price they can get. Occasionally truckers' crops are disposed of in a similar way.

Seedsmen do not advertise their use of get-away crops, many of them claiming that they never use such crops, but many carloads of this kind of seed are sold every year, and a part of it gets into the hands of some of our most reputable seedsmen. This practice can not fail to have a bearish effect upon the price paid for growing special seed crops.

DUTCH BULB INDUSTRY.

The bulb business in Holland dates back to about 1750, though the most rapid development has been in the last thirty years. The bulb-growing industry was first confined to Haarlem and its vicinity, but has gradually extended wherever a suitable piece of land was available. In order to grow bulbs, meadows have been transformed and sand dunes leveled. The preparation of land for this purpose is often costly, and the value of the best plots varies from £320 to £500 ($1,557 to $2,433) an acre.

The export statistics of the industry, which have been carefully kept since 1897, show that the total export has largely increased in the last ten years. The value of this export cannot now be less than £800,000 ($3,893,200).

England is still Holland's best customer for bulbs, taking nearly forty send their produce through the larger firms.

The Dutch bulb growers are organized into a general federation, which now numbers nearly 3,000 members and is divided into thirty-seven local groups. A paper is published twice a week, weekly exchanges are held during the trade season, novelties are examined and reported upon by a committee of judges, and a trade council inquires into and decides all trade differences. Many exhibitions have been organized by the federation, and of late exhibits have also been sent to foreign countries. In addition to the general federation there are two special societies, one to protect the interests of bulb exporters and the other to protect those of growers who do not export.

The United States consul at Amsterdam furnishes the following figures as to the total exports of bulbs from Holland in the last two years, in pounds avoirdupois:

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

PACIFIC COAST.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business has shown a great increase. Activity is displayed everywhere and in every branch of the trade. Weddings are numerous. Aside from these, however, there is little going on socially—only small affairs. General stock is improving.

Mums are plentiful. Queen, Buckee, Alice Byron and Bonnaffon lead in quality. Carnations are more plentiful, with a daily clean-up. Roses are improving in quality and quantity. Maryland is the leader in pink and Kaiserin in white. Dahlias are plentiful in various shades, but are poor sellers. Cyclamens and miniature mums are about the only flowering plants on the market.

Various Notes.

At the greenhouses the forces are busy potting up the lilies for the coming season.

The grand opening of the Olds, Wortman & King department store created an unusual demand for plants and basket arrangements, unprecedented in the history of the city.

The Market.

The weather has turned slightly cooler, much to the relief of the general public and the florists. We had been treated to several weeks of unexpected and unusually hot, dry days, and the results were that a great amount of stock was dumped on the market and prices and quality went a-glimmering. But with the return of our natural November conditions, we expect a quick resumption of trade and a much better quality of stock.

Chrysanthemums are all the rage at present and, now that normal conditions prevail, they are fully up to the high standard of last year. The best outside stock can be bought at $1.50 to $3 per hundred and for inside flowers the cost to the retailers is about the same as last season. Carnations are cheaper than they were a year ago at this time, but the weather can be blamed for this also, and they may be expected to rise in price at any time. With roses there is a good demand for good stock, but for several reasons there is a scarcity of it in the market. A majority of the growers have not yet been able to cut any really first-class flowers from the recently planted houses, and until they do so we cannot expect much fancy stock.

With other lines the conditions are about as usual, with nothing particular to mention. Business is fully as good as at this time one year ago and everyone feels that we are going to have a good early-winter trade.

Various Notes.

F. H. Hunter is in town after a few weeks spent in the southern part of the state.

IMPORTED TREE ROSES.

During the last few seasons California nurserymen have imported large quantities of tree roses from Europe, owing to the cheapness and also for the reason that the home-grown article has not been produced in sufficient numbers to fill requirements. It has been noted, however, that there has been a greater loss with this stock than the occasion seemed to warrant. This has been particularly noticeable for the last two seasons, and the question naturally arises why we are not able to land these roses with as little loss as is sustained in the handling of other imported stock. The length of time spent in transit does not figure to any extent, for it is invariably found that much less hardy stock, packed in the same boxes, stands the long journey without any losses.

To begin with, there is no question but that this European stock is perfectly hardy and satisfactory in its own locality, but even under the best conditions and when it arrives in perfect order, it is not suited to the heat and dry atmosphere of central and southern California. The canes on which the tops are grown are not long-lived here, and stock which apparently is in a vigorous condition and should give great results usually lasts only a season or two. None of the briars are suited for planting in this part of California when used as a stock for tree roses. This has been proven in this locality for many years. La Grifferie, Baltimore Belle, Manetti and several others can be depended on to fill requirements and will live many years, increasing in size all the time. Rosa canina was discarded as a stock many years ago.

These remarks do not, however, explain the first statement made, that such poor results are had with the stock in transit. The trouble on this score comes from the fact that the European growers do not have their stock in a sufficiently dormant condition when it is packed. It will always be found that the big, pithy tops and masses of foliage have completely damped off, while such varieties as have plenty of well-ripened wood stand the journey fairly well. A great percentage of the sorts are hardy hybrids, and these have always plenty of roots and heavy stems, so that, if the proper judgment were used in selecting well-hardened crowns, no one could object to the stock itself.

This disposes of the packing, and I will return again to the tree roses themselves. When they arrive even under the best conditions, and are planted out and given such care as they need, they are a poor counterfeit of our native-grown stock. As I stated before, a large percentage of the imported standards are worked to hybrids and to very heavy growing sorts, while the California climate is peculiarly adapted to the tea varieties and not so much space is given to the hardier or poorer blooming kinds. The wild stocks used in Europe have proven to be absolutely unreliable in this region, and when the added risk is considered of their arriving in poor order, it is clear that the local growers should aim to supply the demand with suitable, acclimated stock, if they wish the public to continue to plant standard roses. G.

WINTERING GLADIOLI.

Please inform me whether Gladiolus cardinalis, G. Colvillei and G. ramosus can be kept through the winter and planted in the open ground for summer flowers, or would it do to plant now in a coldframe for next season's flowers? H. H. G.

The small-flowering, early varieties of gladioli named can be kept over winter and planted out in spring as soon as the ground is open, and will bloom in June and the early part of July. They will, however, be much better if planted in coldframes now. These gladioli naturally start to grow much earlier than the large-bulbed varieties, and in carrying them in a dry state over winter they lose much of their vitality. If you just keep the frames clear of frost, they will be all right and you can depend upon getting fine spikes in late spring and early summer. These gladioli can be planted quite closely. When growing them in flats, from fifty to seventy-five bulbs will go into a flat 12x24 inches, and in a sash 3x6 feet you should be able to put 500 bulbs. C. W.

SAN JOSE SCALE ON LILACS.

Can you give me information as to how I can kill the insects on my lilacs? All of the wood is covered with them. I am sending you a piece of the wood. A. S.

The wood forwarded was completely crusted with San Jose scale, one of the most destructive pests to be fought in America today. This scale will soon kill a tree or shrub, unless remedial measures are adopted. As soon as the leaves fall, give the plants a spraying of either the lime-sulphur solution or one of the soluble oils. Probably one of the oils would be the simplest for you to apply, at the rate of one part of oil to twenty parts of water.

I have found Scalecide an excellent, safe and comparatively inexpensive remedy. It dissolves readily in water. An application after the leaves fall and another in spring, before the buds have started, should practically clean out the pests. Use a fine spray nozzle and be sure to wet every vestige of bark. Any remedy applied while the plants are in leaf, of sufficient strength to kill the scale, will also destroy the foliage. Under glass or in sheds filled with hardy nursery stock, hydrocyanic acid gas is used to destroy the scale.

own have devised a system by which they utilize commercial cold storage to a large extent, to facilitate the handling of their business. The plan of procedure is to harvest the stock during the months of November and December, immediately pack the trees and shrubbery in paper-lined packing cases, providing proper packing material in the shape of sphagnum, rather than straw, and immediately place the cases so packed in cold storage, allowing them to remain until required for immediate planting. This practice is chiefly confined to nurseries operating in the extreme southern portions of the United States, which have a large patronage at the north. The early germination of the stock at the south would prohibit the delivery of the trees in satisfactory condition at the north at the proper planting season. To overcome this difficulty, the above practice has been inaugurated with excellent results. Under this system the packed stock is held in cold storage for a period of three or four months, but practices at the north require that the stock remain in the retarding house from six to seven months.

Holding Stock One Season to Another.

Attempts have been made to hold nursery stock over a season in cold storage. The experiment was only moderately successful; in fact, not considered sufficiently successful to warrant the plan as a commercial practice. The practicability of such a procedure, when necessary in moving plants from one quarter of the world to another, is demonstrated, but the commercial value of such a procedure on an extensive scale is quite out of reason, from the fact that cold storage space is expensive; nursery stock is bulky and the value of the stock will seldom justify the outlay necessary for holding it through a long period in cold storage. Short storage periods, however, can be justified for the reasons already stated.

Stock Which Will Permit of Storage.

All classes of nursery stock are handled in retarding houses, but the whole practice is based on empirical rules. No carefully planned tests have been carried out to determine the conditions best suited to any particular class of stock, or for the general purpose house. Modern practices have developed to meet the requirements of the trade and have been quite as much influenced by economic conditions as by the actual requirements of the stock. The whole field of storage, as applied to the nursery business, is a virgin one for the investigator. The necessity for retarding houses requires no argument. Their economic value is demonstrated, but the details of handling various kinds of stock, the benefit or injury to the stock, as well as the effect of fluctuating temperatures and humidities on the vitality of the plants held in storage, are questions which our present knowledge fails to answer.

We're Still Making Long-Distance Shipments, but Cold Weather is Almost Here—Place Orders Now

Not long ago we shipped a lot of Palms to Mexico, and since then another lot to Guatemala. While that's only one out of hundreds of orders we've filled this year—going to every corner of the country—still it shows the wide territory to which our Palms are adapted, and our splendid facilities for taking care of orders, whether for one Palm or for many, to go one mile or thousands.

If you get in a good little stock of first-class Palms right away, you can sell a number of them profitably during the next few weeks. A lot of folks would like to have them for winter decoration, and will buy if you give them the chance—but you must order quickly or it will be too late to ship with safety.

Busy as our season has been, we still have a good stock and can fill your wants promptly. The Palms you'll get if you send to us will be of the same high order we always supply—grown from the seed in our own houses, by experts, and possessing a distinctive quality that you can build a paying business and a solid reputation on.

Here are our prices. Write to-day; we'll ship promptly.

The Market.

Business is good. The calamity howlers who have been predicting panics, hard times, etc., for this western country, have not been able to collect a large enough following to seriously affect trade conditions so far. The demand for flowers seems to be picking up in a satisfactory manner, showing a nice increase over last year. Transient trade is improving, while an occasional wedding helps out. There is a steady demand for funeral work, both local and out-of-town, and the season for parties and luncheons is beginning to open.

Local roses are hardly up to expectations, but chrysanthemums are of splendid quality and quantity. Carnations are increasing in number, and in spite of their hard time in the latter part of the summer, flowers are better than for several years at this season. There is a slight shortage in good lily of the valley. A few short-stemmed violets are showing up, and serve to trim an occasional design, and to create a demand which cannot be supplied. The early mum plants are coming into flower rapidly, and are finding a ready sale.

Various Notes.

The city has combed the confetti out of its hair, and is recovering from the Peerless Prophet's jubilee. This event brought many visitors into the city, who did some little shopping between celebrations. Chas. P. Mueller was the only florist to enter the civic parade. His first float carried a miniature greenhouse, containing blooming plants. Following this came another, decorated for a wedding, with altar and kneeling cushion. The third wagon was a top delivery wagon, decorated with carnival colors and yellow mums. He received first prize for novel features.

The Bixby Greenhouses have added two connected houses, each 34x72, which will be devoted to lettuce. Mr. Bixby will also experiment with a crop of mushrooms under one of the benches in his plant house.

Mr. Bidleman is starting the construction of a house, 28x105. The building will have 7-foot gutters, and will extend east from his present boiler shed, across the ends of the remainder of the range.

C. A. Rose has added a stock of goldfish and accessories. He reports a satisfactory demand for them.

The killing frost landed on its average date this year, October 19. It was in the middle of jubilee week, and some of the visitors without wraps experienced a cool reception. The weather warmed up for a few days, and was then followed by a more determined freeze, which sent the temperature down to 22 degrees.

W. H. Culp & Co. have finished two benches of early mums and are benching pot-grown carnations in their place.

Christmas sweet peas are showing up well at several places. Chas. P. Mueller is growing his on in pots until one of his houses, now devoted to chrysanthemums, can be cleared for them.

R. C.

Hampton, Ia.—The Curtis Floral Co. has added to the greenhouse equipment a large storage room, with a basement.

DREER'S HARDY PERENNIAL PHLOXES

We are the largest growers of Perennial Phlox in the world, having this season over a half million field-grown plants in stock. The collection offered below embraces every known color in this gorgeous race of summer-flowering plants, and we are prepared to furnish many of the later as well as the older standard varieties in large quantities at a low uniform price. The plants we offer are all strong one-year-old field-grown, and will make a fine display of flowers next season.

Albion (Medium). One of our own introductions; producing very large panicles of pure white flowers with a faint aniline-red eye.

Aglae Adanson (Medium). Immense flowers, snow-white with red eye.

Antonin Mercie (Medium). Light ground color, upper half of petal deeply suffused bluish lilac; large, white halo.

Bacchante (Tall). Tyrian rose, with crimson carmine eye.

Beranger (Dwarf). Ground color white, delicately suffused with rosy pink, distinct amaranth red eye.

Bridesmaid (Tall). White, with large crimson-carmine centre.

Belle Alliance (Medium). White, with large pure red eye.

Charles Sellier (Dwarf). Bright reddish violet, with large white star-shaped centre.

Clara Benz (Dwarf). Lovely carmine-rose, with darker eye.

Colibri (Tall). White, with crimson carmine centre; very late.

Consul H. Trost (Medium). Pure red, with bright French purple eye.

Champs Elysee (Dwarf). A very bright rosy magenta of an effective shade.

Coquelicot (Dwarf). A fine pure scarlet, with crimson-red eye.

Caran d'Ache (Medium). Geranium-red with old rose shadings and white eye; very effective.

Do Miribel (Medium). White, suffused with bright rosy scarlet, red eye.

Diadem (Dwarf). A fine dwarf pure white.

Danton (Medium). Scarlet, with pure red eye.

Etna (Medium). Crimson red, suffused with fiery red; cherry-red eye.

Eugene Danzanvillier (Tall). Lilac, shading white towards the edges; large white centre.

Edmond Boissier (Dwarf). Bright reddish-violet, with large white halo.

Eclairer (Tall). Brilliant rosy magenta, with large lighter halo; an excellent variety.

Frau Dora Umgeller (Tall). Crimson red; a strong free-flowering late variety.

Gruppenkonigin (Tall). Delicate pale rose mauve, with claret-red eye.

George A. Stroblein (Medium). Bright scarlet, with crimson-red eye; does not bleach.

General Giovaninelli (Dwarf). Bright Tyrian rose, with light shadings at the base of each petal; a pure red eye; very effective.

General Van Hentz (Medium). Scarlet, with rose shadings and crimson-red eye.

Hermine (Dwarf). The dwarfest variety in our collection, never exceeding ten inches in height; pure white flowers of good size; early; unequalled for bordering; a perfect little gem.

PRICE: Any of the above General Collection, $5.00 per 100; $40.00 per 1000.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The forepart of last week with mild weather again found the supply ahead of the demand, but this came to an abrupt end, for the frost of October 28 and 29 finished all outdoor stock, and it is from that on that the flower-loving folks will look to the florists for their supply. It undoubtedly is the opening for the season.

Various Notes.

Quite a disastrous fire in the two buildings east of Hunkel's Seed Store, at 327 Chestnut street, October 29, threatened to play havoc with that firm. Fortunately, all stock in the cellar, which was filled with several feet of water, was fully covered by insurance.

The Edlefsen-Leidiger Co. reports quite a run on funeral work last week.

James M. Fox & Son again have quite a tasteful window display.

Aug. F. Kellner spent October 29 and 30 gathering material for the great Milwaukee flower show at Okauchee lake.

The Mueller & Schroeder Co.'s carnations are especially good and uniform for this season.

The following were visitors: Wm. Desmond, with the L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis; Frank Johnson, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; Martin Reukauf, with Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. E. O.

I. G. Stahl, formerly of the Forest Home cemetery, has moved to Chicago and is putting up three greenhouses and a store building, which will be nicely fitted up for retail trade, at Ninety-first street and Colfax avenue.

Brighton, Wash.—Risdon & Son have just added another to their range of five greenhouses.

GERANIUMS

We have an immense stock ready for shipment—250,000 in 3-in. pots, in good standard sorts, at $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000; 200,000 in 2-in. pots, at $2.00 per 100, $18.50 per 1000.

Our New Descriptive Catalogue will be ready about December 1 and will be the most complete ever issued. Price list is now ready for all who ask for it.

COLEUS

BRILLIANCY—This variety belongs to the giant-leaved section; vigorous habit, growing from 2 to 3 feet high, with leaves often 9 to 10 inches long, which are of a bright carmine, shading off to a deep maroon, the margins being yellow and green, the whole leaf having a velvety luster.

CAN HANDLE LARGEST ORDER ON SHORT NOTICE.

Azalea Indica. Owing to the cold and wet weather this summer in Belgium and the large demand for azaleas all over the world this year, Azalea Indica is very scarce and high in price, but in spite of all these facts I want every florist to know that I have just returned from Europe with a large cargo of Azalea Indica, the finest stock in Ghent. My grower on the other side has done justice to me this year, again reserving for me the cream of his 200-acre azalea field, giving me my own pick.

Now is the time to force Azalea Indica for Christmas. What varieties will you force? Surely the ones, the early varieties, that I know I can get in time for Xmas. There is Deutsche Perle, one of the best early double whites. We have plants full of buds, at 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Simon Mardner, you know this variety well. It is an early, deep, double pink variety, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Vervaeana, one of the old standard, well-favored, large, double, variegated varieties, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. How about Apollo? This is a deep, single red variety, always full of buds, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Didn't you ever hear of that earliest of all varieties, Mme. Petrick? This is a variety hard to beat, pink, double flowers, full of buds and never fails to bloom. A child can bring this variety into bloom for Christmas. It is very scarce and high in price this fall in Belgium. You must have a few of them anyhow, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50.

All plants 25 at 100 rate. Cash with order, please. All plants must travel at risk of purchaser only.

to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 50c, 60c, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! Small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

Dracaena Bruanti, 25 to 30 inches high, perfect green foliage from bottom up, 6-in. pots, 40c to 50c.

Latania Borbonica, 30 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 6-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 12, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50; 4-in., 30c.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

Sago Palms, ready now, 6, 7 to 8-in. pots, 9 to 13 leaves, 10c per leaf.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 15c, 18c and 20c.

Cocos Weddelliana, combination plants, 3 plants in a pot, 5 to 5½-in. pots, 50c.

Rubber Plants, 6-in., 35c and 40c to 50c.

Pteris Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, nice and bushy, 25c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 2½-in., 3c; 3-in., 5c; 4-in., 10c.

Our Ferns are very fine this year and I can give very good value to make room for my large importation of Azaleas. Boston, Scottii, Whitmani and Scholzei, 5½ and 6-in. pots, 35c, 40c and 50c; 7-in., large, bushy plants, 75c to $1.00. Special to close out—Scottii and Whitmani, 4-in., 15c; fine to grow on. Our ferns are all pot grown—not lifted from benches.

Ferns for dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100; 3-in., $5.00 per 100.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Begonia Erfordii, newest improved strain. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom, 20c.

Solanum or Jerusalem Cherries, our well-known prize strain, the multiflorum, 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c.

Cineraria Hybrida, Aschmann's well-known strain, 2-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Primula obconica, our best strain, 4-in., 10c; 5-in., 15c, in bloom.

Primula Chinensis, best strain, 4-in., 10c.

Cyclamen, 4 best colors, 4-in. pots, 15c.

Shasta Daisies, pure white, 2½-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

PANSIES.OUR SPECIALTY.

Giant pansies, the finest sorts and the finest plants the market affords. Strong, field-grown with care. Our own specials are as fine a collection as can be found, including nearly all colors and rich in red shades. Our cut flower collection contains pure white, golden yellow and purple, light blue, red and wine shades and other light colors. This collection we especially recommend for cut flower planting. We also grow the following in separate strains and varieties. Giant Orchid Flowered, a splendid and quite distinct sort; Bugnot, superb blotched; Mme. Perret, giant flowered, rich red and wine shades; Emperor William, ultramarine blue; Fairy Queen, light blue with white border; Fire King, golden yellow and purple; Masterpiece, curled, wavy petals, splendid; Peacock, large peacock blue; Snow Queen (candidissima), pure white. Let us add your name to our list of satisfied customers. Here is what one of our customers said Oct. 17: "Rec'd the plants in fine shape. A fine lot—much pleased. C. E. Young, Poughkeepsie, N. Y." We have lots of testimonials and second orders which also shows that our packing is appreciated. Here is our way of doing business—if you are not entirely satisfied, your money refunded. Our prices are as low as can be made. Your own selection of any of the above, $3.00 per 1000; 2000 for $5.00. Our selection of all the above kinds, mixed, $2.50 per 1000; 2000 for $4.50; 5000 for $10.00. Always mention what express company to use.
E. Rawlings, Wholesale Grower, Olean, N. Y.

Seventeen years' exclusive cultivation of pansies. Seventeen years of evolution in pansies. Seventeen years, one ambition to make Steele's Mastodon pansies the largest and finest on earth. Eden Nurseries, Port Allegany, Pa.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the best market strain of giant show and fancy pansies; largest, most perfect in form with greatest variety of rich and rare colors and markings, a large proportion of reds. I have made a specialty of growing pansy seeds and plants nearly 40 years, and this strain is of most careful breeding and selection. It also contains all the new varieties introduced by foreign specialists during all these years. Samples of many reports—"If your pansies are as good in colors and size this year as they were last, I will need double the amount next year." G. H. T., Detroit, Mich. "The pansy plants obtained from you last year were quite satisfactory." Book our order for 50,000 and deliver in October." W. S. M., Supt. of Parks, Baltimore, Md. Over 60 varieties in mixed or separate colors, fine, stocky, field-grown plants, from my best selected seed, sown thinly in sandy soil broadcast, and extra well rooted, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $26.00. Cash. Special prices on lots of 25,000 or more.

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

Tomato Culture.

By W. W. TRACY, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture. The book deals with every phase of tomato culture and was written for the man who wants the latest and most complete information on the subject. Cloth. 150 pages. Illustrated. 50 cents Ornamental Gardening for Americans.

By ELIAS A. LONG, landscape architect. A treatise on beautifying homes, rural districts and cemeteries. A plain and practical work, with numerous illustrations and instructions so plain that they may be readily followed. Illustrated. Cloth. 390 pages. $1.50

Practical Floriculture.

By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WM. SCOTT. A practical guide for the florist, covering the successful management of all the usual florists' plants; including many topics, such as greenhouse building, heating and floral decorating, etc. Written so you can understand it and profit by its guidance. Fully illustrated. $5.00

The Forcing Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. In this work the author has compiled in handy form the cream of all the available information on the subject of forcing vegetables under glass. In addition to this, the experience of many practical growers in different localities is furnished. $1.25

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

WATER UNDER PRESSURE.

I have a hot water plant with an open expansion tank. Having added a new house this summer, the tank does not seem to supply pressure enough. As it would be rather difficult to raise it higher, I thought to connect with the city water mains. The question is, can I run the city water direct to the boiler and do away with the tank, or must I get a covered tank and run the water in that? Also, would such an arrangement have any effect on the water meter, which is about 100 feet from the boiler? L. G. B.

The question does not indicate just why the plan of elevating the expansion tank or of connecting with the city mains, and thus securing circulation under pressure, has been considered. The adoption of either method, however, will make it possible to increase the temperature of the water in the pipes, and this will both hasten the circulation and increase the efficiency of the plant. This, however, will only be possible, provided there is reserve capacity in the heater, and by the expenditure of considerably more fuel.

Pressure can be secured either by use of a closed tank or by connecting with the water mains. The latter is the simplest, but it has the objections of danger from drawing off the water in case of a break in the water system, and of a possible explosion if the connection is closed. At any rate, a safety valve should be used.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

We have an eighty horse-power, high-pressure boiler, containing fifty-two flues and returns, and desire to heat the following houses: House No. 1, for vegetables, is 86x109 feet, seven feet to the gutters, twelve feet to the ridge, and contains 15,000 square feet of glass. Both ends are glass, the north wall has three feet of glass and the south wall is all glass. There are no partitions. House No. 2, for carnations, is 60x80, seven feet to the gutters and fourteen feet to the ridge. The west end is all glass. The north wall is solid, and is seven feet high; the south wall is solid and is three feet high. The east end is protected by house No. 6. House No. 3, for mums, is 60x80, seven feet to the gutters and fourteen feet to the ridge. The west end is glass. House No. 4 is 10x86, three feet to the gutter and ten feet to the ridge, with glass gables. House No. 5 is 14x86, three feet to the gutter and twelve feet to the ridge. Houses No. 2 to No. 5 are all connected. House No. 6, which is 20x128, runs along the east ends of houses No. 2 to No. 5. The east side has three feet of solid wall and three feet of glass. The office is at the south end of this house, while the north end is a solid wall. All told, the houses contain 75,000 square feet of glass.

What we wish to know is whether our boiler is large enough to heat the houses if they are properly piped. We expect to run a 5-inch main from the boiler through house No. 1 to house No. 6. House No. 1 will be piped with 2-inch flows and returns. The other houses are piped as follows: House No. 2, eight 2-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns; No. 3, six 2-inch flows and six 2-inch returns; No. 4, one 2-inch flow and five 1 1/4-inch returns; No. 5, one 2-inch flow and six 1 1/4-inch returns; No. 6, four 2-inch flows and twelve 1 1/4-inch returns. In this part of Nebraska our coldest weather is 10 degrees below zero. The highest temperature we want in the houses is about 60 degrees. G. E. B.

The question merely asks whether it will be possible to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees with an eighty horse-power boiler with 75,000 square feet of glass, when the temperature outside is 10 degrees below zero. This can be answered in the negative, as for the purpose mentioned the boiler should have a rating of at least 125 horse-power, and it would be better if it were 150 horse-power.

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

the data given seems to show that the houses described do not have more than 50,000 square feet of radiating surface, and as the piping in several is not sufficient for a temperature higher than 50 degrees, it is likely that the boiler mentioned would answer the purpose.

TOLEDO, O.

The Market.

Florists, no doubt, are often reminded of the old saying, "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good," and, although we hesitate in saying so, yet we must admit that the number of deaths in the last week or two have made business pretty lively.

Visiting the Growers.

On Sunday, October 23, the following members of the Toledo Florists' Club went out calling: Mr. Schiller, Otto and Will Krueger, John Barrow, John Gratopp, A. Suder, Frank Wertz, the secretary of the club, and Mr. Keller; also Mr. and Mrs. Peck and their daughter.

First they called on George Bayer, and found his houses in splendid shape. He has 75,000 chrysanthemums planted, 40,000 of which are Bonnaffons, in all stages of growth, to be cut from now until Thanksgiving day.

From there they went to visit Harry Heintz, and found him to be not only a good grower, but also a good builder.

Next, to Mrs. E. Suder's, and all admired her fine new houses.

They also called on John Gratopp, who has a fine lot of lettuce and sweet peas.

Thence to John Kaminski, who was extremely busy at the time with funeral work, but managed to find time to show them his fine line of general stock.

Various Notes.

Krueger Bros. are now cutting a fine lot of lilies and also some extra fine White Killarney.

Spanner's had a novel Hallowe'en display. In one window there was a table decoration of a cabbage, decorated with autumn leaves and gaillardias, and in the other window a large pumpkin, used as a jardiniere and filled with big yellow mums.

Mr. Hall, of Reed & Keller, New York, called here last week with his line of florists' supplies. S. Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, was also in the city last week. B. P. S.

NEWBURGH, N. Y.

Caldwell & Jespersion said October 30: "We are now cutting some fine Paper White narcissi; a sash house 10x150 feet is planted with them. When they are done flowering the house will be filled with the single daffodil, Golden Spur, which flower we have the reputation to grow to perfection; they realized some fancy prices last season. The carnations, all of the Enchantress type and Beacon for red, are in tip-top shape. The other stock is also in fine condition. Our cut is shipped to P. J. Smith, New York. The new store recently completed is a great success. It is of stucco construction, 25x50 feet, with a conservatory of the same dimensions."

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The cooler weather last week caused a slight increase in the demand for chrysanthemums and it was also reflected in the better condition of the blooms that were brought in during the latter part of the week. Whites are plentiful, but good yellows and pinks are not so plentiful. A few days, however, will adjust matters, as several of the larger growers are now bringing in their first cuttings. Prices range normal and there is a growing demand for small pots of mums.

Various Notes.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was on the sick list part of last week.

Willis S. Pino has just registered a Cadillac thirty-two horse-power run-about automobile with the State Board of Public Roads.

William Chappell had extensive decorations at the Narragansett hotel on Thursday evening, in which Richmond roses and smilax predominated.

C. Ford was a visitor in this city last week, for A. Herrmann, of New York. He was taking orders for the new pink carnation, Princess Charming.

Lawrence Hay is cutting all the single chrysanthemums that he can handle. They find ready sale here.

Mr. Cushing, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, at Quidnick, is cutting extra fine mums and was in the city October 26 arranging for the handling of them.

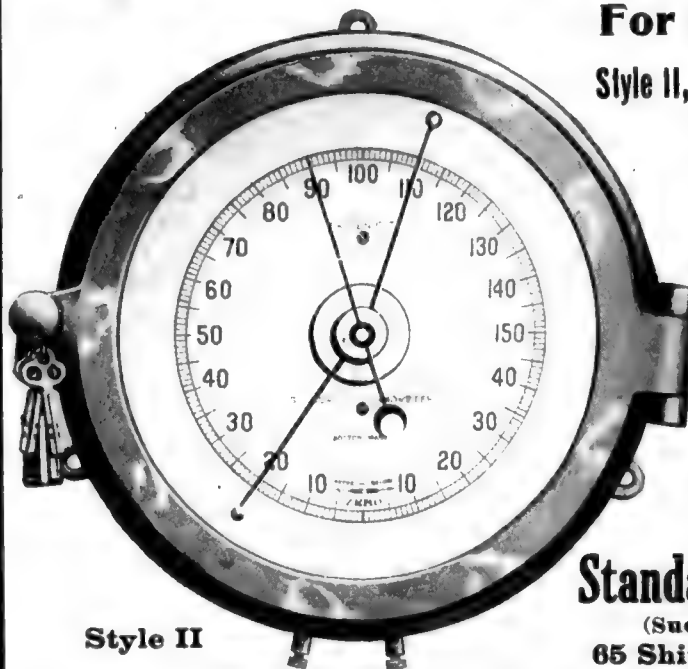

Cobb & Co., 87 Summer street, Woonsocket, is placing large orders for spring bulbs.

MOREHEAD STEAM TRAPS

- ☐ The installation of a Morehead Return Steam Trap in a Greenhouse is absolute evidence of progressiveness on the part of the florist.
- ☐ It is further evidence of good management, for the "Morehead" is an investment in both satisfaction and economy.
- ☐ The majority of florists are using Morehead Traps. If you are one of the exceptions, it will be to your interest to write us—we will make you a liberal trial offer proposition.
- ☐ By way of getting acquainted, just send your name and address and ask for "Trap Book."

IRRIGATION.

The Skinner Irrigation Co., Troy, O., requests the publication of the following under the too lengthy heading, "Write Your Congressman About Irrigation":

"The problems of irrigation are beginning to be appreciated by the average grower. The greater his knowledge of them the more he realizes the necessity for specific and tangible information relative to the correct amounts, the proper methods, and the right periods for the application of water.

"Within the limits of the appropriation allowed, the Bureau of Irrigation Investigations of the Department of Agriculture has done faithful and efficient work along these lines. The time for annual appropriations is now at hand, and it is our belief that no money spent by the government will yield better returns to the growers than money appropriated for work along irrigation lines. During recent years a considerable share of the money appropriated has been applied in ways of benefit to the truck and fruit grower.

"Our suggestion would be that each grower who is interested in these problems, communicate with his senator and representative, urging on him the importance of a liberal appropriation in order that the Bureau of Irrigation Investigations may have opportunity to work out these questions along lines which are commensurate with the possible opportunities and benefits. A concerted effort on the part of the growers will lead to a liberal appropriation from which they cannot fail to secure large benefits."

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

The general complaint among the florists at the present time is that the weather is too warm to bring in much business, outside of the demand for funeral orders. It seems to be human nature to complain about something, and it hardly seems fair to complain about the weather, for it has been ideal in many respects. In one way, it is too warm to bring much business; in another way, it means a great saving in the coal bill, while it also brings on a large supply of stock when the demand is comparatively small.

Last week the weather was the coldest it has been this fall; consequently we have had several killing frosts, which have put an end to outdoor stock. The frosts, however, did not come soon enough to do away with outdoor flowers before the demand for All Saints' day began, for on Saturday, October 29, there were tubs of outdoor chrysanthemums flooding the market and being sold for a mere nothing, and this helped to knock the trade for the florists. However, taking all things into consideration, business was much better than expected. The demand seemed to run on chrysanthemums, generally; the small white varieties sold remarkably well.

The bright weather is bringing chrysanthemums into crop all at once, so it is thought that the mum season will not last as long this year as in previous years. The rose and carnation supply is quite heavy, but they have to take a back seat on account of chrysanthemums, but then, their day is coming.

Various Notes.

Mrs. B. Hendrichs reports that business in her section of the city was every bit as good as last year, and she is well satisfied with results.

In H. H. Ritter's section of this city, trade for All Saints' day did not come up to that of last year; however, he reports that he sold out on small white chrysanthemums and expected the demand for Hallowe'en would take all of his supply of yellow mums.

Miss Ruby Bartholomew visited friends at Fairfield, O., October 30.

Mrs. Young reports that while she could have accommodated more business last week, still she is satisfied with what came her way.

We had snow flurries here last week.

An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking. "Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

The tone of the market was much improved last week, principally owing to the shortage of outdoor stock. October 27 and 28 there were exceptionally heavy frosts, the ground being whitened as if there were a light fall of snow, and all the stock which remained outdoors was practically killed. The dahlias were the principal sufferers, which was a blessing, as the chrysanthemums are in heavy supply for medium grades, but select stock is scarce. Polly Rose, Pacific Supreme, October Frost, Halliday, Monrovia, Shaw, both pink and white, and President Taft, are to be had in any quantity. Pacific Supreme, which comes in bloom at a time when a good pink is needed, should prove a valuable addition to the early varieties.

Roses are abundant and are not selling so well. The varieties moving the best are Gate, Killarney and My Maryland. Carnations are now reaching the market in large numbers and are not so easily disposed of. Some of the best to be had are Enchantress, Beacon and Dorothy Gordon, which are exceptionally fine. Violets are now of good quality and, although singles predominate, a good many doubles are being grown this year.

Various Notes.

G. A. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, Md., displayed some extra fine seedling mums at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, October 24. Among them was a yellow seedling from Yellow Miller, which was of fine form and color. Some fine President Taft were also shown by him.

The park board is growing about 60,000 pansies to plant in the parks and squares with the bulb beds. Some good mums are to be seen at the park greenhouses.

A new seed house has opened for business at 32 Light street and has a fine window display, composed of bulbs and tools for the garden. The firm's name is Meyer-Stisser Co.

Mrs. Patterson Johnson had one of the finest window displays to be seen anywhere last week. Mrs. Johnson handles only one grade of flowers, and that is the best.

Halliday Bros. have some extra fine poinsettias, which are sure to be winners. They have two houses of them.

Q.

Seabreeze, Fla.—C. B. Poor now has his greenhouses well stocked and his crops make a fine showing.
